INTRODUCTION

I. Argument of the Poem

PART I. BĒOWULF THE YOUNG HERO

(His exploits in Denmark)

1. The Fight with Grendel

gūðhræð gyfepe.* (818 f.)

1-188. Introductory. The building of Heorot by Hrōðgār; the ravages of Grendel. The poem opens with the story of Scyld, the mythical founder of the Scylding dynasty, whose glorious reign and magnificent sea-burial are vividly set forth. — (53-85.) His line of descendants is carried down to king Hrōðgār, who builds the great hall Heorot for feasting and the dispensing of gifts. — (86-188.) Before long a fiendish monster, Grendel, angered by the daily sounds of rejoicing, comes to destroy the happiness of the Danes. One night he surprises them in their hall and kills thirty of the sleeping men. He repeats his murderous attack on the following night. For twelve years he continues his ravages. No one may with safety sleep in the hall. Hrōðgār, the good king, is bowed down by grief, his councilors can devise no help, his warriors are unable to check the visits of the demon.

189-661. Bēowulf's voyage, reception in Denmark, and entertainment in the royal hall. When Bēowulf, the nephew of Hygelāc, king of the Geats, hears of the doings of Grendel, he resolves to come to the assistance of Hrōðgār. An eminently fit man he is for that enterprise, since he has the strength of thirty men in his hand-grip. With fourteen chosen warriors he sails to the land of the Danes. On their arrival they are challenged by the coast-guard; but when the leader makes known their peaceful purpose, they are readily shown the way to Heorot. Bēowulf announces his name to the king's herald, Wulfgār, who in turn tells his lord. Hrōðgār bids that they be welcomed; Wulfgār bears the message. The Geats enter the royal hall. Bēowulf greets Hrōðgār and offers to cleanse Heorot. The king replies graciously and invites the Geats to the feast. — (499-661.) Incidents at the banquet. A dispute started by the Danish courtier, Unferð, gives Bēowulf an opportunity to narrate the true story of his daring swimming adventure with Breca and to predict his victory in the coming contest. In response to the courteous greeting of queen Wealhþēow he avows his determination to conquer or to die.

662-709. The watch for Grendel. At nightfall the Danes retire ; Bēowulf with his men remains in charge of the hall. All the Geats fall asleep save Bēowulf. He watches for the demon. — 710-836. The fight. Grendel sets out from the moor, approaches the hall, swings the door open, and quickly seizes and devours one of the Geats, Hondsciōh, but on seizing Bēowulf finds himself in the power of the hero's mighty grip. Long and bitter is the wrestling between the two ; the hall rings with the sound of their fighting and seems on the point of tumbling down. Grendel gives forth a terrible howl of pain. Bēowulf by sheer strength tears off Grendel's arm. The demon escapes to his joyless abode, mortally wounded.

837-924. Rejoicing of the retainers. In the morning many of the warriors follow the tracks of Grendel and ride to see the blood-stained pool into which he had plunged. As they return, a court singer recites lays about Sigemund and Heremōd. — 925-990. The king's blessing. Hrōðgār, who has proceeded to the hall, views the arm and claw of Grendel (hung up as a trophy) and utters a speech in praise of the hero's deed, to which Bēowulf makes appropriate reply. — 991-1250. Royal entertainment. A feast is prepared in the hall. Rich presents are bestowed on Bēowulf and his band ; the scop relates the Finnsburg tale ; Wealhþēow, taking part in the entertainment, presents Bēowulf with costly gifts and bespeaks his kindness for her sons. After the banquet Hrōðgār as well as the Geats leave the hall, which is once more placed in guard of the Danish warriors.

2. The Fight with Grendel's Mother

Ofslōh dā æt þære sæcce . . . huses hyrdas. (1665 f.)

1251-1320. Attack by Grendel's mother. That night Grendel's mother makes her way into the hall to avenge her son ; she carries off Æschere, a favorite thane of Hrōðgār, and, taking Grendel's arm with her, escapes to the fenland. In the morning Bēowulf is sent for by the king.

1321-1398. Conversation between Hrōðgār and Bēowulf. Hrōðgār bewails the loss of Æschere, describes graphically the weird haunt of the demons, and appeals to the Geat for help. Bēowulf, like a true hero, is ready to meet the monster at once.

1399-1491. The expedition to Grendel's mere. With a troop of Danes and Geats the king and the hero proceed to the lake. Bēowulf arms himself and addresses a few parting words to Hrōðgār. — 1492-1590. The fight. He plunges into the water, at length reaches the bottom, and is carried by the troll-wife into her cavern. There they have a desperate struggle. The creature has him all but in her power, when he finds a curious giant-sword, with which he puts her to death. With it he also cuts off the head of the dead Grendel. — 1591-1650. The sequel of the fight and the triumphal return to Heorot. In the meanwhile many of those on the shore having surmised Bēowulf's death from the discoloring of the water, the Danes depart to their hall. Bēowulf's faithful followers wait for him, until swimming upwards he comes to the surface, carrying with him Grendel's head and the golden hilt of the wondrous sword, whose blade has melted in the poisonous blood. They march with their trophies back to Heorot.

1651-1784. Speeches by Bēowulf and Hrōðgār. Bēowulf recounts his thrilling experience and assures the king of the completeness of the delivery. Hrōðgār replies by a lengthy moralizing discourse. — 1785-1887. The parting. After the feast Bēowulf enjoys a much needed rest. In the morning friendly farewell speeches are exchanged, whereupon the Geats start for the shore.

3. Bēowulf's Home-Coming and Report to Hygelāc

Hū lomp ēow on lāde, lēofa Bīowulf . . . ? (1987.)

1888-1962. Homeward voyage. The fourteen warriors embark and in due time reach the land of the Geats. The mention of queen Hygd leads the poet to intersperse the legend of the haughty and cruel Þryð.

1963-2151. Bēowulf's narrative. Arrived at Hygelāc's court, Bēowulf relates his adventures and weaves in the account of events which are bound to happen in connection with the engagement of Frēawaru to Ingeld.

PART II. BĒOWULF'S DEATH

(The Fight with the Dragon)

*Scolde lændaga
worulde līfes, ond se wyrm somod.* (2341 ff.)

2200-2323. The robbing of the hoard and the ravages of the dragon. After the death of Hygelāc and of his son Heardrēd, Bēowulf has ruled over the Geats for fifty years. Then it happens that the rich hoard (the early history of which is narrated in part) of a dragon is robbed by a fugitive slave, and the enraged monster in revenge lays waste the country by his fire.

2324-2537. Preparation for the fight. The veteran warrior-king, still young in spirit, resolves to meet the enemy single-handed. He has a strong iron shield made for this purpose and, accompanied by eleven men, sets out for the cave of the dragon. — (2417-2537.) Filled with forebodings of his end, he in a long speech reviews the days of his youth, especially the events at the Geat court and the feud with the Swedes, and bids farewell to his comrades.

3137-3182. The funeral of Bēowulf. A funeral pyre is built. The hero is placed upon it and given over to the flames amid the lamentations of his people. Then they erect over the remains a royal mound in which they hide the dearly bought dragon's hoard. Twelve noble warriors ride round the barrow, lamenting their lord and praising his deeds and kingly virtues.

The subject-matter of Beowulf comprises in the first place, as the main plot, three fabulous exploits redolent of folk-tale fancy (the first two forming a closely connected series)² and secondly, a number of

² Outside the main action also, various supernatural elements are found, such as Sigemund's dragon fight (see note on 875-900), Scyld's mysterious arrival (see note on 4-52), the notion of eotenas, entas, etc. (883, 2717, 2774, 112, etc., cf. Angl. xxxvi 169f.). Special mention should be made of the motive of apparently historical elements which are introduced as a setting to the former and by way of more or less irrelevant digressions.

Bēowulf's wonderful adventures with the Grendel race have called to mind folk-tales in various languages.² A systematic study of this aspect of the epic material has been undertaken by Panzer, who recognizes in the Beowulf story a version (raised to heroic proportions) of the time-honored, widespread 'Bear's Son Tale.'³ The substance of this tale as extracted from over two hundred (European and other) variants is as follows.

(Introduction : ⁴) A demon appears at night in a house which has been built by an aged king. The elder sons of the king are unable to cope with the intruder, but the youngest one successfully gets hold of him. The demon is wounded but manages to get away. A bloody trail shows the way to his abode. — (Central part :) The hero fights in a strange place, which in a great many instances is under the earth, against one or two demons (often a male and a female one). By this successful exploit he frees several maidens, who are then safely restored to the upper world. But he is himself betrayed by his faithless companions and must remain in the realm of monsters, until he finds means of escape. [The conclusion tells of the punishment of the traitors and the marriage of one of the maidens to her deliverer.]

Panzer thought he could show the ultimate derivation of numerous elements of the Beowulf narrative from the introductory and central parts of the Bear's Son Tale.⁵ Thus, the building of the gold-decked royal invulnerability (in encountering ordinary weapons, 804 f., 1522 ff.). Neither mythology nor history is to be appealed to in the case of the Breca episode (see note on 499 ff.).

⁵ See his detailed comparison, pp. 254 ff. It should not fail to be noted that the hall, the nightly depredations of the giant demon; the watch against the monster; the character of the hero, who in his boyhood is looked down upon as sluggish and good for nothing, but gives an early proof of his extraordinary strength; the manner of the (first) fight, the enemy's loss of a limb, its exhibition and inspection; the mother of the monster, the fight in the cave under the water, the part played by the magic sword, the departure of the companions,¹ etc.

While these similarities are after all remote and generally vague, a genetic relation of some kind must clearly be admitted between the Beowulf and certain Scandinavian stories attached to Grettir and Ormr respectively.

The Grettissaga (dating from about 1300) is concerned with a historical personage, a headstrong, adventurous outlaw, who died in the year 1031, but it includes obvious fabulous elements derived, according to Panzer, from folk-tales of the 'Bear's Son' and the 'Doughty Hans'² type. Chapters 64-66³ relate two successive exploits of the Icelandic hero — 'the strongest man in the land of his age,' ch. 93 — which in several respects form the nearest parallel to the fight with Grendel and Grendel's mother.

At Yule-tide, so the story runs, the young wife Steinvör at Sandhills (at Sandhaugum, í Bárðardal) had gone to worship at Eyjardalsá and left her husband at home. In the night the men heard a huge crashing in the house; and in the morning it was found that the husband had disappeared, and no one knew what had become of him. The next year the same thing happened to a house-carle. Grettir the Strong heard the tale, and at Yule-eve he betook himself to the haunted place. He asked permission to stay there and called himself Gestr. The goodwife wished to go to church again, but thought it impossible to cross the river. It thawed fast abroad, and the river was in flood, and therein was the drift of ice great. But Grettir went with Steinvör and her little daughter and carried them both with one arm through the raging river, while with the other he pushed back the ice-floe.⁴ He then returned to Sandhills and lay down at night, but did not take off his clothes.

parallels are gathered from widely scattered and varying versions (most of them modern), no single specimen or group answering precisely to the type represented by the Beowulf.

¹ That is, the Danes only, 1600 ff. They are supposed to represent the faithless companions of the tale.

Towards midnight Grettir heard great din without, and thereafter into the hall came a huge troll-wife, with a trough¹ in one hand and a chopper wondrous great in the other; she peered about when she came in, and saw where 'Gestr' lay, and ran at him; but he sprang up to meet her, and they fell a-wrestling terribly, and struggled together for long in the hall. She was the stronger, but he gave back with craft, and all that was before them was broken, yea, the cross-paneling withal of the chamber. She dragged him out through the door and labored away with him down towards the river, and right down to the deep gulfs. All night they wrestled furiously; never, he deemed, had he fought with such a monster; she held him to her so hard that he might turn his arms to no account save to keep fast hold on the middle of the witch. But now when they had come to the gulf of the river, he gives the hag a swing round, and therewith got his right hand free, and swiftly seized the short-sword (sax) that he was girt withal, and smote the troll therewith on the shoulder, and struck off her arm; and therewithal was he free, but she fell into the gulf and was carried down the 'force.'

After Yule-tide Grettir went with the Eyjardalsá priest (who doubted his tale and would not believe that the two men who had vanished had gone into the gulf) to the scene of his victory. When they came to the force-side, they saw a cave up under the cliff; a sheer rock that cliff was, so great that in no place might man come up thereby, and well-nigh fifty fathoms was it down to the water. Grettir bade the priest watch the upper end of a rope, which he let sink down into the water; then he leapt off the cliff into the gulf. He dived under the force, and hard work it was, because the whirlpool was strong, and he had to dive down to the bottom, before he might come up under the force. But thereby was a rock jutting out, and thereon he gat; a great cave was under the force, and the river fell over it from the sheer rocks. He went up into the cave, and there was a great fire flaming from amidst brands; and there he saw a giant (jötunn) sitting, marvelously great and dreadful to look on. But when Grettir came anigh, the giant leapt up and caught up a glaive and smote at the newcomer, for with that glaive might a man both cut and thrust; a wooden shaft it had, and that fashion of weapon men called then, heft-sax (hefti-sax). Grettir hewed back against him with his short-sword (sax), and smote the shaft so that he struck it asunder; then was the giant fain to stretch aback for a sword that hung up there in the cave; but therewithal Grettir smote him afore into the breast, and smote off well-nigh all the breast bone and the belly, so that the bowels tumbled out of him and fell into the river, and were driven down along the stream; and as the priest sat by the rope, he saw strength, cf. the Bear's Son parallels, Panzer 34 ff. — can be regarded as an analogue of the Breca adventure (Brandl 994). Grettir's superiority as an endurance swimmer is mentioned in ch. 58.

certain fibers all covered with blood swept down the swirls of the stream; then he grew unsteady in his place, and thought for sure that Grettir was dead, so he ran from the holding of the rope¹ (which had been fastened to a peg), and returned home. — In the meantime Grettir went up the cave; he kindled a light and examined the place. The story does not tell how much he got therein, but men deem that it must have been something great. He also found the bones of the two men and put them in a bag. Then he made off from the cave and swam to the rope and shook it, and thought that the priest would be there yet; but when he knew that the priest had gone home, then must he draw himself up by strength of hand, and thus he came up out on to the cliff. Then he fared back to Eyjardalsá, and brought into the church porch the bag with the bones, and therewith a rune-staff with verses cut on it. (The last verses: 'For from its mighty shaft of tree The heft-sax [hefti-sax] smote I speedily; And dulled the flashing war-flame [gunn-logi] fair In the black breast that met me there.')

(Chap. 67.) Grettir was thought to have done great deeds for the cleansing of the land (mikla landbreinsun).

Like Grettir, Ormr the Strong is known to have been a real person, but in the *Orms páttir Stórolfssonar*² remarkable deeds of a fabulous character are ascribed to him.

Orm's sworn brother, Ásbjörn, we are told, sails to the Norwegian island Sandey (Saudey), where a man-eating giant Brúsi and his mother (in the shape of an enormous cat) dwell in a cave.³ (He is slain by Brúsi after a severe struggle.⁴ Twenty of his men are torn to pieces and devoured by the terrible fire-breathing cat.) When Ormr at his home in Iceland gets news of his friend's death, he determines to avenge him and sails to Brúsi's island. He enters the cave and fights first with the mother — the cat, who attacks him with her piercing claws.⁵ He reels back, but when he calls on God and St. Peter for help,⁶ he gets the better of the monster and breaks her back. Thereupon he struggles with Brúsi and overcomes him by sheer strength of arm. After cutting with his sword (sax) the 'blood-eagle' into the dead giant's back, he leaves the cave with two chests of gold and silver.

The same story has been traced in the modern versions of two Faroe and two Swedish ballads.⁷

⁷ An interesting detail of the Faroe ballads, viz. the exclamation in praise

Of less significance, yet worthy of mention, as a parallel to the Grendel fight, is the Glámr episode of the Grettissaga (chaps. 32-35), which tells of how Glámr, a shepherd, who (had been killed by an evil spirit and who afterwards) haunted and made uninhabitable the house and farm of Þórhallr, was slain by Grettir in a mighty contest.

Grettir when told of the hauntings rode to the place (þórhallsstaðir) and in the night awaited Glámr in the hall. When a third part of the night had passed, he heard a great noise without, then one went up upon the house, and afterwards came down and opened the door. Grettir lay quiet; Glámr went up to him and tried to pull him out of the house. They struggled wondrously hard, and seats and benches were broken before them. Glámr wanted to get out. Grettir resisted with all his might and finally succeeded in making his fiendish opponent reel back and fall open-armed out of the house. By drawing his short-sword (sax) and cutting off Glám's head he disposed of the hateful revenant. (But before he could do it, he beheld with terror in the moonlight Glám's horrible face and heard his dying curse, which was to be of disastrous consequences to him.)

The points of contact between the foregoing extracts and the Beowulf are unmistakable and need not be gone over in detail. The Sandhaugar episode in particular gives a strikingly similar description¹ of the monster's cave under a waterfall, and moreover seems to show a verbal agreement in the use of (the nonce word) heptisax, recalling the (equally unique) hæstmæce, Beow. 1457.² The latter analogy, however, is not complete and may be merely accidental, especially as the separate elements of both compounds are well known in their respective languages. In some points, it should be noted, this important and highly instructive version presents an obscuration of the original folk-tale elements;³ viz. in making not the male but the female monster (who, by the way, is not stated explicitly to be the giant's mother) provoke the first fight by attacking the house, the natural rôles of the two demons being thus reversed; in motivating the hero's visit to the cave by mere curiosity; in omitting all mention of the wounded she-demon in the second adventure; and in completely blurring the motive of the wonderful sword which is found hanging in the cave.

Some noteworthy innovations in the Beowulf account — apart from the general transformation incident to the epic setting and atmosphere — (blessing) of the hero's mother after the slaying of the giant, has been connected (by Bugge) with Beow. 942 ff., but the coincidence need not be considered of importance.

are the following. The mother of the slain Grendel leaves her cave, appears in the hall, and avenges her son in heroic fashion, — an evident amplification (including a partial repetition) of the narrative. Again, Grendel, though (mortally wounded by Bēowulf and) found dead in the cave, is as it were slain again (1576 ff.) and definitely disposed of by beheading. In the original form of the story, it appears, the male demon had been merely wounded; when the hero had made his way to the dwelling place of the monsters, he put the wounded enemy to death (and afterwards killed the mother). A number of minor incongruities possibly arising from an imperfect remodeling of old folk-tale motives are pointed out in the Notes, see ll. 135, 703, 736 ff., 839 ff., cf. 1260. The theory that the Anglo-Saxon poet worked up different versions (relating to Grendel and to Grendel's mother respectively) has been repeatedly proposed as a means of accounting for disparities of the narrative; see especially Schneider (L 4.135) and Berendsohn (L 4.141.1.14 ff.).

Different and in a certain respect closer is the relation of Beowulf to the late Hrólfs saga (see Par. § 9, L 10.8). It is true, Bǫðvar's contest with a peculiar fanciful beast (chap. 23) has not nearly so much in common with the Grendel fight as Grettir's adventure in the cave has with Bēowulf's second encounter. Yet only in the Hrólfs saga do we find a story at all comparable to the Grendel part placed in a historical setting comparable to that in the Anglo-Saxon epic and attributed to a person who is possibly after all identical with Bēowulf himself.¹ Manifestly the relation of Bǫðvarr to Hrólfr is not unlike that of Bēowulf to Hrōðgār — both deliver the king from the ravages of a terrible monster, both are his honored champions and friends, Bǫðvarr the son-in-law, Bēowulf the 'adopted son' (946 ff., 1175 f.). Nor should the following parallels be denied consideration. Bǫðvarr goes from Gautland, whose king is his brother, to the Danish court at Hleiðra; Bēowulf goes from the land of the Geats, who are ruled by his uncle Hygelāc, to the court of the Danish king at Heorot. Bǫðvarr makes his entrance at the court in a brusque, self-confident manner and at the feast quarrels with the king's men; Bēowulf introduces himself with a great deal of self-reliance tempered, of course, by courtly decorum (407 ff.), and at the banquet has a dispute with an official of the king (499 ff.); also his scornful retort of ll. 590 ff. is matched by Bǫðvarr's slighting remarks, 68.17 ff. (Par. § 9).

In addition, certain features in the Norse tradition of Bǫðvarr have been instanced as confirming the original identity of the two heroes.¹ The bear nature of Bǫðvarr which must be supposed to be his own by inheritance² and which is implied by his strange behavior in the great Bjarkamál battle (Saxo ii 59 ff., Hrólfs saga, chaps. 32 f.) has been compared to Bēowulf's bearlike wrestling propensities, dwelt upon in his contest with Grendel and with the Frankish warrior Dæghrefn (2501 ff.). Also the fact that Bǫðvarr Bjarki (with other champions of Hrólfr) aids Aðils in his war (Skáldskaparmál, Skjöldungasaga, Bjarkarímur, Par. §§ 5, 8.6, 9.1³) is paralleled, in a measure, by Bēowulf's 'befriending' the Swedish prince Eadgils (2392 ff.).

The perplexing question of the precise relation between Beowulf and the various (late) Scandinavian stories briefly considered here has given rise to manifold earnest and ingenious discussions, and conflicting conclusions have been arrived at. On the whole, it seems safest to attribute the undeniable parallelisms to the use of the same or similar Scandinavian sources both in the Old English and the Old Norse accounts. There existed, we may assume, on the one hand a tale — made over into a local legend⁴ — of the freeing of the Danish court from a strange monster through the prowess of a mighty warrior, and another one — like the former going back to a primitive folk-tale — about a similar adventure expanded to a fight with two monsters¹ and placed in picturesque Scandinavian surroundings. Both kinds of narrative circulated orally in the North. In course of time they were attached to various persons (two of whom are unquestionably historical characters), Bǫðvarr, Grettir, Ormr, Bēowulf respectively. A comparatively early combination of the two sets was perhaps effected in Scandinavia, though it is actually traceable in the Anglo-Saxon epic only. The artistic Beowulf version represents the final result of this formative process.

Attention, however, should be called also to the significant suggestion made from time to time, that the substance of the Grendel part goes back ultimately, if not directly, to Irish models.² Even a definite Irish analogue has been detected,³ viz. Cuchulinn's adventures in the saga of The Feast of Bricriu, though the parallelism noted is certainly not conspicuous.⁴ Again, the motives and the general atmosphere of the second adventure have been alleged to point in the direction of Celtic sources. Indeed, the brilliant picture of the monsters' mysterious haunt (1357 ff.) might well remind us of Celtic fancy.⁵ The notion of the female monster, — Grendel's mother, foreshadowing 'the devil's dam,' has been cited in the same connection.⁶

Other analogies have been mentioned, such as the elegiac tone of certain passages (2247-66, 2435-71),⁷ the mystic element of the Scyld legend (see note on 4-52), the position of the court hyle.⁸ Moreover, in the selection of the peculiar kind of plot (supernatural adventures) and even in the general style and manner of the narrative the influence of Celtic types has been supposed to be visible.⁹ Also the possibility of Celtic elements in the language of Beowulf has been discussed.¹⁰

BĒOWULF'S FIGHT WITH THE DRAGON¹

Dragon fights are events of such ordinary occurrence in medieval literature that it may almost seem otiose to hunt for specific sources of the Beowulfian specimen. But mention has been very properly made of numerous modern parallels of folk legends² — the nearest of which is a Danish one, — and more especially of Frotho's dragon fight³ in Saxo's History (ii 38 f., Par. § 7) as indicating a probable Danish origin of the story. It is true, one of the most sagacious students of Scandinavian legend⁴ has pronounced the similarities between Saxo's account and the Beowulf version entirely irrelevant, imaginary, or commonplace, emphasizing at the same time the fact that the stories taken as a whole are of a totally different order, — Frotho, who wages the fight for the sake of the dragon's treasure and who by this victory first establishes his fame, representing the Sigurðr type,⁵ and, on the other hand, Bēowulf, who undertakes the venture primarily to save his people and, although victorious, loses his life, exemplifying in the main the Þórr type.⁶ Yet it appears quite credible that some such lay as the one which Saxo deliberately turned into Latin verse was known to the Anglo-Saxon poet and perhaps even suggested to him Bēowulf's third great adventure. There is a notable agreement in a number of features which can hardly be accidental, — thus, in the description of the dragon (cp. Beow. 2561, 2569 ff., 2827, 2582 f.; 2304, 2524, 2580); the report of a countryman (cp. 2214 ff., 2280 ff., 2324 ff., 2404 ff.); the use of a specially prepared shield (cp. 2337 ff., 2522 ff.); the hero's desire to engage in the contest without help from others (cp. 2345 ff., 2529 ff.); the manner of the fight itself (cp. e.g., the details: 2699, 2705). It is also evident that far-reaching alterations would be deemed requisite by the poet who fitted this theme into the story of Bēowulf's life. Nothing could be more natural than that the high-minded slayer of the Grendel plained as a Celticism, cf. also E St. xlii 17.) The MS. spellings comes 107, camp 1261 were thought, without sufficient reason, to evidence a Celtic source of information. (Bugge 82; cf. Emerson, Publ. MLAs. xxi 925, 885 n. 3.)

kin should appear again, above all else, in the rôle of a deliverer from distress, a benefactor of men. And when this great deed was added as the crowning event to the record of his long life, what better motivation of his death could have presented itself? The introduction of an associate in the person of Wígláf served to provide not only a welcome helper in the fatal struggle, but an eyewitness and assistant at the king's pathetic death, besides an heir and executor who directs the impressive closing scene of the poem. Of course, if Sarrazin's thesis (see below, pp. xxiii, xlv) be adopted, Wígláf (Viggo, Vöggr) must be considered one of the original figures of the Scandinavian legend.¹

It has been conjectured² that certain instances of an imperfect adaptation of the Danish original can be detected in our text of the Beowulf, viz. the reference to the ēalond 2334 (see note), answering to Saxo's island, and the puzzling line (þone se ær gebēold . . .) æfter hæleða bryre bēwate Scildingas 3005 (see note), which is supposed to show that the dragon fight was originally attributed to the Danish king Bēowulf (I)³ of ll. 18 ff., 53 ff., the predecessor of Healfdene, just as it was attached (Saxo ii 38) to Haldanus' predecessor Frotho. The latter assumption has been endorsed by Berendsohn, who—improving upon the formula 'combination of the Þórr and the Fáfnir (or Sigurðr) type' (Panzer)—suggests that two versions have been fused in the epic (itself), the hero of the first being originally Bēowulf I = Frotho, whilst the second was concerned with an aged king who fights a fiery dragon in order to save his people. It is one of a number of possibilities.

In some respects the other dragon fight told in the Beowulf, that of Sigemund (884 ff.), exhibits a closer affinity to Saxo's Frotho parallel. Both belong in the 'Sigurðr' class, being the adventurous exploits of conquering heroes. Sigemund, like Frotho, is really alone in the fight (888 f.). He loads a boat with the dragon's treasures, just as Frotho is bidden to do by his informant (Par. § 7). (The scene of Bēowulf's fight is near the sea, but the boat is replaced by a wagon, 3134.⁴)

Several minor parallels between Bēowulf's and Sigemund's dragon fight should not be overlooked. Cp. *under bārne stān*⁵ (. . . āna genēode . . .) 887; 2553, 2744, 2213, 2540. — [draca] morðre swealt 892, 2782. — wyrm bāt gemealt 897 (see note), cf. 3040 f.: wæs se lēgdraca . . . glēdum beswæled. (Similarly the victorious sword which ¹ We may add that both the detailed story of how the hoard came into the possession of the dragon and the motive of the curse laid on the gold put us in mind of Scandinavian analogues,—even though the circumstances of the former are not at all identical. That both 'Bēowulf's death' and 'the fall of Bǫðvarr Bjarki'² (Saxo ii 59 ff., Hrólfs saga, chaps. 32 ff., Par. §§ 7, 9) go back ultimately to historical legend commemorating the fight between Hjørvarðr (= Heorowearð) and the Geat [king] Bǫðvarr (Bjarki) (= Bēowulf), that is, practically a war — the final, disastrous one — between Swedes and Geats,³ has been argued with great keenness by Sarrazin (E St. xlii 24 ff.), who is supported by Berendsohn (l.c. 12 f.). Through subsequent intrusion of supernatural folk-tale elements, it is further assumed, the whole character of the legend underwent a radical metamorphosis, although the persistent allusions to the Swedish-Geatish affairs in the second part of the Beowulf serve as reminders of the actual historical background.

THE TWO BĒOWULFS. MYTHOLOGICAL INTERPRETATION⁴

The mention of Bēowulf the Dane (who may be designated as Bēowulf I in contradistinction to the hero Bēowulf [II] the Geat) has caused much perplexity to students of the poem. In the opening canto Scyld Scēfing and his son Bēowulf are given the place of honor in the genealogy of the Danish kings. Practically the same names, viz. Scēaf (Scēf), Scyld (Scyldwa, Sceldwea), Bēaw (Beo, Beowi(n)us, etc.)⁵ occur among the ancestors of Wōden in a number of Anglo-Saxon and, similarly, Old Norse genealogies (Par. §§ 1, 5, 8. 1). That those names in the Scandinavian pedigrees are derived from Anglo-Saxon sources, is clearly proved by their forms and by the explanatory translations which have been added. Again, a local appellation *Bēowan hamm*⁶ is mentioned in the neighborhood of a Grendles mere in a Wiltshire charter issued by King Æðelstān in the year 931.¹ From these facts, aided by etymological interpretations of the name Bēaw-Bēow(a) (Bēowulf), it has been inferred that the hero of the poem was originally the same as Bēaw (Bēowa, Bēowulf I), i. e., a divine being worshiped by the Anglo-Saxons and credited with wondrous deeds of the mythological order, and who by contamination with a historical person of the name of Bēowulf, the nephew of king Hygelāc, was transformed into the mortal hero of the poem. Originated by Kemble and very generally accepted for generations (though varied in minor details), this hypothesis seemed to furnish the very key to a true understanding of the unique epic poem. It was enunciated by Müllenhoff, as a kind of dogma, in the following precise and supposedly authoritative formulation.

Bēaw (whose name is derived from the root bbū [cp. OE. būan] 'grow,' 'dwell,' 'cultivate land'), in conjunction with Scēaf ('sheaf,' denoting husbandry) and Scyld ('shield,' i. e. protection against enemies), typifies the introduction of agriculture and civilization, the peaceful dwelling on the cultivated ground. He is virtually identical with *Ing*² and thus also with Frēa (ON. Freyr), the god of fruitfulness and riches. In a similar mythological light are to be viewed the exploits of Bēowulf (that is, primarily, Bēaw). Grendel is a personification of the (North) Sea, and so is Grendel's mother; and Bēowulf's fight against these demons symbolizes the successful checking of the inundations of the sea in the spring season. The contest with the dragon is its autumnal counterpart. In the death of the aged hero, which means the coming on of winter, an old seasons-myth is seen to lie back of the prevailing culture-myth conception.³ Owing to the similarity of names, the ancient Anglo-Saxon myth of Bēowa was transferred to Bēowulf the Geat, a great warrior who distinguished himself in Hygelāc's ill-fated expedition against the Franks.

A number of other more or less ingenious mythological expositions have been put forward.⁴ Bēowulf has been made out a superhuman being of the order of Þórr or Baldr, or a lunar deity,¹ a personification of wind, storm, or lightning, a patron of bee-keepers,² whilst his opponent Grendel has figured as the incarnation of the terrors of pestilential marshes, malaria or fog, or of the long winter nights, a storm being, a likeness of the ON. Loki or Ægir, even of the Lernæan hydra of old.³ Also the dragon and Bēowulf's dragon fight have been subjected to various interpretations of a similar allegorizing character.

Grimm understood the name Bēo-wulf (of which Bēow was supposed to be a shortening) as 'bee-wolf' (enemy of the bees), meaning 'woodpecker,'⁴ which bird he conjectured to have been held sacred like the Picus of the Romans. Others have accepted this eminently plausible etymology of 'bee-wolf,' taking the word, however, in the sense of 'bear' (the ravager of bees, the hive plunderer). (Cosijn, Aanteekeningen, p. 42 [cf. ZfdPh. xxiv 17 n.] explained 'bee-wolf' as sigewulf [with reference to the use of sigewif for 'bees' in the Ags. Charms 3.8, Grein-Wülcker i 320].)

Out of the bewildering mass of learned disquisitions along these lines the following facts emerge as fairly probable. There is no need to assume a connection between Bēaw (Bēowulf I) and Bēowulf II. Neither the Grendel nor the dragon fight is to be shifted back from the Geat hero to the Dane or the Anglo-Saxon progenitor. The evidence of the famous Wiltshire charter is far from conclusive as regards the attribution of the Grendel fight to Bēowa, especially as we are by no means certain that the grendel of grendles mere was not meant as a common noun (as claimed by Thomas Miller, Academy xlv 396).⁵

That Bēaw : Bēow was after all, originally, some kind of a divine being, has been shown to be probable by the recent investigations of Kaarle Krohn,⁶ who called attention to the corresponding figure of the Finnish Pekko, a god of grain, whom the Finns had taken over from Germanic tradition. In course of time it came to pass that the grain being Bēow (bēow = 'barley'), like the analogous personifications of 'sheaf' and 'shield'⁷, was regarded as an epic personage, an early progenitor of royal races.

But outside of the introductory genealogy this shadowy divinity has no place in the Anglo-Saxon epic. Nothing but his name is recorded (ll. 18, 53). And that seems to have been introduced as a result of an accidental confusion. When detailing the ancestry of the Scyldingas (Skjöldungar), the poet was reminded by the name Scyld

(Skjǫldr) of the Anglo-Saxon Scyld(wa) and the beings associated with him,¹ and thus, mingling Danish and Anglo-Saxon tradition, he cited the series Scyld Scēfing, Bēowulf among the early kings of the Danes.² That the form Bēowulf of ll. 18, 53 in place of Bēow(a) or Bēaw is due to a mistake of the poet's or a scribe's, has been conjectured more than once.³

On the other hand, Bēowulf the Geat is entirely of Scandinavian origin. His name, if rightly interpreted as 'bear,'⁴ agrees (though of course not etymologically) with that of Bjarki, which to begin with was apparently meant as a diminutive form of bjǫrn 'bear.'⁵ His deeds are plainly of the folk-tale order adjusted in the epic to the level of Germanic hero-life. The chief adversary of Bēowulf in the first part is naturally to be traced to the same source; but probably English traditions of a water-sprite have entered into the conceptions of the monster Grendel, whose very name seems to have been added on English soil. To inquire into the primitive mythological signification of those preternatural adventures is an utterly hopeless undertaking. Resting as they do on pure theory and diversified imagination, such romantic constructions merely obscure the student's vision of the real elements of the story.⁶

Are we now to believe that Bēowulf, the hero — like Grettir of the later Icelandic saga — belongs in part to history, or, in other words, that a Geat famed for strength and prowess attracted to himself wonderful tales of ultrahuman feats?⁷ What the poem tells about his

⁷ Grein (L. 4. 69. 267, 278) ventured the guess that the deliverance of Denperson, apart from his marvelous deeds, has not the appearance of history or of genuine historical legend.¹ He is out of place in the line of Geat kings, who bear names alliterating with H; and, still more strangely, his own B does not harmonize with the name of his father Ecgþeow and that of his family, the Wægmundingas.² He is a solitary figure in life, and he dies without leaving any children. Neither as Hygelac's retainer nor as king of the Geats does he play any real part in the important events of the time.³ He accompanies Hygelac, indeed, on his historic continental expedition, but what is told of him in that connection is of a purely episodic nature, conventional, or fabulously exaggerated, in short, to all appearances, anything but authentic. There is hardly a trait assigned to him that is not more or less typical⁴ or in some way associated with his extraordinary qualities or his definite rôle as a protecting and defending man of strength, in which the Anglo-Saxon poet rejoiced. That there is some substratum of truth in the extensive recital of his doings may well be admitted as a possibility; but that need not have been more than the merest framework of the narrative elements common to Bēowulf and Boðvarr Bjarki. The elaboration of Bēowulf's character and actions shows plainly the hand of the author who made him the hero of a great epic poem.

Note on the Etymology of BĒOWULF and GRENDEL

The following etymologies of the singular names Bēowulf, Bēaw (Bēow[a]) have been proposed.

1) Bēowulf (= ON. Bjólfr), = 'bee-wolf.' So Grimm D. M. 306 (369); Simrock L. 3.21.177; Müllenhoff, ZfdA. xii 283; Sweet, AgS. Reader, & E. St. ii 312-4; Körner, E. St. i 483 f.; Skeat, Academy xi 163 c, & Jour. of Philol. xv 120 ff.; Cosijn, Aant. 42; Sievers, Beitr. xviii 413; v. Grienberger 759; Panzer 392. This etymology is strongly supported by the form of the proper name Biuulf (i.e. Biuuulf) occurring in the Liber Vitae Ecclesiae Dunelmensis (Sweet, Oldest English Texts, p. 163, l. 342). Cf. Lang. § 17. Thus Bēo-wulf, Northumbr. Biu-wulf (perhaps from primitive Norse Biw-wolfr*), = ON. Bjólfr, older Bý-olfr*. (Symons, *P. Grdr.*² iii 647.) Parallel OHG. form: Biulfus.

2) Bēowulf = ON. Bjólfr (as first seen by Grundtvig), i.e. Bœjólfr, mark and Geatland from the attacks of pirates by a historical Bēowulf caused the Grendel and dragon combats to be attributed to him.

Býjúlfr, from bær, býr 'farm (yard).' So Bugge Tid. 287 ff., & Beitr. xii 56; Gering L 3. 26. 100 f.

3) Bēowulf a substitution for Beadu-wulf. So Thorpe (Gloss.); Grundtvig (Edit.), p. xxxiii; Morley L 4. 2³. 344; Sarrazin St. 47, E St. xvi 71 ff., xxiii 227 [ON. Bǫð-varr = Badu-(h)arir*; cf. St. 151, E St. xlii 20: from Bǫð-vargr*]; Ferguson L 4. 52. 4.

4) Laistner, L 4. 47. 264 f. connected the name with bēarwan*, Goth. (us-)baugjan 'sweep.' Bēowulf = 'sweeping wolf,' i.e. the cleansing wind that chases the mists away. Another, very far-fetched suggestion of Laistner's: L 4. 50. 24.

5) Bēaw (= ON. Biár), Bēow belong to OE. bēow 'grain,' 'barley' (Epin. Gloss. 645, Leiden Gloss. 184), OS. beo(w), beuwod 'harvest,' related to the root bbū. So Kemble ii, pp. xiii f.; Müllenhoff, ZfdA. vii 410 f., & L 4. 19; Kögel, ZfdA. xxxvii 268 ff.; cf. Boer, AfNF. xix 20 ff.

ETYMOLOGIES OF Grendel

1) Grendel, related to OE. grindan 'grind', hence = 'destroyer' (Ettmüller, Transl., p. 20; Sweet, AgS. Reader; Laistner L 4. 50. 23; etc.; also Brandl [1902], who at the same time suggests a possible allusion to the grinding of grain by slaves), and to OE. grandor* (Sievers § 289) in grandorlēas, Jul. 271, ON. grand 'evil,' 'injury' (Grein Spr.; Sarrazin, Angl. xix 374 n.; v. Grienberger 758).

2) Grendel, related to OE. (Gen. B 384) grindel 'bar,' 'bolt,' OHG. grindel, krintil.¹ Grimm D. M. 201 (243).

3) Grendel, related to ON. grindill, one of the poetical terms for 'storm'; grenja 'to bellow.' See, e.g., Egilsson, Lexicon poet. antiq. ling. septent.; Sarrazin St. 65; Mogk, *P. Grdr.*² iii 301 f. (Cp. Beow. 1373 ff. ?)

4) Formation by means of -ila (cp. strengel) from Lat. grandis. See Hagen, MLN. xix 70.²

5) It should not be considered impossible that Grendel, the name of a water-sprite and demon of the fens, is = the common noun grendel 'drain,' perhaps 'pool,' 'marsh' (?) (cf. NED.: *grindle*¹ [dial.: 'narrow ditch or drain']), to which Miller called attention (see above, p. xxv) as being used in the Wiltshire charter (grendles mere) and still more plainly in a charter of A. D. 963 (Cartol. Sax. iii 336): . . . þanon on þa ealdan dic on grendel up anlang grendel on þone ealdan ford etc.

² Imitation of an oriental name was vaguely suggested as a possibility by Bouterwek, Germ. i 401. — Also Hicketier's speculation (L 4. 64) may be noted.

III. The Historical Elements¹

[lc wæs] mid Swēom ond mid Gēatum ond mid Sūþ-Denum. (Widsið 58.)

How much of historical truth there is in the subjects considered under this heading cannot be made out with certainty.² The early Germanic poetry of heroic legend, though inspired by stirring events of the times, primarily those of the great period of tribal migrations, was anything but a record and mirror of historical happenings. What the singers and hearers delighted in was the warlike ideals of the race, the momentous situations that bring out a man's character; and the poet's imagination eagerly seized upon the facts of history to mold them in accordance with the current standards of the typical hero-life. The personality of the hero and the comitatus idea — mutual loyalty of chief and retainer — dominated the representation of events. The hostile encounters of Germanic tribes were depicted as feuds between families. (Cp. the Finn legend, the Heaðo-Bard story.) Moreover, all kinds of variation, shifting, and combination naturally attended the oral transmission of the ancient lays. Facts easily gave way to fiction. The figure of Eormenric, e.g., as known to the Anglo-Saxons (see note on 1197-1201), in all probability retained next to nothing of the actual traits, doings, and sufferings of the great king of the Goths. Yet with all due allowance for disintegrating influences, those elements of the Beowulf which we naturally class as 'historical,' i.e. based on history, in contradistinction to the frankly fabulous matter of a preternatural character, have, in a large measure, an air of reality and historical truth about them which is quite remarkable and, in fact, out of the ordinary.

It is true, there is only one of the events mentioned in the poem, viz. the disastrous Frankish raid of Hygelac, which we can positively claim as real history (see below, p. xxxix).³ But this very fact that the Beowulf narrative is fully confirmed by the unquestioned accounts of early chroniclers, coupled with the comparative nearness of the poem to the time of the events recounted, raises into probability the belief that we are dealing in the main with fairly authentic narrative. It is certainly not too much to say that our Anglo-Saxon epos is to be considered the oldest literary source of Scandinavian history. This applies, of course, in the first place to the relation between the various tribes, and in a less degree to the record of individuals.

Much farther removed from history appear to us the Finn legend,³

Of tribes outside of Scandinavia³ we find mention of the Franks, Hætware, Frisians,⁴ the Baltic group of the Gifðas, Wylfingas, Heaðo-Bards (?)⁵ and, perhaps, the Vandals.⁶ With the possible exception of the family of Wealhþēow, England is not represented save for the ancient Angle legend of Offa.

Healfdene (57 ff.), following the mythical founder Scyld and the equally fictitious Bēowulf (I), is the first one in the line of Danish kings belonging to semi-historical tradition. He was succeeded by his eldest son Heorogār, whose reign was apparently of short duration. After Heorogār's early death, the crown fell not to his son Heorowearð (who was perhaps considered too young or was held in disrespect²), but to his brother Hrōðgār, the central figure of Danish tradition in the Beowulf.

His is a reign of surpassing splendor. After gaining brilliant success in war (64 ff.),³ he established his far-famed royal seat Heorot (68 ff.) and ruled for a long, long time (1769 ff.) in peace, honored by his people (863), a truly noble king. His queen Wealhþēow, of the race of the Helmingas (620), is a stately and gracious lady, remarkable for her tact and diplomacy.⁴ Another person of great importance at the court is Hrōðulf. By the parallel Scandinavian versions it is definitely established that he was the son of Hālga, who in the Beowulf receives no further mention (i.e. after l. 61). Left fatherless at a tender age,⁵ he was brought up kindly and honorably by Hrōðgār and Wealhþēow (1184 ff.), and when grown up, rose to a position of more than ordinary influence. Hrōðulf and Hrōðgār occupy seats of honor side by side in the hall Heorot (1163 f.), as befits near relatives of royal rank, who are called māgas (1015) and subtergefæderan (1164; subtorfæderan, Wids. 46). In fact, it almost looks as if Hrōðulf were conceived of as a sort of joint-regent in Denmark.⁶ With just a little imagination we may draw a fine picture of the two Scyldingas ruling in high state and glory over the Danes, Hrōðgār the old and wise, a peace-maker (470 ff., 1859 ff., 2026 ff.), a man of sentiment, and Hrōðulf, the young and daring, a great warrior, a man of energy and ambition. At a later time, however, as the poet intimates with admirable subtlety

² In ll. 2155 ff. we hear of a valuable corslet which Heorogār did not care to bestow on his son.

⁴ See 1169 ff., 1215 ff.

(1018 f., 1164 f., 1178 ff., 1228 ff.), the harmonious union was broken, and Hrōðulf, unmindful of the obligations of gratitude, behaved ill toward his cousins, Hrēðric and Hrōðmund (1180 ff.), that is to say—very likely—usurped the throne. One is tempted to regard Bēowulf's 'adoption' (946 ff., 1175 f.) as in some way connected with the anticipated treachery of Hrōðulf. In case of future difficulties among the Scyldingas, Bēowulf might come to the rescue of the Danish princes (in particular the elder one, cf. 1226 f., 1219 f.), or Hrēðric might find a place of refuge at the court of the Geats (hē mæg þær fela / frēonda findan 1837).

Regarding the chronology of Hrōðgār's life, the poet is clearly inconsistent in depicting him as a very old man, who looks back on a reign of sixty-two years (1769 ff., 147),¹ and, on the other hand, representing his sons as mere youngsters. Evidently neither the definite dates of the passages referred to nor the intimation of the helpless king's state of decrepitude could be taken literally.

Of these eight male names of the Danish dynasty, which are properly united by alliteration conformably to the Norse epic laws of name-giving in the period preceding the Viking age—the majority of them moreover containing one element recurring in one or more of the other names,²—all except Heorogār and Hrōðmund are well known in the analogous Scandinavian tradition.³ It is true, the names do not always correspond precisely in form,⁴ but this is only natural in different versions separated by centuries and based on long continued oral transmission. We also find a good many variations in the treatment of the material due to shifting and confusion, but, thanks to the researches of farsighted scholars, the main outlines of the original tradition appear with gratifying clearness. On the whole, the Beowulf account is to be ¹ And who may be expected to have to fight the Heaðo-Bards in years to come (2026 ff., cf. Wids. 45 ff.).

³ See Par. §§ 4-9.

⁴ Thus, Hrōðgār answers to an ON. Hrōðgeirr, whereas the names actually used, Hróarr, Roc would be Hrōð*-here in OE. Similar variations between different versions are OE. Eadgils: ON. Aðils; OE. Eanmund: ON. (Lat.) Hōmōthus (see below, p. xii); Garmund: Wærmund (see note on 1931-62); Örlāf: Ordlāf (see Intro. to The Fight at Finnsburg); and within the Beowulf itself, Heorogār: Heregār (61, 2158; 467); Hrēðel: Hræðla. Cf. Heusler, "Helldennamen in mehrfacher Lautgestalt," ZfdA. lii 97-107.

regarded as being not only in time but also in historical fidelity nearest to the events alluded to.

Heorogār, the eldest son of Healfdene, it is reasonable to believe, merely dropped out of the later versions of the Skjöldung saga, whilst Hrōðmund, showing distinct English affiliations,¹ seems peculiar to the Anglo-Saxon account. The strange name of Hrōðgār's queen, Wealhþēow (i.e. 'British servant'), indicates that she was considered of foreign descent.²

Heorowearð is the Norse Hjørvarðr (Hiarthwarus, Hyarwardus), whose fatal attack on his brother-in-law (not cousin) Hrólfr Kraki introduces the situation celebrated in the famous Bjarkamál.³ The person of Hrēoric is curiously hidden in a few scanty references to Hrærekkr (hnøggvanbaugi) and in a cursory but instructive allusion to King Rolvo's slaying of a Rericus (Bjarkamál, Saxo ii 62. 4 ff. : '[rex] qui natum Bøki Rericum stravit avari, etc.').⁴ That Healfdene (ON. Hálfdan(r), O. Dan. Haldan) figured also in Norse accounts as the father of Hrōðgār (Hróarr) and Hálga (Helgi), is abundantly proved, though his position became in time much confused. Even his designation as bēab and gamol (57 f.) is duplicated in Scandinavian sources (Skáldskaparmál, chap. 62 : Hálfdan gamli ; Hyndluljóð 14 : Hálfdanr fyrri hástr Skjöldunga).⁵ An explanation of his peculiar name may be found in the fact that, according to the later Skjöldungasaga (Par. § 8. 6 : chap. 9), his mother was the daughter of the Swedish king Jorundus. Icelandic sources have it that he lost his life through his brother (Fróði).⁶

Two sons of Hálfdan(r), Hróarr (Roe) and Helgi (Helgo), are regularly known in the North, besides in a few versions a daughter Signý who married a jarl named Sævil,⁷—probably a mistake for Onela, the Swedish king. That her real name was Yrsa, has been

⁴ As first seen by Grundtvig (Edition, p. 204). Cf. also Bugge, Studien über die Entstehung der nordischen Götter- und Heldensagen (1889), pp. 171 f. See Par. § 8. 1.

argued by (Chadwick and) Clarke (L 4. 76).¹ In contrast with the Beowulf, Helgi left a much stronger impression in Scandinavian legend than the quiet, inactive Hróarr; he even appears, under the guise of Helgi Hundingsbani, as the sole representative of the Skjöldungar in the Eddic poems bearing his name.²

Still greater is the shifting in the relative importance of Hrōðgār (Hróarr) and his nephew Hrōðulf (Hrólfr [Kraki], Rolvo). All the glory of Hrōðgār seems to be transferred to Hrólf, who became the most renowned and popular of the ancient Danish legendary kings, the most perfect of rulers, the center of a splendid court rivaling that of the Gothic Theodoric and the Celtic Arthur.³ This development was perhaps first suggested by the significant contrast between the old, peace-loving Hrōðgār and his young, forceful, promising nephew; it was further aided by a change in the story of Helgi, who was made to survive his brother, whereby Hrólf was dissociated from the traditions concerning his uncle.⁴

Another phase of Danish history is opened up in the allusions to the relation between the Scyldingas and the chiefs of the Heaðo-Bards (2024–2069), which are all the more welcome as they present one of the most truly typical motives of the old Germanic heroic life, viz. the sacred duty of revenge. To settle an old bloody feud Hrōðgār gave his daughter Frēawaru in marriage to Ingeld, the son of the Heaðo-Bard king Frōda, who in years gone by had been slain by the victorious Danes. But an old, grim warrior (eald ascwiga, 2042), chafing under the trying situation, which to his sense of honor is utterly humiliating, spurs a young comrade on to a realization of his duty, until hostility actually breaks out again. The outcome of the new war between the two tribes is related in Widsið, 45–49:

Hrōþwulf ond Hrōðgār hēoldon lengest 5
 sibbe ætsomne suhtorfædran, sibþan h̄y forwræcon Wicinga cynn
 ond Ingeldes ord forbīgdan, forhēowan æt Heorote Heaðo-Beardna þrym.

¹ On Yrsa's relations with Helgi, (Áli, and) Aðils, see Clarke, pp. 64 ff., 82 ff. Chadwick and Clarke suggest that an (unknowingly) incestuous marriage between father and daughter (see Grottasagnr 22, Par. § 5: ch. 40, Hrólfs saga, chs. 7, 9) may have been substituted in Norse tradition for that between brother and sister. — In the Hrólfs saga and (probably) the late Skjöldungasaga Signý is the oldest of Halfdan's children, whereas in the Beowulf Healfdene's daughter is apparently younger than her brothers.

² Cf. Bugge L 4. 84.

In other words, the Heaðo-Bards invade the land of the Danes and attack the royal stronghold, but are utterly defeated. On this occasion, as is to be inferred from ll. 82 ff., the famous hall Heorot was destroyed by fire.¹

Curiously but not unnaturally (the memory of the once independent Bard tribe having been lost in later times), Scandinavian sources regard the feud as arising from the enmity between two brothers of the Scylding family or — as in the case of Saxo — represent the former Bards as Danes, whilst their enemies, the Swerting family, are made over into Saxons.² Otherwise, Saxo's account is substantially a faithful counterpart of the Beowulf episode; in particular the fine, taunting speech of the old warrior, which sums up the ethical significance of the tragic conflict, is plainly echoed in the Latin verses — immoderately lengthened, diluted and in part vulgarized as they are — which are put in the mouth of the famous hero Starkaðr ('the Old'), the representative of the old, simple, honorable warlike life and of stern, unbending Viking³ virtue.

A faint recollection of the Heaðo-Bard feud lingers in the tradition of Hothbrodus, king of Sweden (in Saxo and other Danish sources, Par. § 7 : ii 52 f., § 8. 4 & 5) and of Hǫðbroddr, the enemy of Helgi in the Eddic lays mentioned above. The very name Hǫðbroddr, as first pointed out by Sarrazin,⁴ is the individualized form of the tribal name Heaðo-Beardan, though the phonetic agreement is not complete.⁵

In accordance with the spirit of the Germanic heroic saga, the personal element is strongly emphasized in viewing the events in the light of a family feud of chiefs or petty kings, yet we have reason to believe that there existed a true historical background of considerable political significance.

But who are the Heaðo-Bards? Evidently, a seafaring people (Wids. 47 : wīcinga cynn), who seem to have lived for some time on the southern coast of the Baltic (the home of the Hǫðbroddr of the Eddic Helgi lays).

³ Cf. Wids. 47 : Wīcinga cynn.

⁵ Dettner, who (like Müllenhoff) connected Ingeld (Ingellus) with Ingjaldr illráði, attempted to establish a mythological basis (a Freyr myth) for this episode (Beitr. xviii 90 ff.).

They have been identified with (1) the Langobards (Lombards), whose name is reasonably to be equated with that of the Heaðo-Bards, and some divisions of whom may have been left behind on the Baltic shore when the main body of the tribe migrated south,¹ and with (2) the Erulians (Heruli), who, according to Jordanes,² were driven from their dwellings (on the Danish islands, perhaps) by the powerful Danes and whose defeat has been supposed (by Müllenhoff) to have ushered in the consolidation of the Danish state. Besides, compromise theories have been proposed. Also the problematical *Myrkingas*³ of Widsið have been connected with the Bards.⁴ An authoritative decision is hardly possible.

Summing up, we may give the following brief, connected account of the outstanding events of Danish history as underlying the allusions of the poem.⁵ Frōða, king of the Bards, slays Healfdene⁶ (about A.D. 493); (Heorogār,) Hrōðgār, and Hälga make a war of revenge,⁶ Frōða falls in battle (A.D. 494). After an interval of nearly twenty years, when Frōða's son, Ingeld (born A.D. 493) has grown up, Hrōðgār, the renowned and venerable king, desirous of forestalling a fresh outbreak of the feud, marries his daughter Frēawaru to the young Heaðo-Bard king (A.D. 513). Yet before long, the flame of revenge is kindled again, the Bards invade the Danish dominions and burn Heorot, but are completely routed, A.D. 515. The foreign enemy having been overcome, new trouble awaits the Danes at home. Upon Hrōðgār's death (A.D. 520), his nephew Hrōðulf forcibly seizes the kingship, pushing aside and slaying his cousin Hrēðric, the heir presumptive. [Of the subsequent attack of Heorowearð, who had a still older claim to the throne, and the fall of Hrōðulf (A.D. 540) no mention is made in the Beowulf.]

Thus the two tragic motives of this epic tradition are the implacable enmity between two tribes, dominated by the idea of revenge which no human bonds of affection can restrain, and the struggle for the crown among members of a royal family [which is to lead to the extinction of the dynasty].

The existence of a royal line preceding the Scyldingas is to be inferred from the allusions to Heremōð, see note on 901-15.

⁶ There is no mention of this in Beowulf.

The seat of the Danish power, the fair hall Heorot, corresponds to the ON. Hleiðr¹ (Hleiðargarðr, Lat. Lethra) of Scandinavian fame, which, although reduced to insignificance at an early date, and now a tiny, wretched village, Lejre (southwest of Roskilde on the island of Zealand), is habitually associated with the renown of the Skjöldung kings.² It has been (doubtfully) regarded as the site of an ancient sanctuary devoted, perhaps, to the cult of Nerthus (Tacitus, Germ., ch. 40, Par. § 10) and Ing (ON. Freyr, Yngvifreyr, Ingunafreyr).³ Hleiðr was destroyed, we may imagine, on the occasion of Hrólfr's fall,⁴ but in the memory of the people it lived on as the ideal center of the greatness of Denmark in the olden times.

Sarrazin claimed that the scenery of the first part of the Beowulf could be clearly recognized even in the present Lejre and its surroundings,⁵ while others (including the present editor) have failed to see more than a very general topographical resemblance.

It should be noted that the name Ingwine twice applied to the Danes (1044, 1319) bears weighty testimony to the ancient worship of Ing.⁶

The designations Scede-land 19, Sceden-ig 1686 (used of the Danish dominion in general) point to the fact that the original home of the Danes was in Skåne (Scania, the southernmost district of the present kingdom of Sweden),⁷ whence they migrated to the islands and later to Jutland.⁸

² See Par. § 6: chs. 5, 29 (33); § 7: ii 52, § 8. 2, § 8. 3, § 8. 6: ch. 1, § 9: chs. 16 ff. Only in late sources is Hröðgar (Roe), the builder of Heorot (Hleiðr) in the Beowulf, credited with the founding of Roskilde; see Par. § 8. 4.

³ Cf. Sarrazin St. 5 f., Angl. xix 368 ff., E St. xlii 1 ff.; Much, Beitr. xvii 196 ff.; Mogk, P. Grdr. iii 367. According to Sarrazin, the original meaning of Hleiðr is 'tent-like building,' 'temple,' and appears even in the OE. æt hærgtrafum, Beow. 175. That human and animal sacrifices were offered to the gods at the capital, 'Lederun,' is related by Thietmar of Merseburg (early in the 11th century); cf. Grimm D. M. 39 (48).

⁵ See the detailed topographical descriptions, Sarr. St. 4 ff., Beitr. xi 167 ff.

⁶ Cp. Runic Poem 67 ff. Ingwine has the appearance of being changed, by folk etymology, from (the equivalent of) Ingwacones* (the worshipers of Ing), the name by which Tacitus designates the Germanic North Sea tribes (Par. § 10: ch. 2). From Jutland and Zealand the cult of Ing spread to the other Danish islands, to Skåne, and thence to Sweden. (Cf. the name Ynglingar, below, p. xlii n. 2, etc.)

⁷ It was not united politically with Sweden until 1658.

THE GEATS AND SWEDES ¹

(See Glossary of Proper Names : Gēatas, Wederas, Hrēðlingas; Swēon, Scylfingas.)

*The Geatish Royal Line*²*The Swedish Royal Line*

Hrēðel, like his contemporary Healfdene the Dane, had three sons and one daughter. The eldest son Herebeald was accidentally killed by Hæðcyn, who when shooting an arrow, missed his aim and struck his brother instead (2435 ff.).⁵ The grief caused by this tragic fate ate away the king's life. Upon his death and the succession of Hæðcyn, war broke out between the Geats and Swedes (2472 ff., 2922 ff.). It is started by the Swedes, who attack their southern neighbors and after inflicting severe damage return home. An expedition of revenge into the land of the Swedes undertaken by Hæðcyn and Hygelāc, though at first successful (even Ongenþēow's queen is taken prisoner), seems destined to utter failure; the 'old, terrible' king of the Swedes falls upon Hæðcyn's army, rescues the queen, kills the Geat king and forces his troops to seek refuge in the woods (Hrefnesholt 2935), threatening them all night long with death in the morning by the sword and the gallows. But at dawn the valorous Hygelāc appears with his division and inspires such a terror that the Swedes flee to their fastness, pursued by the Geats. Ongenþēow in a brave fight against two brothers, Eofor and Wulf, loses his life. Hygelāc, now king of the Geats, after his homecoming richly repaid the brothers and gave his only daughter as wife to Eofor.

This victory at the Ravenswood (A. D. 505) insured the Geats peace with the Swedes, who seem to have dreaded the power of the warlike Hygelāc. [The Geat king's arm was strengthened by his loyal nephew, the mighty Bēowulf, who, after his triumphant return from Denmark, where he had overcome the Grendel race (about A. D. 510), was the associate of Hygelāc.]

Not content with his success in the North, Hygelāc even undertook a ravaging expedition into the Frankish lands ('Gallias,' Par. § 11) about A. D. 516.¹ He arrived with a fleet in the land of the (West) Frisians (west of the Zuider Zee) (syððan Higelāc cwōm / faran floþberge on Frēsna land 2914 f., cp. 1206 f.), and sailed up the river Rhine as far as the district of the Frankish tribe Hætware (Attoarii, better known as Chattuarii).² [Supplementing the narrative by means of Gregory's version and the Historia Francorum (Par. § 11):] Having loaded their ships with prisoners and rich booty (cwælrēaf 1205), the Geats return. The main force is sent out in advance, but the king with a smaller band remains on the shore (of either the Rhine or the North Sea). There (Frēslondum on 2357) he is overtaken by a strong army under the command of Theodebert, the son of the Frankish king Theoderic (the Merovingian 2921). King Hygelāc and his followers are slain, his fleet is pursued and utterly routed. The poem repeatedly dwells on the heroic deeds of prowess done by Bēowulf in the unequal encounter between the allied forces (ofermægen 2917) of the continental tribes and Hygelâc's guard: 2363 ff., 2501 ff.

¹ That is to say, according to Gregory of Tours this event happened between A. D. 512 and 520. (Grion L 3. 36 thought it should be placed as late as A. D. 527.) — The references in the poem occur in ll. 1202 ff., 2354 ff., 2501 ff., 2913 ff. (2201). The identity of the Beowulf allusions and the accounts of the Frankish histories was first recognized by Grundtvig (see his Transl., p. lxi).

The final battle is waged against the Franks (1210) or Hūgas (2914, 2502), Hetware (2363, 2916), and (no doubt) Frisians (2357, 2503). Of the four names mentioned, Hūgas is only an epic appellation of the Franks; the Hetware seem to have belonged to the Frankish 'sphere of influence.' The two main tribes involved are thus the Franks and the Frisians (see 2912).² At the same time the rising power of the Franks is reflected in the allusion to the threatening unfriendliness of the Merovingian dynasty (2921). It is possible, however, that the poet did not consistently differentiate between the three or four terms (see especially 2502 f.). His use of the name Dægþrefn, by the way, shows that he followed a genuine tradition (see note on 2501).

The young Heardrēd now succeeded his father Hygelâc. Bēowulf [who by a marvelous swimming feat had escaped from the enemies] generously declined Hygd's offer of the throne, but acted as Heardrēd's guardian during the prince's minority (2367 ff.). When the latter had come into his rights, another series of warlike disputes with the Swedes arose (A. D. 527-530). After the fall of Ongenþeow in the battle of Ravenswood his son Ōthhere had become king,³ but upon Ōthhere's death, Onela seized the throne, compelling his nephews Eanmund and Eadgils to flee the country. They find refuge at the court of Heardrēd. Soon after Onela enters Geatland with an army (A. D. 528), Heardrēd as well as Eanmund is slain, whereupon the Swedish king returns, allowing Bēowulf to take over the government unmolested (2379 ff., 2611 ff., 2202 ff.). A few years later Eadgils,⁴ aided by a Geatish force,⁵ reopens the war (2391 ff.), which results in his uncle Onela's death and Eadgils's accession to the throne (A. D. 530).

However, trouble from their northern foes is likely to come upon the Geats again, in spite of their temporary alliance with a branch of the

² The prominence given to the Frisians and their seemingly unhistorical alliance with the Franks is attributed by Sarrazin (Käd. 90 f.) to the Frisian source of this story.

³ This is nowhere stated, but the interpretation given above seems not unnatural.

⁵ Probably Bēowulf did not take part personally in this war; cf. note on 2395.

Scylfing dynasty; indeed it seems as if the downfall of their kingdom is virtually foreshadowed in the messenger's speech announcing the death of Bēowulf (2999 ff., 3018 ff.).

On the life of Bēowulf the Geat, see below, p. xlv.

Of the Geatish royal line, with the possible exception of Hygelāc,¹ the Northern tradition is silent. But early Frankish chronicles, as noted above, have preserved a most valuable record of Hygelāc's daring expedition against the Franks, thereby confirming completely the account of the Beowulf.² The only discrepancy discoverable, viz. the designation of *Chogilaicus as 'Danorum rex' is naturally accounted for by the assumption that the powerful Danes were taken as the representatives of the Scandinavian tribes, just as the later Anglo-Saxon annalists included under the name of 'Danes' the Vikings of Norway. Moreover the Liber Monstrorum (Par. § 11. 1) remembers the mighty warrior³ as 'rex Getarum' (suggesting an actual 'Gautarum' or 'Goth(h)orum').

A faint reminiscence of Hygelāc seems to crop out in Saxo's brief notice (iv 117) of the Danish king Hugletus, 'who is said to have defeated in a naval battle the Swedish chiefs Hømothus and Høgrimus,' the former one (ON. Eymóðr) answering⁴ to the Swedish prince Ēanmund, who falls in the land of the Geats (2612 ff.).⁵ No connection can be detected between Bēowulf's uncle and the light-minded Huggleikr, king of Sweden (Saxo: Hugletus, king of Ireland), who is slain in an attack by the Danish king Haki (Ynglingasaga, chap. 22 (25); Saxo vi 185 f.).

The accidental killing of Herebeald by Hæðcyn has been repeatedly⁶

³ That the giant Hugelbold in the MHG. Ecken Liet (83) is to be ultimately identified with him (see Much, Arch. cviii 403), is a pure guess.

⁴ Though we should expect Eymundr.

compared with the unintentional slaying of Baldr by the blind Hǫðr, who is directed by Loki in shooting the mistletoe (Prose Edda, Gylfaginning, chap. 48). But it is difficult to believe that the story told in Beowulf has any mythological basis. It rather impresses us as a report of an ordinary incident that could easily happen in those Scandinavian communities and probably happened more than once. Maybe the motive was associated at an early date with names suggesting a warlike occupation, like Here-beald, Hæð-cyn (Baldr, Hǫðr).¹

Turning to the Swedish affairs, we find the royal *Scyldingas*² well remembered in the North — Óttarr (Öthhere) and his son Aðils (Eadgils)³ standing out prominently —, but their true family relationships are somewhat obscured. Neither is Eymundr (Eanmund) ever mentioned in conjunction with Aðils nor is Óttarr considered the brother of Áli (Onela), who in fact has been transformed into a Norwegian king. Besides, Ongenþeow's name has practically disappeared from the drama of exciting events in which he had taken a leading part.⁴

Also the two series of hostile complications between the Swedes and Geats reappear in Scandinavian allusions, though with considerable variations, since the Geats have been forgotten and replaced by the Jutes and Danes.

The conflict between Ongenþeow and the Geats recounted in Beowulf has undergone a change in the scene and the names of the actors, but the substance of the narrative and certain details of the great central scene can be readily identified in the story of the fall of King Óttarr Vendilkráka in the Ynglingatal and the Ynglingasaga, chap. 27 (31), see Par. § 6. The cruel nickname 'Vendel Crow' given the dead king, who was likened to a dead crow torn by eagles, recalls Ongenþeow's fierce threats of execution (2939 ff.), which by the irony of fate was visited upon his own person. Also the remarkable fact of the slaying of the Swedish king by two men is preserved; indeed, the names Vǫttr and *Fasti*⁵ are evidently more authentic than the rather typical appellations Wulf and Eofor of the Anglo-Saxon epic. That the Old Norse account is at fault in associating the incident with Öthhere (Óttarr)

⁵ They are brothers in the Historia Norvegiae (cf. the following note) as in the Beowulf, whereas the Ynglingatal and the Ynglingasaga are silent on this point. — It may be noted that among the twelve champions of Hrólfr Kraki we find Vǫttr mentioned, Skáldskaparmál, ch. 41 (Par. § 5), and Hrólfs saga, ch. 32 (98. 14, Par. § 9).

rather than with Ongenþēow, is to be inferred from the testimony of Ari,¹ who in Íslendingabók (cir. A.D. 1135), chap. 12 calls Óttar's father by the name of Egill Vendilkráka. The name Egill (in place of Angantýr = Ongenþēow)² is possibly, Bugge suggests, due to corruption, a pet form *Angila being changed to *AgilaR and Egill.³ The scene of the battle is according to the Beowulf in Ongenþēow's own land, i.e. Sweden, but in the Ynglingatal (Ynglingasaga) is shifted to Vendel in Jutland. Now it has been properly pointed out (by Stjerna, 52 f.) that the striking surname 'Vendel Crow' cannot be a late literary invention, but must have originated immediately after the battle. As the king fell in his own land, the Vendel in question cannot be the large Jutish district of that name, but must be the place called Vendel in Swedish Uppland. Vendel is at present an insignificant church-village, some twenty English miles north of Upsala, but being favorably located for commercial traffic, it enjoyed a considerable importance in the Middle Ages. There are exceptionally numerous ancient cemeteries near Vendel, the principal one of which was evidently the burial place of a great chieftain's family. It may safely be concluded (with Stjerna) that about the year 500 there existed a royal fortress at Vendel, and that a noble family resided there.

On other possible recollections of this part of the Swedish-Geatish tradition, see note on 2922 ff.

The second series of encounters between the Geats and Swedes resolves itself in Scandinavian tradition into a contest between Aðils — a great saga hero — and Áli, who, through confusion of the Swedish Uppland with 'uplands' in Norway, was made into a Norwegian king. The battle in which Áli fell took place on the ice of Lake Väner. See Skáldskaparmál, chaps. 41, 55, Ynglingasaga, chap. 29 (33), Ynglingatal, Arngrim Jónsson's Skjöldungasaga, chap. 12 (Par. §§ 5, 6, 8, 6). A hint of Aðils's foreign (Geatish) support (2391 ff.) is found in the statement that Hrólf Kraki sent his twelve champions (Bǫðvarr Bjarki among them) to assist him. Thus the Danes have stepped into the place originally occupied by the Geats. The memory of Eadgils's brother, Eanmund, is all but lost. He may be recognized, however, in the Eymundr of Hyndluljóð 15 (Par. § 4) with whom Hálfðanr (the representative of the Danes) allies himself,⁴ and in the above (p. xli) mentioned Hømothus of Saxo.

² The names Angantýr and Óttar are coupled in Hyndl. 9 (Par. § 4). Ongenþēow is remembered in Wids. 31: Swēom [wēold] Ongendþēow, see Chambers's note.

The dominating element in this second phase of the inter-tribal war, the dynastic struggle within the royal Swedish line, is perhaps to be explained (with Belden) by the existence of a foreign or pro-Danish party led by Onela (the son-in-law of Healfdene (l. 62), who was of Dano-Swedish extraction), and a native party led by Eadgils and Eanmund (who presumably followed their father's policy).¹ In this connection it has been suggested by Belden that the 'Wendlas' mentioned in l. 348 (Wulfgār, Wendla lēod) sided with the Danish faction. Accepting this view and assuming further (as was first conjectured by Stjerna²), that, like Wulfgār, the Wāgmundingas, i.e. Wēohstān and his son Wiglāf,³ belong to the Wendel family, i.e. a noble family of Vendel in Uppland, Sweden, we are able to understand not only that Wulfgār held an honored position at the Danish court, but also (what seems singular indeed) that Wēohstān,⁴ the father of Bēowulf's most loyal kinsman Wiglāf, fought in the service of Onela, against the latter's nephews and the Geats who sheltered them.⁵ After Eadgils had been established on the throne, Wēohstān, who had slain Eanmund (2612 ff.), was compelled to leave the country and settled in the land of the Geats. That *Wiglāf*⁶ even in Bēowulf's last battle is still called lēod Scylfinga (2603),⁷ is thus readily understood in the light of his father's antecedents. But what the relation is between the Geatish branch of the Wāgmundingas (to which Bēowulf and his father Ecgþeow belong) and the Swedish branch (the only one which carries through the family alliteration), remains doubtful. The rich homestead of the Wāgmundingas (2607) must clearly be sought in the land of the Geats.⁸

The (essentially hostile) relations between the Danes and Swedes

³ Belden conjectures also Wulf Wonrēding, who fights against Ongenþeow (2965 ff.), to be of the Wendel family.

⁸ See on these questions, Scherer L 5. 5. 475 f., Müllenhoff, Anz.f.d.A. iii 177 f.

have been traced in detail by Clarke, L 4. 76. 82 ff., 156, and Belden, l.c. The Geats, the hereditary enemies of the Swedes, are naturally on friendly terms with the Danes. It is true, we are told, in rather vague language (1857 f.), that in former times strife existed between the peoples of the Geats and Danes.¹ But, at any rate, since Bēowulf's deliverance of Heorot, peace and good will were firmly established (1829 ff., 1859 ff.).² (Possibly even before that event, friendly gifts were exchanged [378 f.].) The excellent personal relations between Bēowulf's family and Hrōðgār date from the time when Ecgbēow, the hero's father, was befriended at the Danish court (459 ff.). They culminate in Bēowulf's adoption (946 ff., 1175 f.). On the strange allusion of l. 3005, see note on that passage.

Regarding Bēowulf the hero himself, the son of *Ecgbēow*³ and grandson of Hrēðel (373 ff.), — the facts of his life, if fitted into the chronological scheme here adopted, would show the following sequence. He was born about the year 490. At the age of seven he was brought to the court of his grandfather Hrēðel and nurtured there with loving care (2428 ff.). [He was, however, considered slack and of little promise (2183 ff.).] [He distinguishes himself in fighting giants and sea-monsters, 418 ff. and in a swimming adventure with Breca, 506 ff.] He takes no part in the engagements with the Swedes which culminate in the battle at Ravenswood. [In A.D. 510 he visits the Danes and delivers Hrōðgār from the plague of Grendel and his dam.] As a loyal thane he accompanies his uncle Hygelāc in his expedition against the Franks (A.D. 516), slays Dæghrefn (thus avenging Hygelāc's death, it seems), and escapes home by swimming (2356 ff., 2501 ff.). Refusing Hygd's offer of the throne, he acts as Heardrēd's guardian during the latter's minority (2369 ff.). After Heardrēd's death in the fight with the Swedes (A.D. 528), he becomes king and soon supports Ēadgils in his war on Onela, A.D. 530 (2389 ff.). [After a long reign he falls in a combat with a fire dragon. The date of his death must be left indefinite. At any rate, Bēowulf's fifty years' reign (2209) — which would leave him a nonagenarian at the time of the final battle — is meant only as a sort of poetic formula.]⁴

¹ Can this be a reference to the period when the center of Danish power was still in Skåne?

² Deutschbein, l.c. would interpret the allusions of ll. 1832 ff., 1855 ff. as evidence of the fact that Heorowearð (Hjorvarðr) made his attack on Hrōðulf (Hrólfr) at Lejre with the assistance of the Geats, i.e., of Wiglāf. Further discussion by Berendsohn, l.c. 9 ff.

³ The same name, i.e. Eggþér, occurs Völuspá 42.

The Nationality of the Geats

This has been the subject of a prolonged controversy, which has brought out manifold aspects of the question, linguistic, geographical, historical, and literary. Grundtvig assigned the Geats to the island of Gotland (or, for a second choice, to Bornholm); Kemble to Angeln, Schleswig; Haigh (as a matter of course) to North England. But the only peoples that have been actually admitted as rival claimants to the title are the Jutes in the northern part of the Jutish peninsula, and the ON. Gautar, O.Swed. Götär, i.e. the inhabitants of Väster- and Östergötland, south of the great Swedish lakes.¹

Phonetically OE. *Gēatas*² answers precisely to ON. Gautar. The OE. name of the (West Germanic) Jutes is Angl. Ēote, Īote (Īotan), LWS. Ȫte, Ȫtan,³ as used in Wids. 26: Ȫtum, OE. Bede 308.11: Ēota (Var.: Ȫtena) lond, OE. Chron. A.D. 449: Īotum, Īutna (Baeda: Iutarum) cyn, and no significance can be ascribed to the forms Gēata, Gēatum found in one place only, Bede 52. 4, 9.⁴ The ON. form for 'Jutes',⁵ Jōtar (Jūtar), appears in an imperfect transliteration (in King Ælfred's narrative of Ōthhere's second voyage, Oros. 19.20, 28), as Gotland (more properly: Geōtland). In linguistic respect, then, the identification of the Gēatas cannot be doubtful, and very weighty arguments indeed would be required to overthrow this fundamental evidence in favor of the Götär.

Testimony of a geographical and historical character has been brought forward to support the Jutish claims, but it is somewhat impaired by the fact that the early history of Jutland as well as of Götland is enveloped in obscurity. It is clear from the poem that the Geats are a seafaring people.⁶ Hygelāc's castle is situated near the sea (1924, 1963 ff.), the dragon is pushed over the sea-cliff (3131 ff.), and on the 'whale's headland' do the Geats erect the grave monument of their beloved king (2802 ff., 3136). The intercourse between the Swedes and Geats takes place ofer sǣ 2380, 2394, ofer wīd water 2473, ofer heafu 2477. Contrariwise, in historic times the Gōtar are a typical inland people with their capital Skara far away from the sea. It is possible, nevertheless, that formerly Halland and Bohuslän with an extensive coast line were included in the kingdom of Gautland,¹ and that it was only after their subjugation by the Swedes and the forfeiture of those domains that the Gautar — like the Anglo-Saxons after their settlement in Britain — lost their skill in matters nautical. Again, the water route by which the Swedes and Geats reached each other may very well have been by way of the great lakes, Väner and Vätter.² Even the passage by the Baltic Sea and Lake Mälär might have been less inconvenient than the impassable inland roads. Moreover, can we be sure that the Anglo-Saxon poet had a clear knowledge of Northern geography? Is it not rather likely that he would suppose all branches of the Scandinavians to be seafaring peoples? Certainly the topographical hints contained in the poem could not be used successfully for definite localization. The 'sea-cliffs' (1911 f.), which would fit in better with the coast of Västergötland and Halland than with the shore of Jutland, seem to be part of a conventional description based on notions of English scenery. (They are attributed to Zealand also, 222 f.) 'Storms' (implied by the terms Weder-Gēatas, Wederas) could visit the shores of Västergötland and Jutland alike, and nothing but poetic invention seems to be back of the place-names Hronesnæs 2805, Ēarnanæs 3031, cf. Hrefnarwudu 2925, Hrefnesholt 2935 (see 2941, 3024 ff.).

As regards the hostile relations between the two tribes, we learn from the Beowulf that the wars extended over a considerable period and were plainly called forth by natural causes of a serious nature such as are easily to be found in the case of neighboring peoples. It would be difficult to understand, on the other hand, why the Jutes and Swedes should persist in warring upon each other in such inveterate fashion.

The military expedition of the Geats in another direction, viz. against the Franks and Frisians, it has been claimed, points to the Jutes rather than to the distant Gōtar.³ Especially the apprehension expressed, after Bēowulf's death, of future attacks from the Merovingians (2911 ff.) has been thought to be natural from the Jutland horizon only.⁴ But

⁴ Sarrazin Kād. 90 f. ascribes this sentiment to the Frisians' point of view dating from an intermediate Frisian stage in the history of the poem. Cf. also Schück L. 4. 39. 48.

just as the poet (through the mouth of the messenger) declared the Geats' fear of renewed wars with the Swedes (2922 f., 2999 ff., 3015 ff.), his thoughts would likewise turn to the continental enemies of Bēowulf's people, who might be expected to seize the opportunity of seeking revenge. The death of the illustrious king, this is apparently the main idea he wishes to convey, will leave the country without protection against any of its foes.

It has been observed that in later literary sources the tradition became confused, and the place of the Geats was taken by Danes and Jutes. Thus, Hugletus (like Gregory's Ch(1)ochilaicus) figures as a Danish king (see above, p. xli), the scene of the first great encounter between Swedes and Geats is shifted (by an evident blunder) from Sweden to Jutland (Vendel),¹ and Aðils gains support from Hrólf Kraki instead of from the Geat king. Yet the interesting fact remains that Bǫðvarr Bjarki, Hróif's famous warrior, who assists Aðils in his fight against Áli, has come from Gautland to the Danish court. On the whole, the Danification of the legends seems to be naturally accounted for by the very early absorption of the Geats into the Swedish state. The loss of their independent existence caused the deeds of the Geatish kings to be attributed to members of other, prominent Scandinavian divisions, the resemblance of the names Gautar and Jǫtar aiding in this process.²

The probability is thus certainly on the side of the Gǫtar, and it requires no great stretch of the imagination to look upon this contest between the two Northern tribes as one of the most significant phases of early Scandinavian history.³

Of the territory occupied by the Gǫtar, Västergötland is commonly believed to correspond to Hygelāc's realm, and his royal town has been conjecturally located at Kungsbacka or at Kungälf (south and north of Göteborg respectively).⁴

IV. The Christian Coloring⁵

The presentation of the story-material in Beowulf has been influenced, to a considerable extent, by ideas derived from Christianity.

The poem abounds, to be sure, in supernatural elements of pre-Christian associations.⁶ Heathen practices are mentioned in several places, such as the vowing of sacrifices at idol fanes (175 ff.), the observing of omens (204), the burning of the dead (3137 ff., 1107 ff.,

² Cf. Stjerna, ch. 4. — The shifting in the traditions of the Heaðo-Bards (see above, pp. xxxv f.) furnishes a kind of parallel.

³ By archeological data Stjerna (l.c.) felt enabled to trace definitely the causes and the results of this struggle.

2124 ff.), which was frowned upon by the Church. The frequent allusions to the power of fate (wyrð, cf. Angl. xxxvi 171 f.), the motive of blood revenge (1384 f., cp. 1669 f., 1256, 1278, 1546 f.), the praise of worldly glory (1387 ff., cp. 2804 ff., 884 f., 954 f.) bear testimony to an ancient background of pagan conceptions and ideals. On the other hand, we hear nothing of angels, saints, relics, of Christ and the cross, of divine worship, church observances, or any particular dogmatic points. Still, the general impression we obtain from the reading of the poem is certainly the opposite of pagan barbarism. We almost seem to move in normal Christian surroundings. God's governance of the world and of every human being, the evil of sin, the doings of the devil, the last judgment, heaven and hell are ever and anon referred to as familiar topics. (See the detailed discussion, Angl. xxxv 113 ff., 249 ff., 453 ff.) Though mostly short, these allusions show by their remarkable frequency how thoroughly the whole life was felt to be dominated by Christian ideas. The author is clearly familiar with the traditional Christian terminology in question and evinces some knowledge¹ of the Bible, liturgy, and ecclesiastical literature. Of specific motives derived from the Old Testament (and occurring in Genesis A also) we note the story of Cain, the giants, and the deluge (107 ff., 1261 ff., 1689 ff.), and the song of Creation (92 ff.).

Furthermore, the transformation of old heathen elements in accordance with Christian thought may be readily observed. The pagan and heroic cremation finds a counterpart in the peaceful burial of the dead, which the Church enforced (1007 f., 2457 f., cp. 445 f., 3107 ff.). The curse placed on the fateful treasure is clothed in a Christian formula (3071 ff.) and is declared to be void before the higher will of God (3054 ff.). By the side of the heathen fate is seen the almighty God. Gæð ā wyrð swā hio scel, exclaims Bēowulf in expectation of the Grendel fight, 455, but again, in the same speech, he avows: ðær gelyfan sceal / Dryhtnes dōme sē þe hine dēað nimeð 440. The functions of fate² and God seem quite parallel: wyrð oft neres / unſægne eorl . . . 572; swā mæg unſæge eaðe gedigan / wēan ond wræcsið sē ðe Waldendes / bylðo gehealdep 2291; cp. 2574 and 979, 2526 and 2527(?); 572 f. and 669 f. Yet God is said to control fate: nefne him wītīg God wyrð forstōde / ond ðæs mannes mōd 1056.³ Moreover, the fundamental contrast between the good God and the blind and hostile fate is shown by the fact that God invariably grants victory (even in the tragic dragon fight, 2874), whereas it is a mysterious, hidden spell that brings about Bēowulf's death, 3067 ff.

³ However, the caution suggested in the preceding footnote certainly applies here.

ethical viewpoint. We are no longer in a genuine pagan atmosphere. The sentiment has been softened and purified. The virtues of moderation, unselfishness, consideration for others are practised and appreciated. The manifest readiness to express gratitude to God on all imaginable occasions (625 ff., 1397 f., 928 f., 1778 f., 1626 f., 1997 f., 2794 ff., 227 f.), and the poet's sympathy with weak and unfortunate beings like Scyld the foundling (7, 46) and even Grendel (e.g. 105, 721, 973, 975, 1351) and his mother (1546 f.), are typical of the new note. Particularly striking is the moral refinement of the two principal characters, Bēowulf and Hrōðgār. Those readers who, impressed by Bēowulf's martial appearance at the beginning of the action, expect to find an aggressive warrior hero of the Achilles or Sigfrid type, will be disposed at times to think him somewhat tame, sentimental, and fond of talking. Indeed, the final estimate of the hero's character by his own faithful thanes lamenting his death is chiefly a praise of Bēowulf's gentleness and kindness: cwædon þæt bē wære wyruld-cyning[a] / manna mildust ond monðwærust, / lēodum liðost ond lofgeornost 3180.

The Christian elements are almost without exception so deeply ingrained in the very fabric of the poem that they cannot be explained away as the work of a reviser or later interpolator.¹ In addition, it is instructive to note that whilst the episodes are all but free from those modern influences,² the main story has been thoroughly imbued with the spirit of Christianity. It is true, the action itself is not modified or visibly influenced by Christianization.³ But the quality of the plot is changed. The author has fairly exalted the fights with fabled monsters into a conflict between the powers of good and of evil. The figure of Grendel, at any rate, while originally an ordinary Scandinavian troll,⁴ and passing in the poem as a sort of man-monster,⁵ is at the same time conceived of as an impersonation of evil and darkness, even an incarnation of the Christian devil. Many of his appellations are unquestionable epithets of Satan (e.g., fēond mancynnes, Godes andsaca, fēond on belle, belle hæsta; cf. Angl. xxxv 250 ff.), he belongs to the wicked progeny of Cain, the first murderer, his actions are represented in a manner suggesting the conduct of the evil one (cf. ib. 257), and he dwells with his demon mother⁶ in a place which calls up visions

³ See note on 1555 f.; Angl. xxxv 482, xxxvi 178.

of hell (see note on 1357ff.). Even the antagonist of the third adventure, though less personally conceived than the Grendel pair, is not free from the suspicion of similar influences, especially as the dragon was in ecclesiastical tradition the recognized symbol of the archfiend. (Angl. xxxvi 188 f.)

That the victorious champion, who overcomes this group of monsters, is a decidedly unusual figure of very uncertain historical associations, has been pointed out before. The poet has raised him to the rank of a singularly spotless hero, a 'defending, protecting, redeeming being',¹ a truly ideal character. In fact, we need not hesitate to recognize features of the Christian Savior in the destroyer of hellish fiends, the warrior brave and gentle, blameless in thought and deed, the king that dies for his people. Nor is the possibility of discovering direct allusions to the person of the Savior to be ignored. While there are not lacking certain hints of this kind in the first part of the poem (942 ff., 1707 ff.), it is especially in the last adventure that we are strongly tempted to look for a deeper, spiritual interpretation. The duality of the motives which apparently prompt Bēowulf to the dragon fight may not be as unnatural as it has sometimes been considered.² Still, it is somewhat strange that the same gold which Bēowulf rejoices in having obtained for his people before the hour of his death (þæs ðe ic mōste mīnum lēodum / ær sǫlyldæge sǫwylc gestrynan 2797), is placed by his mourning thanes into the burial mound; they give it back to the earth — þær hit nū gēn lifað / eldum sǫwā unnyt, sǫwā hit æror wæs 3167.³ Nay, Wiglāf, in the depth of his sorrow which makes him oblivious of all else, expresses the wish that Bēowulf had left the dragon alone to hold his den until the end of the world (3079 ff.). The indubitably significant result of the adventure is the hero's death, and, in the structural plan of the poem, the aim and object of the dragon fight is to lead up to this event, — a death, that is, which involves the destruction of the adversary, but is no less noteworthy in that it partakes of the nature of a self-sacrifice: Nū ic on mādma bord mine bebōhte / frōde feorblege 2799. That also some incidents in the encounter with the dragon lend themselves to comparison with happenings in the garden of Gethsemane, is shown in the notes to ll. 2419 and 2596 ff.

Though delicately kept in the background, this Christian interpretation of the main story on the part of the Anglo-Saxon author gives added strength and tone to the entire poem. It explains one of the great puzzles of our epic. It would indeed be hard to understand why the poet contented himself with a plot of mere fabulous adventures so much inferior to the splendid heroic setting, unless the narrative derived a superior dignity from suggesting the most exalted hero-life known to Christians.

² See above, pp. xxi f. From the standpoint of the poem, the defense of the country and the desire of revenge (wræce leornode 2336) is the primary motive. The winning of the hoard (2535 f., 2747 ff., 2794 ff.), which is the sole object in the corresponding fight of Frotho, could be easily associated with it. (Cf. Angl. xxxvi 191 & n.2.)

V. Structure of the Poem¹

STRUCTURAL PLAN²

The poem of Beowulf consists of two distinct parts joined in a very loose manner and held together only by the person of the hero. The first of these does not in the least require or presuppose a continuation.³ Nor is the second dependent for its interpretation on the events of the first plot, the two references to the 'Grendel part' being quite cursory and irrelevant (2351 ff., 2521). The first part, again, contains two well-developed main incidents (which are closely enough bound together to constitute technically one story), while its third division, 'Bēowulf's Home-Coming,' only serves as a supplement to the preceding major plot. As may be seen from the Argument of the Poem (above, pp. ix ff.), there is a decided structural parallelism in the unfolding of the three great adventures, the fights with the fabulous monsters, namely in setting forth the 'exciting cause,' the preliminaries of the main action, the fight itself, and the relaxation or pause following the climax.⁴

At the same time we note a remarkable gradation in the three great crises of the poem. The fight against Grendel is rather monotonous and seems altogether too short and easy to give much opportunity for excitement — in spite of the horrors of the darkness in which the scene is enacted. The second contest is vastly more interesting by reason of its elaborate, romantic scenery, the variety and definiteness of incidents, the dramatic quality of the battle. The hero is fully armed, uses weapons in addition to his 'hand-grip,' and yet is so hard pressed that only a kind of miracle saves him. There is, moreover, an element of justice in representing the combat with Grendel's mother as more formidable

and pregnant with danger. Grendel, who has ravaged the hall because of the innate wickedness of his heart, deserves to be overcome without difficulty. His mother, on the contrary, is actuated by the laudable desire for revenge (1256 ff., 1278, 1305 f., 1546 f., cf. Antiq. § 5) and, besides, is sought out in her own home; hence a certain amount of sympathy is manifestly due her. Finally, the dragon (who likewise has a kind of excuse for his depredations) is entirely too much for his assailant. We tremble for the venerable king. He takes a special measure for protection (2337 ff.), and is strengthened by the help of a youthful comrade, but the final victory is won only at the cost of the hero's own life. The account of this fight, which, like that against Grendel's mother, falls into three clearly marked divisions, receives a new interest by the introduction of the companions, the glorification of one man's loyalty, and the added element of speech-making.

The plot of each part is surprisingly simple. In the use of genuine heroic motives the main story of Beowulf is indeed inferior to the Finnsburg legend. But the author has contrived to expand the narrative considerably in the leisurely epic fashion, which differentiates it completely from the type of the short lays. Subsidiary as well as important incidents are related in our epic. Extended speeches are freely introduced. There is not wanting picturesque description and elaborate setting. In the first part of the poem, the splendid life at the Danish court with its feasting and ceremonies is graphically portrayed in true epic style. The feelings of the persons are described, and general reflections on characters, events, and situations are thrown in. Last not least, matter more or less detached from the chief narrative is given a place in the poem by way of digressions and episodes.¹

DIGRESSIONS AND EPISODES

About 450 verses in the first part and almost 250 in the second part are concerned with episodic matter, as the following list will show.

- ① The origin of the Scylding line and Scyld's burial (1-52). The fate of Heorot (82^b-85). ② The song of Creation (90^b-98). ③ Cain's punishment, and his offspring (107^b-114; 1261^b-1266^a). ④ Youthful adventures of Bēowulf (419-424^a). ⑤ Settling of Ecgþeow's feud (459-472). ⑥ The Unferð intermezzo [Breca episode] (499-589). Stories of Sigemund and Heremōd (874^b-915). The Finnsburg Tale (1069-1159^a). Allusions to Eormenrīc and Hāma (1197-1201). The fall of Higelāc (1202-1214^a). The destruction of the gigantas (1689^b-1693). Heremōd's tragedy (1709^b-1722^a). Sermon against pride and avarice (1724^b-1757). Story of þrȳð, the wife of Offa (1931^b-1962). The feud between Danes and Heaðo-Bards (2032-2066). Bēowulf's inglorious youth (2183^b-2189).

Elegy of the lone survivor of a noble race (2247-2266). Geatish history: Hygelāc's death in Friesland, Bēowulf's return by swimming, and his guardianship of Heardrēd; the second series of Swedish wars (2354^b-2396). Geatish history: King Hrēðel, the end of Herebeald [the Lament of the Father, 2444-2462^a], the earlier war with the Swedes, Bēowulf's slaying of Dæghrefn in Friesland (2428-2508^a). Wēohstān's slaying of Eanmund in the later Swedish-Geatish war (2611-2625^a). Geatish history: Hygelāc's fall; the battle at Ravenswood in the earlier Swedish war (2910^b-2998).

It will be seen that several of these digressions contain welcome information about the hero's life; others tell of events relating to the Scylding dynasty and may be regarded as a legitimate sort of setting. The allusions to Cain and the giants are called forth by the references to Grendel's pedigree. The story of Creation is a concrete illustration of the entertainments in Heorot. Earlier Danish history is represented by Heremōd, and the relation between Danish and Frisian tribes is shown in the Finn story. Germanic are the legends of Sigemund and of Eormenric and Hāma. To the old continental home of the Angles belongs the allusion to Offa and his queen. The digressions of the second part are devoted chiefly to Geatish history, the exceptions being the 'Elegy of the Last Survivor' and the 'Lament of the Father,' which (like the central portion of Hrōðgār's harangue in the first part) are of a more general character. The frequent mention of Hygelāc's Frankish raid is accounted for by the fact that it is closely bound up both with Geatish history in general and with Bēowulf's life in particular. Accordingly, sometimes the aggression and defeat of Hygelāc are dwelt upon (1202 ff., 2913 ff.), in other passages Bēowulf's bravery is made the salient point of the allusion (2354 ff., 2501 ff.).

Most of the episodes are introduced in a skilful manner and are properly subordinated to the main narrative. For example, the Breca story comes in naturally in a dispute occurring at the evening's entertainment.¹ The legends of Sigemund and of Finnsburg are recited by the scop. The glory of Scyld's life and departure forms a fitting prelude to the history of the Scyldings, who, next to the hero, claim our chief interest in the first part. In several instances the introduction is effected by means of comparison or contrast (in the form of a negative: 1197, 1709, 1931, 2354, [2922], cp. 901). Occasionally the episodic character is clearly pointed out: 2069 ic sceal forð spreca / gēn ymbe Grendel; 1722 ðū þē lār be þon . . . , ic þis gid be þē / āwraec. The facts of Geatish history, it cannot be denied, are a little too much in evidence and retard the narrative of the second part rather seriously. Quite far-fetched may seem the digression on þrýð, which is brought in very abruptly and which, like the Heremōd tale, shows the poet's disposition to point a moral.

In extent the episodic topics range from cursory allusions of a few lines (82^b-85, 1197-1201) to complete and complicated narratives (the adventure with Breca, the Finnsburg legend, the Heaðo-Bard feud, the battle at Ravenswood).

A few passages, like the old spearman's speech (2047-56) and the recital of the Ravenswood battle (2924 ff.), give the impression of being taken without much change (in substance) from older lays. The Elegy of the Last Survivor reminds us of similar elegiac passages in Old English poetry (see Wanderer, passim, and Ruin). The fine picture of Scyld's sea-burial, and the elaboration of detail in the Bēowulf-Breca adventure seem to be very largely, if not exclusively, the poet's own work. Most of the episodes, however, are merely summaries of events told in general terms and are far removed both from the style of independent lays (like the Finnsburg Fragment) and from the broad, expansive epic manner. The distinctly allusive character of a number of them shows that the poet assumed a familiarity with the full story on the part of his audience.

On the whole, we have every reason to be thankful for these episodes, which not only add fulness and variety to the central plot, but disclose a wealth of authentic heroic song and legend, a magnificent historic background. Still we may well regret that those subjects of intensely absorbing interest play only a minor part in our epic, having to serve as a foil to a story which in itself is of decidedly inferior weight.

Upwards of 1300 lines are taken up with speeches.² The major part of these contain digressions, episodes, descriptions, and reflections, and thus tend to delay the progress of the narrative. But even those which may be said to advance the action, are lacking in dramatic quality; they are characterized by eloquence and ceremonial dignity. The shortest speech consists of four lines (the coast-guard's words of God-speed, 316-19), the longest extends to 160 lines (Bēowulf's report to Hygelāc, 2000-2151, 2155-62); almost as long is the messenger's discourse (128 ll.: 2900-3027); next follow the Finn recital (90 ll.: 1069-1159^a), Hrōðgār's harangue (85 ll.: 1700-1784), Bēowulf's reminiscences (84 ll.: 2426-2509), his answer to Unferð's version of the Breca story (77 ll.: 530-606).³

³ There are in the Beowulf some 40 instances of direct discourse averaging in the neighborhood of 30 lines (i.e., if the Finnsburg episode is included).

of their introduction. Most frequently the verb mædelode 'made a speech' is employed, either in set expressions occurring with the formula-like regularity well known from the Homeric epic, as

Hrōsgār mæpelode, helm Scyldinga

Wiglāf mæpelode, Wēobstānes sunu

(see Glossary of Proper Names), or in combination with descriptive, characterizing, explanatory matter intruded between the announcement and the actual beginning of the speech, e.g. Bēowulf mæpelode — on bim byrne scān, / searonet seowed smibes orþancum 405 f.² Other terms of introduction like mepelwordum frægn 236, andswarode . . . wordbord onlēac 258 f., lyt swīgode . . . sægde ofer ealle 2897 ff. (cp. 1215) likewise indicate the formality of the occasions.³

The prominent and rather independent position of the speeches is signaled by the fact that, in contrast with the usual practice of enjambement, nearly all the speeches begin and end with the full line. (The only exceptions are 287^b, 342^b, 350^b, 2511^b, 2518^b, 3114^b; 389^a (?) (1159^a).)

About one tenth of the lines devoted to speech is in the form of indirect discourse, which is properly preferred for less important functions (in 'general narrative') and in the case of utterances by a collection of people (175, 202, 227, 857, 987, 1595, 1626, 3172, 3180). The use of (ge)cwæð as immediate verb of introduction, following a preparatory statement of a more general character, should be mentioned here. E.g., swā begnornodon Gēata lēode / blāfordes (bry)re . . . , cwædon þæt . . . 3180 (so 92, 1810, 2158, 2939; 857, 874).

By far the most felicitous use of the element of discourse is made in the first part, especially in the earlier division of it, from the opening of the action proper to the Grendel fight (189–709). The speeches occurring in it belong largely to the 'advancing' type, consist mainly of dialogue (including two instances of the type 'question: reply: reply,' 237–300, 333–355⁴), and are an essential factor in creating the impression of true epic movement. As the poem continues, the speeches increase in length and deliberation. The natural form of dialogue⁵ is in the last part completely superseded by addresses without answer, some of them being virtually speeches in form only.⁶

⁴ Cp. 1318–1396 (indirect discourse: reply: reply).

⁶ The length of several of these is somewhat disguised by the fact that they are

The 'Grendel part' also shows the greatest variety, as regards the occasions for speech-making and the number of speakers participating (Bēowulf, the coast-guard, Wulfgār, Hrōðgār, Unferð, the scop, Wealhþēow). In its continuation (i 2) the use of discourse is practically limited to an interchange of addresses between Bēowulf and Hrōðgār.

In a class by itself stands the pathetic soliloquy, 2247 ff.

In spite of a certain sameness of treatment the poet has managed to introduce a respectable degree of variation in adapting the speeches to their particular occasions. Great indeed is the contrast between Bēowulf's straightforward, determined vow of bravery (632-638) and Hrōðgār's moralizing oration, which would do credit to any preacher (1700-1784). Admirable illustrations of varying moods and kinds of utterance are Bēowulf's salutation to Hrōðgār (407-455) and his brilliant reply to the envious trouble-maker Unferð (530-606). A masterpiece is the queen's exhibition of diplomatic language by means of veiled allusion (1169 ff.). A finely appropriate emotional quality characterizes Bēowulf's dying speeches (2729 ff., 2794 ff., 2813 ff.).

That some of the speeches follow conventional lines of heroic tradition need not be doubted. This applies to the type of the gylpcwide before the combat (675 ff., 1392 ff., 2510 ff.), the 'comitatus' speech or exhortation of the retainers (2633 ff., cp. Bjarkamál [Par. § 7: Saxo ii 59 ff.], Mald. 212 ff., 246 ff., Finnsb. 37 ff.), the inquiry after a stranger's name and home (237 ff.; cp. Finnsb. 22 f., Hildebr. 8 ff., also Hel. 554 ff.). The absence of battle challenge and defiance (see Finnsb. 24 ff.) is an obvious, inherent defect of our poem.

LACK OF STEADY ADVANCE

The reader of the poem very soon perceives that the progress of the narrative is frequently impeded. Looseness is, in fact, one of its marked peculiarities. Digressions and episodes, general reflections in the form of speeches, an abundance of moralizing passages (see below, pp. lxi f.) interrupt the story. The author does not hesitate to wander from the subject. When he is reminded of a feature in some way related to the matter in hand, he thinks it perfectly proper to speak of it. Hence references to the past are intruded in unexpected places. The manner of Scyld's wonderful arrival as a child is brought out incidentally by way of comparison with the splendor of his obsequies (43 ff.). Bēowulf's renown at the height of his career calls to mind the days of his youth when he was held in disrespect (2183 ff.).¹ No less broken up into two or three portions separated by a few lines of narrative or comment (2426-2537, 2633-2668, 2794-2816, 3077-3119; so in the preceding division: 2000-2162).

fond is the poet of looking forward to something that will happen in the near or distant future. The mention of the harmony apparently reigning at the court of Hrōðgār gives an opportunity to hint at subsequent treachery (1018 f., 1164 f., 1180 ff.). The building of the hall Heorot calls up the picture of its destruction by fire (82 ff.).¹ It is not a little remarkable that in the account of the three great fights of the hero, care has been taken to state the outcome of the struggle in advance (696 ff., 706 f., 734 ff., 805 ff.; 1553 ff.; 2341 ff., 2420 ff., 2573 ff., 2586 ff., cp. 2310 f.). Evidently disregard of the element of suspense was not considered a defect in story telling.²

Sometimes the result of a certain action is stated first, and the action itself mentioned afterwards (or entirely passed over). E.g., pā was frōd cyning . . . on brēon mōde, / syðþan hē aldorþegn unlyfigendne . . . wisse 1306 f.³ In this way a fine abruptness is attained: brā wide sprong, / syðþan hē æfter dēaðe drepe prōwade 1588.⁴ Thus it also happens that a fact of first importance is strangely subordinated (as in 1556).⁵

There occur obvious gaps in the narrative. That Wealhþeow left the hall in the course of the first day's festival, or that Bēowulf brought the sword Hrunting back with him from the Grendel cave, is nowhere mentioned, but both facts are taken for granted at a later point of the story (664 f., 1807 ff.).⁶

Furthermore, different parts of a story are sometimes told in different places, or substantially the same incident is related several times from different points of view. A complete, connected account of the history of the dragon's hoard is obtained only by a comparison of the passages, 3049 ff., 3069 ff., 2233 ff. The brief notice of Grendel's first visit in Heorot (122 f.) is supplemented by a later allusion containing additional detail (1580 ff.).⁷ The repeated references to the various Swedish wars, the frequent allusions to Hygelāc's Frankish foray, the two versions of the Heremōd legend, the review of Bēowulf's great fights by means of his report to Hygelāc (and to Hrōðgār) and through Wiglāf's announcement to his companions (2874 ff.; cp. also 2904 ff.) are well-known cases in point.

Typical examples of the rambling, dilatory method — the forward, backward, and sideward movements — are afforded by the introduc-

² The author of Judith uses the same method (ll. 16, 19, 59 f., 63 ff., 72 f.). On predictions of a tragic issue in the Nibelungenlied, see Radke L 7. 37. 47 f.

⁴ Other cases of abrupt transition are enumerated by Schücking, Sa. 139 ff.

⁶ Cp. the omission of Heorogār's reign (64, 465 ff.).

VI. Tone, Style, Meter²

Although a poem of action, Beowulf is more than a narrative of notable events. Not that the author is lacking in the art of telling a story effectively. But a mere objective narration is not his chief aim. The poet is not satisfied with reciting facts, heroic and stirring though they be. Nor does he trouble to describe in a clear, concrete manner the outward appearance of the persons, even of the principal hero, though he sets forth, with eloquence, the striking impression he makes on others (247 ff., cp. 369 f.). But he takes the keenest interest in the inner significance of the happenings, the underlying motives, the manifestation of character. He loses no opportunity of disclosing what is going on in the minds of his actors. He is ever ready to analyze the thoughts and feelings of Bēowulf and Hrōðgār, the Danes and the Geats, Grendel and his kind, even down to the sea-monsters (549, 562, 1431) and the birds of prey (3024 ff.). Their intentions, resolutions, expectations, hopes, fears, longings, rejoicings, and mental sufferings engage his constant attention.³ In a moment of intensest action, such as the combat with Grendel, the state of mind of the characters is carefully taken note of (710 ff.). An elaborate psychological analysis runs through the central part of Hrōðgār's great moral discourse (1724 ff.).⁴ Delicacy as well as strength of emotion are finely depicted (see 862 f., 1602 ff.,⁵ 1853 ff., 1894, 1915 f., 2893 ff., 3031 f.), and numerous little touches indicate an appreciation of kind-heartedness (e.g., 46, 203^b, 469^b, 521^a, 1262^b, 1275, 1547^a, 2434^b, 3093^a).

With especial fondness does the author dwell on the feelings of grief and sadness. Hrōðgār's sorrow for his thanes (129 ff., 473 ff., 1322 ff.), his wonderfully sentimental farewell to his young friend (1870 ff.), Bēowulf's yielding to a morbid reverie when least expected (442 ff., cp. 562 f.), the gloomy forebodings of his men and their yearning love of home (691 ff.),¹ the ever recurring surgings of care,² the abundance of epithets denoting sadness of heart³ give ample evidence of the pervading influence of this characteristic trait. It almost seems as if the victories of the hero and the revelries in the hall produce only a temporary state of happiness, since 'ever the latter end of joy is woe' (119, 128, 1007 f., 1078 ff., 1774 f.).⁴ Even Wigláf's stern rebuke (grim andswaru) of his cowardly comrades is tinged with melancholy reflections (2862 ff.). Full of profound pathos are the elegies of the last survivor (2247 ff.) and the lonely father (2444 ff.). The regret for the passing of youth (2111 ff.), the lament for the dead (1117 f., 1323 ff., 2446 f., 3152 ff., 3171 ff.), the tragic conflict of duties (Hrēðel, 2462 ff.; Hengest, 1138 ff.; Ingeld, 2063 ff.),⁵ the lingering fear of a catastrophe in the royal family of the Scyldings (cf. above, pp. xxxii, xxxvi), the anticipation of the downfall of the Geats' power (cf. above, p. xli) aptly typify the prevailing Teutonic mood of seriousness, solemnity, and sadness. But nowhere appears the tragic pathos more subtly worked into the story than in Bēowulf's own death. The venerable king succeeds in overcoming the deadly foe, but suffers death himself; he wins the coveted hoard, but it is of no use to him or his folk; he enters upon the task with the purest intention, even searching his heart for sins he may have unwittingly committed (2329 ff.), but he encounters a fatal curse of which he knew nothing (3067 f.).

The scenery of the poem — sea and seashore, lake and fen-district, the royal hall and its surroundings, the Grendel and the dragon cave — is in the main sketched briefly, yet withal impressively. The large part which the sea played in the life of the Beowulfian peoples, finds expression in an astonishing wealth of terms applied to it⁶ and in numerous allusions to its dominating geographical importance.⁷ Clear visualization and detailed description of scenery should not be expected, as a rule.⁸ Elements of nature are introduced as a background for human action or as symbols of sentiment. Nightfall, dawn, the advent of spring¹ signalize new stages in the narrative. The storm on the wintry ocean accompanies the struggle of the courageous swimmers.² The swirl of the blood-stained lake tells of deadly conflict (847 ff., 1422, 1593 f.). The funeral ship is covered with ice (33), and frost-bound trees hang over the forbidding water (1363). The moors of the dreary desert, steep stone-banks, windy headlands, mist and darkness are fit surroundings for the lonely, wretched stalkers of mystery. 'Joyless' (821) is their abode. Strikingly picturesque and emotional in quality is the one elaborate landscape picture representing the Grendel lake (1357 ff.), which conveys all the horror of the somber scenery and appeals forcefully to our imagination — a justly celebrated masterpiece of English nature poetry.

In such a gloomy atmosphere there can be no room for levity, fun, or humor. Passages which to modern readers might seem to be humorous were certainly not so meant by the Anglo-Saxon author (e.g., 138 f., 560 f., 793 f., 841 f.). On the contrary, he is always in earnest, notably intense, and bent on moralizing. Acting in a way like a Greek chorus, the poet takes pleasure in adding his philosophic comment or conclusion, or, it may be, his slightly emotional expression of approval or censure. Thus, individual occurrences are viewed as illustrations of a general rule, subject to the decrees of fate or of God.³ The course of the world, the inevitableness of death are set forth.⁴ The author bestows praise and blame upon persons and their actions, sometimes in brief quasi-exclamatory clauses like þæt wæs gōd cýning 11, 2390; ne bið swýlc earges sið 2541; swā hyt nō sceolde / (iren ærgōd) 2585; ⁵ sometimes, however, by turning aside and pointing a moral, with manifest relish, for its own sake. Thus, courage, loyalty, liberality, wisdom are held up as qualities worthy of emulation. E.g., swā sceal (geong g)uma gōde gewyrcean etc. 20 ff.; swā sceal mæg dōn, / nealles in-witnet ðorum bregdon etc. 2166 ff.⁶ The punishment of hell is commented upon by way of warning and of contrast with the joys of heaven: swā bið þām ðe sceal. . . sãwle bescūfan / in fýres fæpm. . . 183 ff.

As to form, the gnomic elements are clearly marked by the use of

The abstracting, generalizing tendency often takes the form of recapitulating or explanatory remarks like wæs se irenbrēat / wāpnum gewurpad 330 f., sume on wale crungon 1113, wæs tō fast on hām 137, swylc wæs pēaw hyra 178;³ of illustrative comparisons, e.g. ne wæs his drohtōð pær, / swylce bē on ealderdagum ær gemētte 756 f., ne gefrægn ic frēondlicor fēower mādmas . . . gummanna fela . . . oðrum gesellan 1027 ff.;⁴ or of reviews of present conditions and comments on the results achieved, e.g. hæfde Kyningwuldor / Grendle tōgēanes . . . seleweard āseted . . . 665 ff.; hæfde pā gefælsod . . . sele Hrōðgāres . . . 825 ff.⁵ The course of events is carefully analyzed, with cause and effect duly noted: pā wæs gesyne, þæt se sið ne ðāb etc. 3058 ff.

Although the moralizing turn and also some of the maxims may be regarded as a common Germanic inheritance,⁶ the extent to which this feature as well as the fondness for introspection has been carried is distinctly Beowulfian and shows the didactic and emotional nature of the author himself.

The characters of the poem are in keeping with the nobility of its spirit and the dignity of its manner. Superior to, and different from, all the others, strides the mighty figure of Bēowulf through the epic. In his threefold rôle as adventurous man in arms (wrecca), loyal thane of his overlord, and generous, well-beloved king he shows himself a perfect hero, without fear and without reproach, — the strongest of his generation, valorous, resolute, great-hearted and noble of soul, wise and steadfast, kind, courteous, and unselfish, a truly 'happy warrior.'⁷ Next to him rank Hrōðgār, the grand and kindly ruler, full of years, wisdom, and eloquence, and the young Wiglāf, who typifies the faithful retainer, risking his life to save his dear master. In a second group ⁷ Passages of direct characterization: 196 ff., 858 ff., 913 ff., 1705 ff., 1844 ff., 2177 ff., (2736 ff.), 3180 ff. The poet very skilfully prepares the reader for a true appreciation of Bēowulf's greatness by dwelling on the impression which his first appearance makes on strangers, 247 ff., 369 f. belong those lesser figures like Wealhþēow, the noble, gracious, farsighted queen, Unferð, that singular personality of the 'Thersites' order, Hygelāc, the admirable, if somewhat indefinitely sketched member of Geat royalty, and his still more shadowy queen Hygd. Thirdly we find that company of mostly nameless followers of the chiefs, Scyldings and Geats, among whom the coast-guard and the herald Wulf-gār stand forth prominently. Finally the villains are represented by the three enemy monsters, partly humanized and one of them at least having a name of his own. Though the majority of the characters are still more or less types, they are, on the whole, clearly drawn and leave a distinct picture in our minds. Certainly the delineation of the chief actor surpasses by far anything we find in other Anglo-Saxon poems. Even some of the persons mentioned only episodically, like Ongenþēow, Hengest, and the old 'spear-warrior' of the Heaðo-Bards, seem to assume a lifelike reality. Of special psychological interest are Unferð, Heremōd, and þrȳð. Characterization by contrast¹ is seen in the cases of þrȳð-Hygd (1926 ff.) and Heremōd-Bēowulf (1709 ff., cp. 913 ff.).

The Beowulfian society is noble, aristocratic,² and, considering the age it represents, pre-eminently remarkable for its refinement and courtly demeanor. The old Germanic military ideals³ are still clearly recognizable, notwithstanding the Christian retouching of the story — the prime requirement of valor, the striving for fame and the upholding of one's honor,⁴ a stern sense of duty,⁵ the obligation of blood revenge,⁶ and above all the cardinal virtue of loyalty which ennobles the 'comitatus' relation⁷ and manifests itself in unflinching devotion and self-sacrifice on the part of the retainer and in kindness, generosity, and protection on the part of the king. To have preserved for us a faithful picture of many phases of the ancient Germanic life in its material as well as its moral aspect, is indeed one of the chief glories of Beowulf, and one which, unlike its literary merit, has never been called in question. The poem is a veritable treasure-house of information on 'Germanic antiquities,' in which we seem at times to hear echoes of Tactus' famous Germania, whilst the authenticity of its descriptions has been in various ways confirmed by rich archeological finds especially in the Scandinavian countries. A detailed consideration of this subject is of supreme interest, but cannot be attempted in this place. Its study will be facilitated, however, by the 'Index of Antiquities,' Appendix II, in addition to the general Bibliography, L 9.

In the matter of diction our poem is true to its elevated character and idealizing manner. The vocabulary of Beowulf, like that of most Old English poems, is very far removed from the language of prose. A large proportion of its words is virtually limited to poetic diction,¹ many of them being no doubt archaisms, while the abundance of compounds used testifies to the creative possibilities of the alliterative style. A good many terms are nowhere recorded outside of Beowulf, and not a few of these may be confidently set down as of the poet's own coinage. Indeed, by reason of its wealth, variety, and picturesqueness of expression the language of the poem is of more than ordinary interest. A host of synonyms enliven the narrative, notably in the vocabulary pertaining to kings and retainers,² war and weapons,² sea and seafaring.³ Generously and withal judiciously the author employs those picturesque circumlocutory words and phrases known as 'kennings,'⁴ which, emphasizing a certain quality of a person or thing, are used in place of the plain, abstract designation, e.g. helmberend, wundenstefna, ýsliða, lyfifloga, hæðstapa, bronnād; bēaga brytta, gold-wine gumena, homera lāf, ýða gewealc, or such as involve metaphorical language, like rodoreð candel, beofenes gim, bānhūs, beadolēoma.

Applying the term to verbal expressions also, we may mention, e.g., the concrete periphrases for 'going' (hwanon ferigeað gē fātte scyldas etc. 333 ff., or 2539 f., 2661 f., 2754 f., 2850 f.), 'holding court' (bringas dælan 1970), 'conquering' (monegum mægþum meodosetla

² See Antiq. §§ 1, 2, 8.

³ See above, p. lx. Some 30 terms are used for 'hall,' 'house' (those confined to poetry being marked here with †): būs, ærn, reced†, flet, beal(l), sæld†, sælt†, sele(†), bold, burb, geard, bof, wic, besides compounds; some 20 for 'man,' 'men': mon(n), eorl, ceorl, wær, gumaf†, rinc†, beorn†, secg†, bæle(ð)†, fīrast†, niððast†, yldet†; landbūend, grundbūend†, foldbūend(e)†; sæwberend†; ylda, niðða, gumena bearn†; 7 for 'son': sunu, magaf†, magof†, byre, bearn, caforaf†, yrfeweard; 4 for 'heaven': beofon, rodor, swegt†, wolcnu; 3 for 'hand': band, mund(†), folm(†); 4 for 'blood': blōd, drēor†, beofort†, swāt(†) (cp. l. 2692 f.); 3 for 'wound': wund, ben(n)†, (syn-)doh(†); 6 (9) for 'mind': mōd, sefa, byget†, mynet†, ferbō†, brēostbord†, (mōd-sefaf†, -gebygd†, -geponc(†)); 9 for 'time': tid, bwīl, fyrst, fæc, præg, sæl, mæl(†), stund, sīð; 3 (6) for 'old': cald, frōd(†), gamol† (bār, gamolfeax†, blondenfeax†); etc.

It is no matter for surprise that the kennings very often take the form of compounds. Obviously, composition is one of the most striking and inherently significant elements of the diction. Descriptive or intensive in character, — at times, it is true, merely cumbersome and otiose, the nominal (i.e. substantive and adjective) compounds make their weight strongly felt in the rhetoric of the poem. On an average there occurs a compound in every other line, and a different compound in every third line. Fully one third of the entire vocabulary, or some 1070 words, are compounds,¹ so that in point of numbers, the Beowulf stands practically in the front rank of Old English poems.

In comparison with the paramount importance of compounds or kennings, the use of characterizing adjectives is a good deal less prominent, at any rate less striking. These denote mostly general or permanent qualities and make a stronger appeal to sentiment and moral sense than to imagination. By means of the superlative² the rhetorical effect is occasionally heightened: būsa sēlest 146, bræglā sēlest 454, healsbēaga mæst 1195, etc. Stereotyped ornamental epithets of the familiar Homeric variety like πολύμητις Ὀδυσσεύς, γλαυκῶπις Ἀθήνη, πῖος Ἄeneas, i.e. those appearing inseparably attached to certain persons and objects, are sought in vain in the Beowulf.³

On the whole, we note a scarcity of conscious poetic metaphors,⁴ by the side of the more numerous ones of faded and only dimly felt metaphorical quality, and similes of the Homeric order are entirely lacking, — only a few brief, formula-like comparisons being scattered through the first part of the poem.⁵

⁵ See 218: fugle gelicost, 727: ligge gelicost, 985: style gelicost, 1608: þæt hit

Highly characteristic and much fancied by the Beowulf poet is the familiar trope of litotes, which generally assumes the form of a negative expression, as in nē mē swōr fela / āða on unriht 273 f., nō þæt ȝðe byð ('impossible') 1002; 793 f., 841 f., 1071 f., 1076 f., 1167 f., 1930; see also lyt, sum, dæl, dēað- (fyl-, gūð-) wērig, forbealdan in the Glossary. The negation sometimes appears in conjunction with a comparative as in 38, 1027 ff., 1842 f., 2432 f., and even with two comparatives: 1011 f.

As regards the handling of the sentence, by far the most important rhetorical figure, in fact the very soul of the Old English poetical style, is of course the device of 'variation,' which may be studied to perfection in the Beowulf.

The still more directly retarding element of parenthesis or parenthetical exclamation, though naturally far less essential and frequent, is likewise part and parcel of the stylistic apparatus. In contrast with variation, it is nearly always placed in (or begins with) the second half of the line.¹

It should not fail to be observed that there is an organic relation between the rhetorical characteristics and certain narrower linguistic facts as well as the broader stylistic features and peculiarities of the narrative. Thus, tautological compounds like dēaðcwealm, redundant combinations like bēga gebwæpres 1043² and those of the type wudu walsceaftas,³ the ubiquitous element of variation, and the repetitions in the telling of the story are only different manifestations of the same general tendency. The freedom of word-order by which closely related words may become separated from each other (see e.g., 1 f., 270 f., 450 f., 473 f., 1285 ff., 1488 ff., 2098 f., 2448 f., 2886 ff.), and especially the retardation by means of variations and parenthetical utterances, find their counterpart in the disconnectedness of narration as shown in digressions, episodes, and irregular, circuitous movements. The following up of a pronoun by a complementary descriptive phrase—in the manner of variation—, as in hī . . . swāse gesīpas 28 f., þæt . . . Grendles dāda 194 f. (cp. 1563, 1674 ff., 77 f., 350 ff.), is matched by the peculiar method of introducing the hero and his antagonist, who at their first mention are referred to as familiar persons and later on receive fuller attention by specifying name and family history. (See 86 ff. [note the definite article], 194 ff., also 331 ff. [Wulfgār], cp. 12 ff.) Again, the very restatement of an idea in a set of different words (variation) may remind us of the noteworthy way of reporting a speech in studiously varied terms (361 ff.). The preponderance of the eal gemealt ise gelicost (amplified by a brief explanatory clause or two not unlike those used, e.g., in 1033 f., 1327, 2544, 3117 ff., 1648). The pretty lines 1570 ff.: Lixte se lōma . . . efne swā of befe ne hādre scīneð / rodores candel can hardly be said to contain an imaginative comparison.

nominal over the verbal element,¹ one of the outstanding features of the ancient diction, runs parallel to the favorite practice of stating merely the result of an action and of dwelling on a state or situation when a straightforward account of action would seem to be called for.² The choice of emotional epithets and the insertion of exclamatory clauses are typical of the noble pathos which inspires the entire manner of presentation, whilst the semantic indefiniteness of many words and expressions³ recalls the lack of visualization, not to say of realism, in regard to persons and places. The indirectness of litotes is similar in kind to the author's veiled allusions to the conduct of Hrōðulf and to the remarkable reserve practised in the Christian interpretation of the story.

As a matter of course, the Beowulfian stylistic apparatus (taken in its widest sense) was to a great extent traditional, deeply rooted in time-honored Germanic, more particularly West Germanic, practice. Its conventional character can hardly be overestimated. Substantial evidence in detail is afforded by its large stock of formulas, set combinations of words, phrases of transition, and similar stereotyped elements.⁴ One may mention, e.g., the mæselode-formulas (see above, p. lvi); expressions marking transition like næs ðā long tō ðon, / þæt 2591, 2845 (83?, 134, 739); copulative alliterative phrases like ord ond ecg, wæpen ond ge-wæðu, mēaras ond mādmās, wigum ond wæpnum (2395), word ond weorc, synn ond sacu; nē lēof nē lād (511), grim ond grædig, micel ond mære, habban ond healdan, besides a few riming combinations: bond ond rond, sæl ond mæl, gē wið fēond gē wið frēond (1864), frōd ond gōd; prepositional phrases like in (on) burgum, geardum, wicum; under wolcnum, beofenum, roderum, swegele; mid yldum; constructions of the type brēac þonne mōste 1487, 1177, wyrce sē þe mōte 1387, hýde sē ðe wyllle 2766, cp. 1003, 1379, 1394; first half-lines consisting of a noun or adjective (sometimes adverb) and prepositional phrase, like geong in geardum 13, mārne be mæste 36, aldor of earde 56, sinc æt symle 81, blūdne in healle 89, heard under helme (see Glossary : under), brapor on holme 543, etc. Of especial interest are the gefragn-formulas, which unmistakably point to the 'preliterary' stage of poetry, when the poems lived on the lips of singers, and oral transmission was the only possible source of information. Emphasizing, as they do, the importance of a fact — known by common report — or the truth of the story, they are naturally employed to introduce poems or sections of poems¹ (e.g., 1 f., 837, 2694, 2752), to point out some sort of progress in the narrative (74, 2480, 2484, 2773, 2172, 433, 776), to call attention to the greatness of a person, object, or action (38, 70, 1196, 1197, 1955, 2685, 2837, 575, 582, 1027). They add an element of variety to the plain statement of facts, and are so eminently useful and convenient that the poets may draw on this stock for almost any occasion.²

Owing to the accumulation of a vast store of ready forms and formulas, which could also be added to and varied at will, repetition of phrases (mostly half-lines, but also some full lines) is observable throughout the poem.³ For example, to cite some recurrent phrases not found outside of Beowulf, — bordweard hælepa occurs 1047, 1852; æpeling ærgōd, 130, 2342, [1329]; wyrsan wīgfreca, 1212, 2496; brýðlic þegna hēap, 400, 1627; geongum gār-wigan, 2674, 2811; eafoð ond ellen, 602, 902, 2349; feorhbealu frēcne, 2250, 2537; morþorbealo māga, 1079, 2742; sorhfullne sið, 512, 1278, 1429 (cp. 2119); ealdsweord eotenisc, 1558, 2616, 2979; gomel on giobðe, 2793, 3095; heard bondlocen, 322, 551; ginfaestan gife fē him God sealde, 1271, 2182; æfter hælepa bryre, hwate Scyldungas, 2052, 3005 (MS.); ær (þæt) hē þone grundwong ongytan mehte, 1496, 2770; 1700, cp. 2864; 47^b -48^a, cp. 2767^b -68^a.

Apart from the matter of formulas, there are not wanting reminders of a primitive or, perhaps, 'natural' method of expression, suggesting the manner of conversational talk or of recitation before a crowd of listeners. E.g., the free and easy use of personal pronouns and the sudden change of subject which leave one in doubt as to the person meant,⁴ the preference for paratactic construction,⁵ the failure to express logical relations between facts,¹ the simple way of connecting sentences by the monotonous þā or of dispensing with connectives altogether, not to mention the exclamatory element, the fondness for repetition by the side of occasional omission, the jerky movement and lack of a steady flow in the narrative. On the other hand, no proof is needed to show that the style of our poem goes far beyond the limits of primitive art; the epic manner of Beowulf is vastly different from that of the ballad or the short lay.

The good judgment and taste of the author are shown in his finely discriminating way of handling the inherited devices of rhetoric. He increases the force of graphic description or pathetic utterance by bringing together groups of compounds, e.g. in 130 f., 320 ff., 475 ff., 1710 ff., 2900 ff., and achieves a wonderful impressiveness in a single line: nȳdwracu niþgrim, nihtbealwa mæst 193. A notably artistic effect is produced by the repetition of a couple of significant lines in prominent position, 196 f., 789 f.; cp. 133 f., 191 f. Accumulation of variations is indulged in for the sake of emphasis, as in characterizing a person, describing an object or a situation, and in address; e.g., 2602 ff., 1228 ff., 1557 ff., 3071 ff.; 50 ff., 1345 f., 1004 ff.; 426 ff., 1474 ff.; 1357 ff., 847 ff., 858 ff.; 512 ff., 910 ff. On the other hand, not a single variation interrupts Bēowulf's most manly and businesslike speech, 1384 ff., which thus contrasts strongly with the plaintive lingering on the depredations wrought by Grendel, 147 ff. Again, a succession of short, quick, asyndetic clauses is expressive of rapidity of action, 740 ff., 1566 ff., and appropriately applied to incisive exhortations, 658 ff., 2132 ff., whereas the long, elegant periods of Hrōðgār's farewell speech, 1841 ff., convey the sentimental eloquence of an aged ruler and fatherly friend. Clearly, the author has mastered the art of varying his style in response to the demands of the occasion.

Latin influence, it may be briefly mentioned, is perceptible in the figures of antithesis, 183 ff., anaphora, 864 ff., 2107 ff., polysyndeton, 1763 ff., 1392 ff. Also Latin models for certain kennings and metaphors (e.g., appellations of God and the devil [Grendel]), and for terms denoting 'dying' and 'living') have been pointed out.²

avoidable result of the paratactic tendency is the extreme frequency of the semicolon in editions.

² Cf. Rankin L 7. 25, passim; Angl. xxxv 123 ff., 249 ff., 458 ff., 467 ff.; Arch. cxxvi 348 ff. Some examples are liffræa ('auctor vitæ'), wuldres wealdend, wuldurcýning, kýningwuldor; feond mancynnes, ealdgewinna, Godes andsaca, helle hæfta ('captive inferni'); worolde brúcan; ylda bearn ('filii hominum'). — Of Latin loan-words the following occur in Beowulf: ancor, camp, (cempa), candel, cēap(?), cēaster(bænd), dēofol, disc, draca, gigant, gim, mil(gemearc), nōn, ōr, orc, orc(nēas), scrifan (for-, ge-scrifan), segn, siræt, symbol(?), syrce(?), (hærg)træf (?), weal(l), wic, wīn.

Our final judgment of the style of Beowulf cannot be doubtful. Though lacking in lucidity, proportion, and finish of form as required by modern taste or by Homeric and Vergilian standards, the poem exhibits admirable technical skill in the adaptation of the available means to the desired ends. It contains passages which in their way are nearly perfect, and strong, noble lines which thrill the reader and linger in the memory. The patient, loving student of the original no longer feels called upon to apologize for Beowulf as a piece of literature.

METER

The impression thus gained is signally strengthened by a consideration of the metrical form, which is of course most vitally connected with the style of Old English poetry. It is easy to see, e.g., that there is a close relation between the principle of enjambement and the all-important use of variation, and that the requirement of alliteration was a powerful incentive to bringing into full play a host of synonyms, compounds,¹ and recurrent formulas. In the handling of the delicate instrument of verse the poet shows a strict adherence to regularity and a surprisingly keen appreciation of subtle distinctions which make Beowulf the standard of Anglo-Saxon metrical art. Suffice it to call attention to the judicious balancing of syntactical and metrical pause and the appropriate distribution of the chief metrical types (ascending, descending) and their subdivisions.

Naturally, our estimate of the intrinsic merit of various rhythmical forms does not rest on a basis of scientific exactitude. We can only guess the psychological values of the different types² and their combinations. One would like, indeed, to associate type A with steady progress or quiet strength, to call B the rousing, exclamatory type,³ to consider type C the symbol of eagerness checked or excitement held in suspense; D 1-3, and D 4, though heavier and less nervous, would seem to have an effect similar to C and B respectively; E with its ponderous opening and short, emphatic close is likely to suggest solemnity and force.⁴ However this may be, we can hardly fail to perceive the skill in the selection of successive types in syntactical units, like B + A / A : 80-81^a, C + A / A : 96-97^a, 99-100^a, B / A + E : 109^b-110, C + A / A + C / A : 2291-93^a, or in the case of longer

² According to Sievers's classification. (See Appendix iii.)

⁴ It fittingly marks a close, as in 5^b, 8^b, 17^b, 19^b, 110^b, 193^b.

periods, C + A / D₄ + A / A // + C / A (//) + C / A // B : 1368-72, and with totally different effect, A₃ + A / D₄x + A / A₃ + A / C + A / A₃ + A / A // + B / C + A : 1728-34. A nice gradation is attained by the sequence of types, 49^b-50^a : him wæs geōmor sefa, / murnende mōd.

Quite expressive appear the rhythmical variations of the elegy, 2247 ff. Again, the pleasing rhythm of the semi-lyrical passage, 92 ff. is in marked contrast with the vigor (aided by asyndeton and riming congruence) of 741^b-42 : slāt unwearnum, / bāt bānlocan, blōd ēdrum dranc. Repetition (as in the last instance) and parallelism of rhythmical forms are used to good purpose, e.g., in 2456-58^a ; 183^b-187 ; 3181 f. ; 1393-94^a, cp. 1763 ff. Nor does it seem altogether fanciful to recognize symbolic values in the slow, mournful movement (incident to the use of the smallest possible number of syllables) of l. 34 : ālēdon þā lēofne þēoden compared with the brisk and withal steady progress of ll. 217 : gewāt þā ofer wāgholm winde gefýsed and 234 : gewāt him þā tō waroðe wicge rīdan.

Of the minor or secondary devices of versification a moderate, discriminating use has been made. Groups of emphatic hypermetrical types are introduced three times, 1163-68, 1705-7, 2995-96.¹ End rime occurs in the first and second half of the line in 726, 734, 1014, 2258, 3172, in a b-line and the following a-line : 1404^b-5^a, 1718^b-9^a, 2389^b-90^a, in two successive a- or b-lines : 465^a f., 1132^a f., 3070^a f., 890^b f., 1882^b f., 2590^b f., 2737^b f. (2377^b : 79^a), —aside from the rather frequent suffix rimes, which strike us as accidental. The so-called enjambement of alliteration,² i.e. the carrying over of a non-alliterating stressed letter of a b-line as the alliterating letter to the following line, occurs some two hundred times (sometimes in groups, as in 168 f., 169 f. ; 178 f., 179 f. ; 287 f., 288 f. ; 3037 f., 3038 f. ; etc.).³ Regarding the much discussed phenomenon of transverse alliteration, of which over a hundred instances can be traced (mostly of the order a b a b as in Hwæt, wē Gār-Dena in gēardagum 1, 19, 32, 34, 39, 1131, etc., more rarely a b b a as in þæt hit ā mid gemete manna ænig 779, 1728, 2615, etc.), no consensus of opinion has been reached, but it seems not unlikely that within certain limits it was consciously employed as a special artistic form.⁴

⁴ Morgan (L 8. 23. 176) would recognize as many as 86 cases of intentional transverse alliteration.

the use of run-on lines and for the introduction of the new elements at the beginning of the b-line, appears in our poem in full bloom. At the same time, monotony is avoided by making the end of the sentence not infrequently coincide with the end of the line, especially in the case of major pauses, e.g. those marking the beginning and the end of a speech. In a large number of instances groups of 4 lines forming a syntactical unit could indeed be likened to stanzas.¹ But this does not imply that the normal stichic arrangement has replaced an older strophic form of the Beowulf, though it is possible that the prevailing West Germanic order was preceded by a Germanic system of stanzaic grouping.²

On certain metrical features bearing on textual criticism, Appendix III should be consulted.

If a practical word of advice may be added for the benefit of the student, it is the obvious one, that in order to appreciate the poem fully, we must by all means read it aloud with due regard for scansion and expression. Nor should we be afraid of shouting at the proper time.³

VII. Language. Manuscript⁴

LANGUAGE

The transmitted text of *Beowulf*⁵ shows on the whole West Saxon forms of language, the Late West Saxon ones predominating, with an admixture of non-West Saxon, notably Anglian, elements.⁶

3. = i-umlaut of īo (older iu) and īowj (older iuwj, ewwaj). Cf. Wright §§ 138, 90; Bülb. § 188. See § 16: ēo, io.

dȳgel 1357 (ēo 275) [possibly i-umlaut of ēa, cf. Deutschbein, Beitr.

Interchange of ē and ý in Frēsan, Frysān.

= y, i-umlaut of u. [Also occasionally in Angl.] Cf. Bülb. §§ 307 f., 161 n. 2, Siev. § 31 n.

bicgan 1305; bisigu 281. 1743 (y 2580; however, original vowel doubtful, cf. NED.: busy; Franck-vanWijk, Etym. Woordenboek: bezig); (-)driht(-) 10x (in A, y 11x); (-)dribten 17x (y 32x); fiht 1765; (-)bicgan 5x in A (y 3x in B); bige(-) 5x in A, 3x in B (y 2x in A, 3x in B, -hýdig 723, 1749, 2667, 2810, cf. -bēdig, § 10. 6), Higelāc 15x in A, 8x in B (Hyge- 8x in B, 1x in A, Hý- 1530, see Gloss.); scildig 3071 (y 3x); scile 3176 [found also in Ælfred and in Northumbr., cf. Bülb. § 308, Siev. § 423] (scyle 2657); Wilfingum 461 (y 471); sinnig 1379 (synn(-) 9x); pincean 4x (in A, y 2x in B).

= ī, i-umlaut of ū (un-). Cf. Bülb. §§ 163 n., 309.

-pihtig 746 (ī 1558); wiston 1604 (n.).

Note 1. Predominantly LWS. is the spelling ig for ī (brought about after a change of forms like fāmig to fāmī 218). Cf. Siev. §§ 24 n., 214.5; Cosijn, i, pp. 91 f., 178. big 1085, 1596; sig 1778; big(-) 2220, 3047; ligge 727; wigge 1656, 1770; wigtig 1841; -stigge 924; Sceden-igge 1686; cp. unigmetes 1792.

Note 2. For some other LWS. features see § 7 n. 1 & 2; § 8. 3b, 4, 6 & n. 1; § 9. 1; § 10. 4, 5; § 15. 2; § 18. 5.

NON-WEST SAXON ELEMENTS

(This is a broad, general term. A number of forms included can be traced in the so-called Saxon patois also.)¹

§ 6. a

1. Unbroken a before l + consonant. [This is really a non-LWS. feature; besides being Angl., it is found not infrequently in EWS. and E. Kent.] Cf. Bülb. § 134, Cosijn i, pp. 8 ff.

alwalda 316, 955, 1314, alwealda 928 (always: eal(l)), an- walda 1272; aldor 29x (ealdor 20x; always: eald); baldor 2428 (bealdor 2567), -balde 1634; balwon (dp.) 977 (ea in inflected forms 6x); galdre 3052 (gealdor 2944); galg(a) 2446, 2940; galgmōd 1277; (-)bals 298, 1566 (ea 8x); wald- 1403; waldend 8x (wealdend 3x; always wealdan, 9x).

2. Original unbroken a before r + consonant is possibly hidden behind the MS. spelling brand in 1020, i.e. barn*. [This would savor of Angl., particularly Northumbr., influence.; cf. Bülb. § 132.]

Note 1. As to the interchange of a and o spellings before nasals, see below, § 24, seventh footnote. Parallel forms are, e.g., gamen, gomen; gamol, gomol; gangan, gongan; band, bond; bangian, bongian; sang, song.

Note 2. It is doubtful whether an original long ā can be claimed in the form para of the MS., 1015, i.e. wāran* (= wāron). (Cf. Bülb. § 129: swāran.)

§ 7. a

1. = WS. & Gmc. e. [Not infrequent in several Angl. texts, but sporadically found also elsewhere.] Cf. Bülb. § 92 n. 1; Deutschbein, Beitr. xxvi 195 f.; Gabrielson, Beibl. xxi 208 ff.

spzac 1171 (sprecan etc. 4x); gebrac, 2259; wes 407 (wes 5x); naefne 250 (MS. naefre), 1353 (e 8x); the MS. spellings bræðre 2819 (i.e. bræðre), fæder- 3119 (i.e. fæder-); þas 411 (cf. Siev. § 338 n. 4).¹

2. = i-umlaut of Gmc. a (WS. broken ea) before l + cons. [Angl.] Cf. Wright § 65 n., Bülb. § 175. — See § 2. 3: y; § 8.2: e.

balde 2018 (cp. Andr. 1186: baldest); (-)wælm 2066, 2135, 2546.

3. = WS. broken ea before rg, rb and b + cons. (smoothing). [Angl.] Cf. Bülb. §§ 205 f. — See § 8.3: e.

berg(trafum) 175; geabted 1885 (ea 3x, e 1x), geabtle 369.

4. = WS. ea after initial palatal sc, g. [Angl., but also met with in Sax. pat. and Kent.] Cf. Wright § 72 n. 1, Bülb. §§ 152 n., 155 f. — See § 8.4: e.

gescar 1526 (e 2973); gescæp- 26 (ea 650, 3084).

With conditions for i-umlaut: gæst 1800, 1893, 2312, 2670, 2699 (see also Gloss.: gist and gäst, gæst). Cf. Siev. § 75 n. 1.

5. = WS. rybt, riht. [Angl. smoothing of eo to e (æ); ræht- 2x in Lindisf. Gosp.] Cf. Siev. § 164 n. 1., Bülb. §§ 207, 211.

Note 1. Interchange of a and e in cases of i-umlaut of a) a and of b) a, o before nasals is seen in a) æfnan, efnan; ræst, rest; sæcc(e), secc(e); wræcca, wrecca; -mæcgas 491, 2379, -mecgas 332, 363, 481, 799, 829; æl- 1500, 2371, el-, ellor, etc. (Cf. Bülb. §§ 168 f., Siev. § 89.) — b) -blæmm, -blemm; læ[n]g, leng; mænigo, menigo. [This æ is characteristic especially of South East Sax. pat., cf. Bülb. §§ 170 f.]

Note 2. bwæder 1331 (= bwider), occurs sporadically in OE.; it seems to suggest a LWS. scribe. Cf. Sievers, Beitr. ix 263; Deutschbein, Beirr. xxvi 201.

Note 3. On the æ of Ælfhere, see Siev. § 80 n. 3, Cosijn i, p. 31.

1. = WS. æ. [(Late) Kent., partly Merc.] Cf. Siev. § 151; Bülb. § 91; Wright § 54 n. 1.

drēp 2880; brēþe 991, see 1914 Varr. (æ 1437, a 15x); Hetware 2363, 2916; brēfn 1801, 2448, 3024, Hrefnes-holt 2935, Hrefna-wudu 2925 (e owing to analogy of bremn, cf. Bülb. § 170 n.; not a dialect test); mēþel(-) 236, 1082, 1876 (cf. Weyhe, Beitr. xxx 72 f.); ren- 770 ((-) ærn 7x, cf. below, § 19. 7); sel 167 (sæl 3x; possibly compromise between sæl and sele); brēc- 1246 (geþrēc 3102).

2. = EWS. ie, i-umlaut of ea (see § 2. 3 : y);

a) before r + cons. [Angl., Kent., also Sax. pat.] Cf. Bülb. § 179 n., Wright § 181.

under[ne] 2911; mercels 2439; -serce 2539, 2755; wērbōo 589; perhaps wergan (?), 133(n.), 1747.

b) before l + cons. [Kent., also Sax. pat., partly Angl.] Cf. Bülb. §§ 175 & n., 179 n. 1, 180, Wright § 183. — See § 7. 2 : æ.

elde 2214, 2314, 2611, 3168, eldo 2111.

3. = WS. broken ea (see § 7. 3 : æ);

a) before rg, rb. [Angl.] Cf. Bülb. § 206.

b) before b, b + cons. [Partly Angl., Kent., (chiefly Late) WS.] Cf. Bülb. §§ 210, 313 & n.

ehtigað, 1222; gefēb 827, 1569, 2298 (ea 2x); -fex 2962, 2967 (ea 1647); mēhte [frequent in Ælfred's Orosius] 1082, 1496, 1515, 1877 (often mēabte, mihhte); genehost 794 (geneabbe 783, 3152); -seb 3087 (ea 18x); sex- 2904 (see § 1).

4. = WS. ea (Gmc. a) after initial palatal g, sc. [LWS., Kent., occasionally Merc.] Cf. Siev. §§ 109, 157, Bülb. § 314, Wright § 72 n. 1. — See § 7. 4 : æ.

(be)get 2872 (be-, on-geat 7x); sceft 3118 (ea 2x); scel 455, 2804, 3010 (very often sceal); gescer 2973.

With i-umlaut (of ea or æ), = EWS. ie. [Angl., Kent.] Cf. Bülb. § 182, Siev. § 75 n. 2, Wright § 181. — See § 2. 4.

(-)gest(-) 994, 1976.

5. = WS. broken eo before rg, rb. [Angl. smoothing.] Cf. Bülb. § 203.

(hl̄eor)ber [g] 304 (eo 1030); ferb(-) 305, 2706 (eo- very often); (-)ferb̄s(-) 19x.

6. The combination w eo- (from w e-) appears changed to wu- [LWS.] in wurðan 282, 807, sawurd 539, 890, 1901, to wy- [late WS. spelling, cf. Siev., Beitr. ix 202, Bülb. § 268 n. 1.] in sawyrð 2610, 2987, 3048, wyruld- 3180, to w o- [in general, L. Northumbr. and (partly) LWS., cf. Wright § 94, Bülb. §§ 265 ff., also Wood, JEGPh. xiv 505] in hworfan 1728 (eo 2888), (for)saworces 1767 (eo 1737), worc 289, 1100 [Northumbr.: werc, wærc]; worðmynd 1186 (eo 4x); also in worold(-) 17x, worðig 1972 [both occurring also in EWS.].

In case the aforesaid spelling wyr- is considered to represent a real phonetic change, it might be likened to the change of beorht to byrht, 1199. Cp. the forms -byrht (-bryht) of proper names in Bede (cf. Beitr. xxvi 238), Byrhte, Bede 58. 13, -bryht in the OE. Chron. (cf. Cosijn i § 22); Byrht-nōð, -helm, wold in Mald.; unbyrhtor, Boeth. 82. 1; Sat. 238; Fat. Ap. 21; etc. Another seemingly parallel case is firedon 378 (feredon etc. 11 x).

Note 1. The form (āð)sweord 2064 represents perhaps an original -sawyrð, which was erroneously 'corrected' to -sweord (because of association with sweord 'sword,' see Gloss.). — hwyrfaþ 98 (see § 2.3) admits, at any rate, of being identified with hworfap (strong verb). — sawulces (for sawyices) 880 is a very late form, cf. Bülb. § 280.¹

Note 2. It is very doubtful whether trem 2525 contains Kent.² e = WS. y (Mald. 247 : trym).

1. = WS. ēa, Gmc. (and specifically ON.) au in (Heapo-)Rāmas 519. [A change sometimes met with in LWS., L. Merc. and, at an earlier date, in Kentish documents.³] Cf. Schlemilch, l.c., pp. 35 f.; Zupitza, ZfdA. xxxiii 55; Wolff, Untersuchung der Laute in den kent. Urkunden (Heidelberg Diss., 1893), pp. 54 f.

2. = WS. ēa before g. [Angl. smoothing.] Cf. Siev. § 163 n. 1, Bülb. § 200. æg(weard) 241 (see Gloss.).⁴ — See § 10.5 : ē.

² But cf. also Wright § 112 n. 1 ('Kentish' claimed to include dialects of East Anglia and Sussex).

³ Note also Baeda's spelling Aduini, the Ēd- forms of the Northumbr. Liber Vitae, and a few Ēd- forms occurring in the OE. Chronicle (cf. Cosijn i § 93). But cf. Chadwick, Studies in Old English (1899), p. 4 (ā, ē due to umlaut).

⁴ On the somewhat uncertain etymology, see Beitr. xxxi 88 n.

3. = \bar{e} , i-umlaut of \bar{o} . Probably to be accounted for by alteration of original \bar{a} [i.e., archaic OE., and late Northumbr.; Bülb. §§ 165 f.]. Cf. Deutschbein, Beitr. xxvi 199 f.; but also Schlemilch, p. 21.

Note. On the spelling $b\bar{e}l$, 2126 (= $b\bar{a}l$), see note to l. 1981.

1. = WS. & Gmc. \bar{a} . [Angl., Kent.]

2. = EWS. $\bar{i}e$, i-umlaut of $\bar{e}a$. [Angl., Kent., Sax. pat.] Cf. Bülb. §§ 183f. — See § 3. 2&4: \bar{y} .

3. = (E)WS. $\bar{e}a$ (from \bar{a}) after palatal g.³ [Angl., Kent., LWS.] (of) $g\bar{e}fan$ 2846 ($\bar{e}a$ 1600); cf. $-b\bar{e}g\bar{e}te$ 2861 (with conditions for i-umlaut).

4. = EWS. $\bar{e}a$ (from Gmc. au) after palatal sc. [LWS.] Bülb. § 315.

5. = WS. $\bar{e}a$ before c, g, b. [Angl., partly LWS.] Cf. Bülb. §§ 316 f. — See § 9.2: \bar{a} .

$b\bar{e}cn$ 3160 ($\bar{e}a$ 2x); $b\bar{e}g$ 3163 ($\bar{e}a$ 30x); $\bar{e}g(\textit{str}\bar{e}amum)$ 577 ($\bar{e}agor-$ 513); (\bar{a}) $\bar{l}\bar{e}h$ 80 ($\bar{e}a$ 3029); $n\bar{e}h$ [2215,] 2411 ($\bar{e}a$ 12x); $p\bar{e}h$ 1613, 2967 ($\bar{e}a$ 30x).⁴

6. = \bar{y} (from yg-, with i-umlaut of u). [Later Kent.] Cf. Wright § 132 n., but also § 3 n.

(n\bar{i}d) $b\bar{e}dige$ 3165. (See § 4.)

7. = smoothing of primitive Angl. $\bar{e}u$ (WS. $\bar{e}o$) from Gmc. \bar{i} in $f\bar{e}l(a)$ 1032 (n.). Cf. Bülb. §§ 147, 196, 199.

² This, the invariable form in OE., had become stereotyped through its use in Anglian poetry.

³ The form $t\bar{o}g\bar{e}nes$ 3114 (from $t\bar{o}g\bar{e}anes$ (6x), $t\bar{o}geagnes$) occurs already in Alfredian prose; also $g\bar{e}fe$ (Cosijn i, p. 84, ii, p. 138) has been found there. Cf. Bülb.

§ 315. Note also $g\bar{e}nunga$, 2871.

⁴ The forms $n\bar{e}h$ and $p\bar{e}h$ occur already in Orosius, see Bülb. § 317 n.

= WS. broken io, ēo before b, from Gmc. i. [Angl.] Cf. Wright § 127. — See § 10. 7.

wig (wēorþung) 176 (WS. wēob), Wihstān 2752, 2907, 3076, 3110, 3120 (ēo 2602, 2613, 2862).

1. by u-, o/a-umlaut, = WS. a. [Merc., partly E. Kent.] Cf. Siev. § 103, Bülb. § 231.

beadu- 16x; cearu etc. 8x (care [3171]); eafora 14x; eafoð 7x (eo, see § 13. 2); eatol 2074, 2478 (a 11x); beafo 1862, 2477; (-) beafofa 2661, 2679, 2697 (a 11x); beapu- 35x, Heaðo- 7x; -heaðerod 3072 (a 414).

Note. calu(-) (7x) has passed into WS. also. Cf. Wright § 78 n. 3.

2. = WS. eo, u-umlaut of e. [Paralleled in Northumbr. (especially Durb. Rit.) and E. Kent. (sporadically).] Cf. Bülb. §§ 236, 238.

eafor 2152 (eo 4x), Eafores 2964 (eo 1x, io 2x).

Note. fealo 2757 may stand for feola (o/a-umlaut of e, Angl., Kent., also Sax. pat., cf. Bülb. § 234) or be = feala, a form found in several (including WS.) texts, cf. Siev. § 107 n. 2 [influence of feaſwa suggested]; Bülb. § 236, Tupper, Publ. MLAss. xxvi 246 f., Schlemilch, p. 34.¹

§ 13. eo

1. Non-WS. (though partly also Sax. pat.) cases of u-, o/a-umlaut (cf. Bülb. §§ 233-35).

eodor 428, 663, 1037, 1044; eoton etc. 112, 421, 668, 761, 883, 1558, 2979 (e 2616); geofena 1173 (geofum 1958), -geofa 2900 (see § 14. 2: io, § 2. 2: i, y); meodu- 5, 638, 1643, 1902, 1980 (e 13x); meoto 489 (n.); meotod- 1077 (e 14x); wæora 2947 (9 corresponding instances of e).

(-) freoðo(-) 188, 522, 851, 1942, 2959² (see § 14. 1: io; i 2017); bleonian 1415; -hleosu 710, 820, 1358, 1427 (1 corresponding case of i: 1409); leomum 97; leoðo- 1505, 1890, 2769; seonowe 817; seoðban 1775, 1875, 1937; wæotena 1098,² (-) wæotode 1796, 1936, 2212 (i 9x); wreoþen (hilt) 1698 (i 3x). [On the occurrence of this umlaut before dentals and nasals in Sax. pat., see Bülb. § 235 n.]

2. eo for ea, u-umlaut of a (see § 12. 1). [Found sporadically in Merc.] Cf. Bülb. § 231 n.

3. = EWS. ie, i-umlaut of io, Gmc. i; see § 2.5: y. [Merc., Kent., Sax. pat.] Cf. Bülb. §§ 141-43, 186 n., 187.

eormen- 859, 1201, 1957, 2234 (Yrmen- 1324); corres 1447; feorran 156; -beorde 2930 (MS.), apparently presupposing a form berde (Sax. pat., cf. Bülb. § 186 n., — in place of original -bredde).

4. = breaking of e in seolf(a) 3067 (e 17x, y 17x). [Merc., No. Northumbr., Early Kent.] Cf. Bülb. § 138.¹

5. geong 2743, for gong. [Northumbr.] Cf. Siev. § 396 n. 2, Bülb. § 492 n. 1.

For the combination weo- see § 8.6.

1. Non-WS. cases of u-umlaut of i.

friodu- 1096, 2282 (see § 13.1: eo); riodan 3169; scionon 303 (i 994); niodor 2699 (also Sax. pat., cf. Bülb. § 235 n.).

2. io for eo, u- or o/a-umlaut of e. [Kent. coloring.] Cf. Bülb. §§ 238, 141.

bioro- 2158, 2358, 2539, 2781 (eo 13x); Hior(o)te 1990, 2099 (eo 18x); lofore 2993, 2997 (see § 12.2); siomian 2767 (eo 2x); gicfan 2972 (might be Sax. pat., or EWS., cf. Bülb. § 253 & n. 2).²

3. io for eo, breaking of e before r + cons. [Kent., rarely WS.] Cf. Wright § 205, Bülb. §§ 141, 143, Cosijn i, p. 39.

biorg etc. 2272, 2807, 3066 (eo 18x); biorn 2404, 2559 (eo 11x).³

1. for ēo in fēa 156 (fēo 2x). [Might be Northumbr., or Merc., Kent.; cf. Siev. § 166 n. 2., Bülb. §§ 112 n. 1, 114.]⁴

2. brēa- 1214 for brē(aw) (ā 277, 1588). [LWS.] Siev. § 118 n. 2.

3. On ēawes etc., see § 3. 2.

Note. Through shifting of stress -glēaw developed to (-gleāw), -glāw 2564 (so glāwne, Andr. 143; unglāunesse, Bede 402. 29 (Ca.); glāunes, Blickl. Hom. 99.31); cf. Bülb. § 333; Schlemilch, p. 36; Wood, JEGPh. xiv 506.

² Possibly swioðol 3145 is to be included.

⁴ For similar ēa forms in (very) late WS., see P. Perltz, Die Sprache der Interlin.-Version von Defensor's Liber Scintillarum (Kiel Diss., 1904), § 17; also Schlemilch, p. 38.

1. eo, io = WS. ie, y, i-umlaut of io (older iu) and iowj (older iuwj, eoww). [Angl., Kent., Sax. pat., partly WS.] Cf. Wright § 138, Bülb. § 189 & n. 1, § 191. — See § 3. 3: —

dēore 488, 561, 1309, 1528, 1879, 2236, 2254, diore 1949¹; (-)bēoru 987, 1372, unbīore 2413; nēos(i)an 115, 125, 1125, 1786, 1791, 1806, 2074, nīos(i)an 2366, 2388, 2486, 2671, 3045; nīowan 1789 (i 9x); -siōn 995; trēowde 1166; pēostrum 2332.²

Note. For the forms ēowes 1738, dēogol 275, see § 3. 2, 3; cf. Cosijn i §§ 98, 100.

2. eo = normal ēa.

a) = Gmc. au. [So. Northumbr. coloring.] Cf. Bülb. § 108.³ (ā)*brēot*⁴ 2930; dēof 850; dēoð 1278; Gēotena 443 (= Gēata).⁵

b) = WS. ēa(b) from ā(b) in nēon 3104. [Angl., Kent.] Cf. Bülb. § 146.

1. = (L)WS. eo. [Presumably Kent., though also EWS. and partly Merc.] Cf. Wright § 209, Siev. § 150 n. 2 & 3, Bülb. § 112.⁶

a) Gmc. eu.

b) Contractions [of i + ō, i + ū, e + u, cf. Bülb. §§ 118 f.; contraction to io partly Northumbr. also, thus: fīond, hīo, sīo, srīo, bīo 'bee'].

bīo(ð) 2063, 2747 (eo 5x); Biowulf 15x (in B; eo 40x [37x in A, see Gloss.]); (on)cnīow 2554; fīond(a) 2671 (eo 26x); (ge)iōde 2200 (eo 20x); gīong 2214, 2409, 2715 (eo 5x); hīo 11x (3x in A; hēo 18x in A); hīold 1954 (eo 33x); sīo 16x (sēo 13x, see Gloss.); Swiō(rice) 2383, 2495 (eo 5x); Ongen-, Ecg-ðio(ow) 1999, 2387, 2398, 2924, 2951, 2961, 2986 (eo 17x; Wealb-pēow 6x); pīo 2174 (eo 2278).

⁴ Possibly influenced by redupl. preterites like bēot.

⁶ Instances of io by the side of eo from EWS. (Cosijn i, pp. 37, 44, 66 f., 113 f.): a) bīodan, bīor-, diop, dīor, hiōfan, sioc, ðiod; b) bīon, fīond, hīo, hīold, sīo, ðiow, srīo. On the use of io, io in EWS., see Sievers, Zum ags. Vocalismus (1900), pp. 39 ff.

2. For iō, eō = WS. i-umlaut of iō, see § 16.1.

3. iō, eō (rising diphthongs, unless the i, e were inserted merely to indicate the palatal nature of g) in (-)giōmor- 2267, 2408, 2894, 3150, (-)geōmor(-) 12x (from Gmc. æ before nasal).¹ Cf. Wright §§ 51 n., 121 n., Bülb. § 299.

Note. Compare the spelling io in Hondscio (Hondsciō) 2076, which may, however, be merely analogical for eo.²

UNACCENTED SYLLABLES

§ 18. Weakening (and interchange) of vowels (and inflexional syllables)

1. -um (dat. plur. ending) appears as -un, -on, -an. Cf. Siev. § 237 n. 6.

a) -un; berewæsmun 677, wīcun 1304.

b) -on; hēafdon 1242, scypon 1154.

c) -an; āpums-wēoran (MS. s-werian) 84, blēorber[g]an 304, uncran eaferan 1185, feorhgeniðlan 2933, læssan 43, ærran 907, 2237, 3035.

Note. On cases like beardan clammum (so 963; heardum clammum 1335), dēoran s-weorde, see § 25.3. Note bal-won (bendum) 977, bāton (beolfre) 849. — The erroneous spelling (ū, i.e.) -um for -an appears in 2860^a.

2. -u appears as -o, -a. Cf. Siev. § 237 n. 5; H. C. A. Carpenter, Die Deklin. in d. nordhumbr. Evang. (1910), § 87.

a) -o; earfēþo 534, -gewwædo 227, geþingo 1085, -bliðo 1409, wado 546; fūhðo 2489; -strengo 533, (sinc)þego 2884, etc.

b) -a; -gewwæda 2623 (n.), þūsenda 1829, 2994 (?) (cf. Bülb. § 364); -beala 136, geara 1914 (cf. Bu. Zs. 194, Angl. xxvii 419).

Note. Analogical use of -u for -a in the gen. & dat. sg. of sunu: 1278, 344. (Cf. Siev. § 271 n. 2). See also 1243.

3. -a (gen. plur.) appears as a) -o. Cf. Sievers, Beitr. ix 230; MLN. xvi 17 f.; Sisam, MLR. xi 337. hynðo 475, 593, mēdo 1178, ylðo 70 (n.).³

b) -e possibly in sorge 2004; cp. the MS. spelling hwile 2710.

4. -an appears as -on

a) in infinitives (cf. Siev. § 363 n. 1), bregdon 2167, būon 2842, bealdon (MS. beoldon) 3084, bladon (MS. blodon) 2775, ongyton 308.

b) in mannon 577, hæfton 788.⁴

Note. The change of -on to -an in the ind. plur. pret. (cf. Siev. § 364 n. 4) is seen in wærran 1015 (MS. para, see § 6 n. 2), 2475; 43, 650, 1945, 2116, 2479, 2852, etc.

⁴ On the spelling frecnen for frēcnan 1104, see T.C. § 16.

5. -es (gen. sing.) appears as

a) -as (as found in various later texts, cf. Siev. § 237 n. 1; Carpenter, op. cit., §§ 62 f.);¹ Heaðo-Scilfingas 63, Mere-wioingas 2921, yrfeweardas 2453.

b) -ys (cf. Siev. § 44 n. 2, Bülb. § 360 n.: late, especially LWS.); wintrys 516.

A similar transition of e in inflexional syllables to y in: (nīw)tyrwyd 295, feormynd 2256 (cp. 2761).

6. Various changes of normal -e-.

(a) -ende (pres. ptc.) > -inde; weallinde 2464; > -ande (cf. Siev. § 363 n. 4); -āgande 1013.

(b) -en (pres. opt. plur.) > -an (cf. Siev. § 361); fēran 254, etc.; -en (pret. opt. plur.) > -on (cf. Siev. § 365); feredon 3113, etc.

(c) -e (before n) of middle syllables > -on-; in the pret. ptc. (cf. Siev. § 366. 2): gecorone 206, (burh)etone 3049 (cp. Ruin 6: undereotone); — gen. plur.: sceaðona 274 (cf. Siev. § 276 n. 2 & 3); — ricone 2983.

(d) > æ in infl. superl.: gingæste 2817.²

7. An i of the second element of a compound weakened to e (cf. Bülb. § 354); fyrwet 1985, 2784 (fyrwyd 232); Hæscen 2925.³

8. Prefix -ge- > -i- in unigmetes 1792, which is reasonably to be considered = unimetes, showing a late transition of ge- to i- (Siev. § 212 n. 1, cp. unilic, uniwemmed; Met. Bt. 7. 33 & 10. 9: unigmet), and analogical spelling ig (which is rather frequent in that portion of the MS.).⁴

9. The isolated te 2922 (see Gloss.: tō) shows an interesting weakening, cf. Wright § 656, Bülb. § 454, B.-T., s.v. te.

10. The loss of the middle vowel of Hygelāc in Hylāc(es) 1530 (from Hyglāc) has been designated as largely Northumbrian, with reference to the analogous forms of the Liber Vitae (Siev. R. 463 f.).⁵ The dropping of the posttonic vowel in Heort 78, 991, originally due to the example of the inflected forms (see 2099; Bülb. §§ 405, 439), is demanded by the meter in l. 78 (cf. Siev. R. 248, T.C. § 5 n.).

³ The forms Hæðcyn 2434, 2437, Hæðcynne 2482 may be accounted for by folk etymology.

⁴ That this ig should stand, by mistake, for an old or dialectal gi- (cf. Bülb. § 435 n. 1) is a far less plausible hypothesis.

Loss of palatal g, transition of -ig to -ī (later i). Cf. Wright §§ 321, 324; Siev. § 214.5, Cosijn i, pp. 88, 178.

Wilāf 2852 (Wig- 6x); Hylāc(es) 1530 (see § 18.10); -brād 723, 1664, 2575, 2703, frīn(an) 351, 1322, -hȳdig etc. 434, 723, 1749, 1760, 2667, 2810, cf. 3165, sāde etc. 1696, 1945, 3152; by analogy (cf. Siev. § 214 n. 8) also gefrūnon 2, 70, (-)brōden 552, 1443, 1548; — fāmi- 218, -sālī 105.

The disappearance of g in gēnde 1401 (gēngde 1412) is perhaps merely an orthographic [L. Kent.] feature, cf. Siev. §§ 184, 215 n. 1, Bülb. § 533 d.

The prefixing of g in the spelling geomor 1960 (for Ēomēr) suggests a Kentish scribe, cf. Siev. § 212 n. 2.

Transition of final ng to nc in atspranc 1121 (-rinc 1118 (n.)?); cf. Siev. § 215, Bülb. § 504. gecranc 1209 is possibly to be referred to -crincan, a parallel form of -cringan; cf. Beitr. xxxvii 253 f.

Note. Interesting spellings. (a) sorhge 2468 (cp. an analogous spelling of h in fāghæ 2465), ābealc 2280; cf. Siev. §§ 214 n. 5, 223. — (b) Spellings for cg (cf. Siev. § 216 n. 1, Cosijn i, p. 179): *secgende*¹ 3028, fricgeean 1985; Ec-þeow, -lāf 957, 980 (Ec- corrected to Ecg- 263), sec 2863.²

2. b.

Loss and addition of initial b. Cf. Siev. § 217 n. 1 & 2, Bülb. § 480 n.

The loss of initial b in the MS. spellings of 312, -reade 1194, inne 1868 may or may not be of phonetic significance.³

On the unwarranted spelling b in initial position in brabe 1390, 1975, see T.C. § 15; on -bnāgdon 2916 (cp. 1318), broden 1151, see T.C. § 28; on bun ferð see note on 499ff., tenth footnote. Obvious mistakes are band-, bond- 1541, 2094, 2929, 2972, also battres 2523.

n before f, b, changed to m (assimilation, cf. Siev. § 188. 1): gimfæst 1271, blimbed 3034.

Loss of n in the form cyniges 3121, which arose perhaps as a cross between cynig and cynges (cf. Bülb. § 561) and may be found in several later texts.⁴

² So Wald. i 5. — Whether cg is erroneously spelled for g in ecgclif 2893 is doubtful, see Gloss.

³ The incorrect beortre [see however Siev. § 221 n. 2] 158 has been corrected by another hand to beorhtre.

⁴ See B.-T. Suppl. : cynig; OE. Chron. 409 (E), 755 (E); Wonders of the East ch. 19.

The absence of final n in ræswa (MS.) 60 (= ræswan) has been explained as a Northumbrianism; cf. Siev. §§ 188. 2, 276 n. 5, Bülb. § 557; Napier, Furnivall Miscellany, p. 379 n. The forms lemede 905, oferēode 1408, weardode 2164 possibly exhibit weakening from normal -don, but they (especially the first two instances) can be accounted for by lack of congruence, cf. § 25. 6, note on 904 f.¹

4. Doubling of consonants.

a) Normal doubling of t before r (cf. Wright § 260, Bülb. § 344) in attres 2523, attren 1617, hence also attor 2715, 2839 (āter 1459).

b) Merely orthographic (or due to confusion) seems to be the doubling of intervocalic t after long vowel or diphthong (in open syllable) in fætum 716 (cf. Gloss.: fāted), gegrēttan 1861, gebēdde 505 (cf. bēdan), scēatta 752 (cf. *sceat(t)*²).

Note. The oblique cases of wræt(t) being nearly always spelt in OE. with tt, argue for the jō-declension.

c) Doubling of final l after short vowel: *sceall*³ 2275, 2498, 2508, 2535, 3014, 3021, 3077; till 2721; well 1951, 2162, 2812. Cf. Bülb. §§ 547 f. (Doubled l in posttonic position: æpellingum 906.)

5. Simplification of double consonants.

a) hh between vowels simplified (in spelling) to b in genebost 794. Cf. Bülb. § 554 n. 2: quite frequent in Angl. texts, but found also in WS. MSS.⁴

b) tt spelt t in hetende 5 1828; nn spelt n in irena 673 (n.), 1697, 2259.

c) The simplification of eorlic 637 (for eorllic) is normal. Cf. Wright § 259. 3.

6. Loss of the second of three successive consonants. Cf. Bülb. § 533; also MLN. xviii 243-45.

² The same spelling, Ex. 429: sceattas. Such double spellings occur rather irregularly in Northumbr., see e.g., E. M. Lea, The Lang. of the Northumbr. Gloss to the Gospel of St. Mark, Angl. xvi 131 ff.; Lindelöf, Die Sprache des Rituals von Durham, pp. 70 f. On such spellings in late Southern texts, see Schlemilch, pp. 64 ff. — The double t after shortened diphthong in preostioða 2406 is LWS., cf. Siev. §§ 328, 230 n. 1, Bülb. § 349.

³ Frequent in LWS. (Siev. § 423). Cf. also Schlemilch, p. 63.

⁴ Thus, e.g., Gen. 2843: geneahe, Mald. 269: genehe; Gen. 1582, 2066, El. 994: hlihende, Blickl. Hom. 25. 23: hlihaþ; also Kent. Gloss., ZfdA. xxi 18. 11: hlihe; WS. Gosp., Luke 6. 21: hlihaþ, Lind., ib.: hlæheð; so 6. 25.

⁵ Perhaps influenced by hete, hetelic, hetol. Thus El. 18, 119: hetend(um). — The spelling niða 2215 (not uncommon in OE. MSS.) for niðða seems to be due to analogy with the noun nið.

i. (here) æsmun 677, and (in a case involving two words:) siðas sige 2710 MS. (see Varr.).

d. (beaða) bearna 2037 MS., (beaðo) bearna 2067 MS.¹ (Perhaps scribal confusion with the noun bearn.) The spelling bearede 2202 (= Heardrēde) is possibly a mere blunder.

Loss of r before one (or two) consonant(s): sweodum 567 MS. (see Varr.), fyhtum 457 MS. (for [ge] wyrhtum).

Unfortunately, -æsmun is the only fairly probable instance of intentional phonetic spelling.²

7. Varia. — Absence of metathesis of r (cf. ærn) is noted in (archaic) ren (weard) 770, cf. Siev. § 179.1, Bülb. § 518.³ — bold 773, 997, 1925, 2196, 2326, 3112 with ld from pl (WS. tl) is considered predominantly Angl. Cf. Siev. § 196.2, Bülb. § 522.

f. The solitary spelling u for intervocalic f, in bliuade 1799 (blifade 1898) probably (though not necessarily) bespeaks the hand of a late scribe. Cf. Siev. § 194; Schlenilch, p. 49.⁴

INFLEXION

Only a few noteworthy forms in addition to those mentioned in § 18 are to be pointed out here.

§ 20. Nouns

1. Of nouns used with more than one gender, sā once (2394) appears as fem. (later usage),⁵ (isern) scūr 3116 as fem. (archaism).⁶ The (Angl.?) fem. gender of bend is seen in walbende 1936. On (hand) sporu, see note on 984 ff.; on wala, wræc, Gloss.; on frōfor, note on 698; on hlæw, note on 2297. See also notes on 48, 2338, and T. C. § 25. The apparent fem. use of sār 2468 (MS.) is to be charged against the scribe. For the neut. hwealf (Gloss.), cp. ON. hwálf.

2. The fem. nouns of the i-declension regularly form the acc. sing. without -e, the only exception being dāde 889.⁷ The fem. wynn fluctuates between the jō- and the i-type, the acc. sing. (-) wynne occurring 8x, the acc. sing. ēðelwyn in 2493.⁸ — The nom. plur.

² Exceedingly doubtful are hol (þegnas) 1229, -wyl (þa) 1506, and þeo (ge streona) 1218.

⁵ Cf. Schröder, ZfdA. xliii 366; Hempl, JGPh. ii 100 f.

⁶ So Gothic skūra; cf. *P.Crdr.*² i, p. 770.

⁷ The forms br̄de 2956, gumcyste 1723, sēle 1135 must be understood as acc. plur.

lēoda 3001 shows association of lēod(e) with pēod and the passing over to the ō-declension, cf. Siev. § 264; J. F. Royster, MLN. xxiii 121 f.; B.-T.

3. The form nēodlasu 1320, though not impossible as a late, analogical dat. sing. (cf. Siev. § 253 n. 2), is probably meant for -lasum (u written for ū).

4. Of distinct interest is the archaic dat. (instr.) dōgor 1395 (cf. Varr.: 1797, 2573).¹ As to form, -sigor 1554 could also be an archaic dat. sing.,¹ though the perfective meaning of ge-wealdan harmonizes better with the acc.

§ 21. Adjectives

A remarkably late, analogical form of the acc. plur. neut. is fāge 1615.² (Cf. Siev. § 293 n. 3.) Note also wynsume 612, cwice 98.

§ 22. Pronouns

On the apparent use of sē = sēo, bē = bēo, see notes to 1260, 1344, 1887.³ — A single instance of bīe, nom. sg. fem., occurs 2019 (so regularly [twice] in the [Merc.] Vesp. Psalter, cf. Siev. § 334 n. 1 & 3). — The transmitted sīe, nom. sg. fem., 2219 (see Varr.) is well known [only once: sēo] in the Vesp. Psalter (cf. Siev. § 337 n. 4). — pāra, dat. sg. fem., 1625 suggests dialectal or late usage (cf. Siev. § 337 n. 2 & 4, and Beitr. ix 271). — The erroneous bere 1199 could be interpreted as a blunder for pēre (Kent., Merc., cf. Siev. § 337 n. 3 & 4), i.e. normal pāre.⁴

§ 23. Verbs

1. The uniform use of the full endings -est, -eð (2. & 3. sing. pres. ind.) of long-stemmed strong verbs and weak verbs of the 1. class, and of the unsyncopeated forms (ending -ed) of the pret. ptc. of weak verbs of the 1. class terminating in a dental is in accord with the postulate of the Anglian origin of the poem.⁵ Conclusive instances (guaranteed by the meter) are (a) oferwyrðep 279, 1768; gedigeð (-est) 300, 661; þenceð 355, 448, 1535, 2601; weorpeð 414, 2913; wēnep 600;

³ Such a form sē is a dialectal possibility, cf. E. M. Brown, The Lang. of the Rushworth Gloss to Matthew, § 81; Bülb. § 454; Bu. Zs. 205.

⁴ The Merc. (Vesp. Ps.) form ār has been conjecturally proposed for 2642b, see Varr.

scīneð 606, 1571; brūceð 1062; bealdeſt 1705; scēoteð 1744; ge-drēoseð 1754; etc. (For the absence of WS. umlaut, see Siev. § 371.) (b) hyrſted 672; gecȳped 700; āfēded 693; gelāſted 829; forſended 904; scynded 918; etc.¹ The diſſyllabic value of the 2. & 3. ſing. preſ. ind. of ſhort-ſtemmed verbs is likewiſe proved by the meter, e.g. cymest 1382, nymeð 1846, 2536, gāleð 2460, ſiteð 2906.

2. An archaic, or Angl., feature is the ending -u in fullāſtu 2668; cf. Siev. § 355. (See hafu, below, under 5.) Another archaiſm appears in the ending -æ: fæðmie 2652 (ſee note on 1981); cf. Siev. § 361.

3. The pret. of (-)findan is both funde (6x, in accordance with the regular EWS. practice, cf. Coſijn ii, p. 132) and fañd (11x), fond (2x). — The pret. of (-)cuman is both cwōm(-) (26x) and cōm(-) (24x). — The pret. ſing. of (-)niman is nōm (2x, the normal Angl. form), nam (18x), pl. nāmon (2x). — The pret. (ge)þab 1024 looks like a WS. ſcribe's ineffectual reſpelling of Angl. þab; cf. Siev. § 391 n. 8, Beitr. ix 283; Deutschbein, Beitr. xxvi 235 n. (Was there confuſion with lāb?) — Not ſtrictly WS. are sāgon 1422, geſēgan 3038, geſēgon 3128; cf. Siev. § 391 n. 7. — Late [Kent., LWS.] is ſpecan 2864.² — Quite exceptional (found nowhere else, it ſeems,) is the pret. ptc. dropen 2981.

4. The unique pret. gāng 1009, 1295, 1316 makes the impreſſion of being a mechanical tranſcription into WS. of a form gēong (which was taken for a Northumbr. imp. geong (So. Northumbr. gong), cf. § 13.5). The form (ge)gangeð 1846 is perhaps Angl. (WS. gæð).³

5. hafu, hafo 2150, 2523, 3000 (ſee § 23.2), hafaſt (uniformly, 5x), hafað (uniformly, 9x) are rather Angl. (or poetical); cf. Siev. § 416 n. 1; (-)liſi(g)ende 468, etc. (10x) is not the ſtandard WS. form, cf. Siev. § 416 n. 2.⁴ — telge 2067 evidences a compromise between telle and talige (ſo 532, 677, 1845).⁵ — The ending -ade as in blifade 81, loſade 2096 (ſo -ad as in geweorðad, etc.) occurs ſporadically in both parts of the MS., cf. Siev. § 413.⁶

6. The archaic, poetical dædon (dēdon) [claimed as a Northumbrian-iſm] has been demanded by metrical rigoriſts, 1828^b (cp. 44^b), ſee Varr. Cf. Siev. § 429 n. 1, Siev. R. 498; Tupper, Publ. MLAss. xxvi 264 n. 3.

³ Cf. A. K. Hardy, Die Sprache der Blickling Homilien (Leipzig Diſs., 1899), p. 75, n.

⁶ In Ruſhw.^a, e.g., the vowel a is uſed in ſuch forms almoſt without exception, cf. Lindelöf, Bonn. B. x, §§ 228 f.

7. The Angl. pres. ptc. formation in -ende of weak verbs of the 2. class (cf. Siev. § 412 n. 11, Siev. R. 482, A. M. § 76. 7) is seen in feormend- 2761 (cf. Lang. § 18. 5).

On the uninflected inf. after tō, see Siev. § 363 n. 3; T.C. § 12.

On important linguistic features bearing on scansion, see Appendix III (T.C.). See also below, Chapter viii: 'Genesis of the Poem' (Date: Linguistic Tests).

§ 24. Mixture of forms

How can this mixture of forms, early¹ and late,² West Saxon, Northumbrian, Mercian, Kentish, Saxon patois be accounted for? The interesting supposition that an artificial, conventional standard, a sort of compromise dialect had come into use as the acknowledged medium for the composition of Anglo-Saxon poetry,³ can be accepted only in regard to the continued employment of ancient forms (archaisms) and of certain Anglian elements firmly embedded in the vocabulary of early Anglian poetry. Witness, e.g., the use of hēan, fēores,⁴ bebt by the side of the later bēan, feores, bēt, or the forms mēce (never māce), beadu(-), beaþu- uniformly adhered to even in Southern texts. But the significant coexistence in the manuscript of different forms of one and the same word,⁵ without any inherent principle of distribution being recognizable, points plainly to a checkered history of the written text as the chief factor in bringing about the unnatural medley of spellings. The only extant manuscript of Beowulf was written some two and a half centuries after the probable date of composition⁶ and was, of course, copied from a previous copy. It is perfectly safe to assert that the text was copied a number of times, and that scribes of heterogeneous dialectal habits and different individual peculiarities⁷ had a share in ¹ Note, e.g., details like ren- § 19. 7, dōgor § 20. 4, hafu, fullāstu, fæðmic, § 23. 2 & 5; also T.C. § 1, etc.

² Note, e.g., htiuade § 19. 7, specan § 23. 3, fāge § 21, swyrd § 8. 6, swulc § 8 n. 1, fāmi, unigmetes §§ 18. 8, 19. 1.

³ Cf. O. Jespersen, Growth and Structure of the English Language, 2d ed., 1912, § 53; see also H. Collitz, "The Home of the Heliand," Publ. MLAss. xvi 123 ff.

⁶ See below, 'Manuscript,' and Chapter viii ('Date').

that work.¹ Although the exact history of the various linguistic and orthographic strata cannot be recovered, the principal landmarks are still plainly discernible.

The origin of the poem on Anglian soil² to be postulated on general principles is confirmed by groups of Anglian forms and certain cases of faulty substitution (e.g., næfre, hwæðre, fæder § 7. 1, -beran § 8. 5, þeod (i.e. deoð) § 16. 2, gang § 23. 4)³, to which some syntactical and lexical features are to be added (§§ 25. 7, 26). See also below, pp. xcii f. A decision in favor of either Northumbria or Mercia as the original home cannot be made on the basis of the language.⁴

Before receiving its broad, general LWS. complexion, the MS. — at any rate, part of it — passed through EWS. and Kentish hands. See especially §§ 1, 8 n. 2, 10. 6, 14. 2 & 3, 17, 19. 1. That these dialectal elements were superimposed on a stratum of a different type is suggested by a blunder like siex- 2904 (cf. §§ 1, 8. 3) and a mechanical application of an io spelling in Hondscio 2076 (cf. § 17 n.). On the other hand, the scribal mistake mid of l. 976 (cf. § 1) would not be unnatural in a copyist unfamiliar with EWS. spelling traditions. It is worthy of note that these dialectal contributions have been almost completely obliterated in the first part of the MS.

The final copy which has been preserved is the work of two scribes, the second hand beginning at mōste, 1939. As the first of these scribes (A, 1–1939) copied also the three preceding prose pieces, viz. a short Christophorus fragment,⁵ Wonders of the East,⁶ and Letter of Alexander,⁷ and the second one (B, 1939–3182) copied the poem of

² Cf. Siev. A. M. §§ 74 ff.

⁴ The strongest evidence supporting Mercia is the u-, o/a-umlaut of a, § 12. 1. — It would be possible to argue for the existence of an original Northumbrian stretch from 986–1320; cf. -sporu 986, gesacan 1004 (orig. æ), gang 1009, -āganæ 1013, brand 1020 MS., walu 1031, fēla 1032, sēðan 1106 (originally sēðan — seoð(ð)an — syððan ?), spræc 1171, sē 1260 (?), þeod 1278 MS., gang 1295, gang 1316, -laðu 1320 (?). But most of the material is problematical.

⁵ Christophorus fragment (ff. 94^a–98^b); ed. by G. Herzfeld, ESr. xiii 142–45.

⁶ De Rebus in Oriente Mirabilibus (ff. 98^b–106^b); a modern edition by F. Knappe, Greifswald Diss., 1906.

⁷ Epistola Alexandri ad Aristotelem (ff. 107^a–131^b); an easily accessible edition by W. M. Baskervill, Angl. iv 139–67. The identity of the handwriting of Beowulf A and the Epistola Alexandri was recognized by Sedgefield (Edition, 1910, Judith also, some inferences relating to their treatment of the Beowulf MS. and the condition in which they found it may be ventured. The most obvious difference between the language of A and of B is the multitude of io, īo spellings in the B part, a number of which, at least, may be assigned to the Kentish layer of the MS.,¹ in contrast with the almost total absence of such forms in the A part. As no īo forms at all are contained in the MS. of Judith, it has been argued (by ten Brink) that scribe B did not introduce those spellings into the Beowulf, but found them in his original, adhering to his text more faithfully than scribe A.² In case this view is accepted, we might point out some other features which could be interpreted as signs of conservatism on the part of the second copyist.

Thus we find, B: (-)walm, (-)wylm, A: (-)wylm; B: eldo, elde (only 2117: yldum), A: yldo, ylde. (Cf. §§ 7.2, 8.2, 2.3.)

B: -derne, (-)dyrne, A: (-)dyrne; B: mercels, A: -gemyrcu; B: -serce, A: (-)syrce. (Cf. §§ 8.2, 2.3.)

B: eatol, atol, A: atol (Jud.: atol); B: (-)heafola, A: hafela. (Cf. § 12.1.)

B: bafu, bafō, A: babbe (§ 23.5); B: gesēgon, A: sēgon, gesāwōn (§§ 10.1, 23.3).

B: lēg(-), lig(-), A: lig. (Cf. § 10.2.)

B: Wedra (only 2186), 2336: Wedera); A: Wedera. (Cf. § 18.10 n.)

B: wundur(-), wundur-, A: wundor(-), wunder(-); B: wuldur-, A: wuldor(-) (Jud.: wuldor); B: sārwl-, sārwl, A: sārwl-, sārwl-; B: sundur, A: sundor-. (Cf. Siev. §§ 139 f.; Būlb. § 364.)³

A preference for the spelling y in B, and for later i in A is shown in certain groups of words, thus B: drybten (only 2186: i), A: dribten, drybten; B: drybt, A: driht, drybt; B: bycgan, A: bigan; B: byge, bige, A: bige, rarely byge; B: Hygelāc, Higelāc, A: Higelāc (nearly always); B: bynčan, A: pinčan; see § 4. It is true that the spelling y is favored by B also in certain words in which i represents the earlier sound; thus B: syððan, A: syððan, iððan, B: hyt, bit, A: bit, B:

p. 2, n.). That the same scribe wrote also the two other prose texts was pointed out by Sisam, MLR. xi 335 ff.

¹ For details see §§ 14, 16. 1, 17. In 'B' there occur 115 io, io(iō) spellings, in 'A' only 11, viz. scionon 303, hio 455, 623, 1929, gewiofu 697 (u-umlaut of i before labial), -ston 995, friōðu- 1096, hiora 1166, giogōð (iogop) 1190, 1674, niowan 1789. All of these could be called WS. in the broader sense (including 'patois'); for scionon, friōðu- (§ 14.1), see Būlb. § 235 n. — The frequent io spellings (in 'B') of the name Biowulf are especially noteworthy.

³ The same archaic u in posttonic syllable appears in A: codur 663, Heorute 766; so 782, cf. 1075.

hyne (hine), A : bine (hyne), B : is, ys, A : is, B : wylle, A : wille (y 3x); cf. also B : syllan, A : sellan, B : sylf, A : self (only 505 : y); see § 2.¹

In A only do we find the remarkable gen. plur. forms in -o (§ 18. 3), forms like fāmī (§ 19. 1), mænigo (§ 7 n. 1), ēorwan, ēarwan (cf. § 3. 2), hworfan, worc (§ 8. 6), brepe (§ 8. 1), gefāgon (cf. p. xci, n. 3).

That a number of these distinctive spellings of A were actually introduced by that particular scribe is made probable by a noteworthy agreement in various orthographic details between A and the three prose texts which precede the Beowulf. Thus we find yldo, Ep. Al. 419, 726; ligit, ib. 153, lig, Christoph. 14, 17; self 9x² in Ep. Al. (y 2x, eo 4x); purstī, ib. 169, cf. 66, 102, 158, 246; -wliitī, De Reb. ch. 29, nēnine, ib. ch. 24; gen. plur. -fato, Ep. Al. 122, 295, earfēðo 332, Mēdo 400, ondswareo 423, etc.,³ hyro, De Reb. ch. 3; mænigo, Ep. Al. 115, 195, 196, 204, 492, 516 (624), De Reb. chs. 1, 11, Christoph. 20, 29; -ēarwest, Ep. Al. 51, -ēorwde, etc. 28, 217, 363, 367, 451; hworfēð, ib. 164, 743, ge>worc, Christoph. 97; brēðnisse, Ep. Al. 70, brēðlice, De Reb. ch. 10; fāgon, Ep. Al. 751.⁴

That also the second scribe of our Beowulf MS., in some respects, asserted his independence, we are fain to believe on account of some orthographic parallelisms between B and Judith, such as the uniform spellings hyne, ys, sylf in Jud.; ȳwan, Jud. 174 (ēo 240; see § 3. 2); dyre, Jud. 300, 319, and 4x in B (ēo 2x, io 1x; A : ēo 5x; see §§ 16. 1, 3. 3); the regular use of ymbe, prepos., in Jud. (47, 268), B : ymbe(-) 7x (ymb 3x, A : ymb; cf. T.C. § 13); the form sawyrd, preferred in Jud. (6x), and occurring 3x in the latter part of B's work (never sawurd as 3x in A); the representation of æ by ē, Jud. 150, and 4x in B (see note on 1981). Even the exclusive use of ðām (pām) in Jud. and the marked preference for pām (ðām) in Ep. Al. are plainly matched by the distribution of those forms in B and A respectively, see Glossary.

³ A strong preference for the vowel o in endings appears in this text.

Turning to the field of syntax,¹ we may briefly mention some features calling for the attention of students.

1. The use of the singular of concrete nouns in a collective sense (see note on 794).

The singular meaning of the plural of nouns such as burh, geard, eard, wic; rodor, beofon; bānbūs; folc; searo; list, lust, ēst, snyttu, gepyld (semi-adverbial function of dat. plur., cp. on sǣlum); cyme; oferhygd; the use of the plural of abstract nouns with concomitant concretion of meaning, e.g. brōðor, liss, willa.²

2. The absolute (substantival) use of adjectives in their strong inflexion, e.g. gomele ymb gōdne ongeador spræcon 1595.³ The employment of the (more concrete) adjective in cases where our modern linguistic feeling inclines toward the (abstract) adverb, as bādor 497; 2553; 130, 3031; 626, 1290, 1566; 897; etc. The appearance of the comparative in a context where, according to our ideas, no real comparison takes place, e.g. betera 1703, sētran 1839, lēofre 2651, syllicran 3038.⁴

3. Of great interest, as a presumable archaism, is the frequency of the weak adjective when not preceded by the definite article, e.g. gomela Scilding, beapostēapa helm, wīdan rīces, ofer ealde ribt,⁵ some 75 instances (apart from vocatives) being found, including however the doubtful instrumental (dative) forms like deoran (sweorde), beardan (clammum).⁶ The comparative paucity of definite articles together with the more or less demonstrative force of (the attributive) sē, sēo, þæt recognizable in many places have likewise been considered a highly characteristic feature and have received much attention from investigators.⁷ However, the value of the relative frequency of the article use (and the use of the weak adjective) in Old English poems as a criterion of chronology is greatly impaired by the fact that the scribes could easily tamper with their originals by inserting articles in conformity with later or prose use, not to mention the possibility of archaizing tendencies.⁸

³ The substantival function cannot always be distinguished from the adjectival (appositive) one, e.g. wīges heard 886 is either 'he, being brave in battle' or 'the brave one.'

⁸ See L 5. 48. 2; Tupper's edition of the Riddles, p. lxxviii. Similarly inconclusive

4. Omission of the personal pronoun both as subject¹ and object² is abundantly exemplified in our poem; also the indefinite pronoun man is left unexpressed, 1365 (cp. 1290 f., 2547). That the possessive pronoun is dispensed with in many places where a modern English translation would use it, and that the personal pronoun in the dative may be found instead,³ need hardly be mentioned.

5. The peculiar use of such adverbs of place as hider, þonan, nēan, feor, ufan, *sūþan*⁴ and of certain prepositions, like ofer, under, and on with acc., tō, of furnishes numerous instructive instances of the characteristic fact that in the old Germanic languages the vivid idea of 'motion' (considered literally or figuratively) was predominant in many verbs⁵ which are now more commonly felt to be verbs of 'rest.'⁶ Sometimes, it should be added, motion was conceived in a different direction from the ordinary modern use,⁷ and sometimes, contrary to our expectations, the idea of rest rather than motion determined the use (or regimen) of the preposition (see æt, on with dat.). The still fairly well preserved distinction of the 'durative' and 'perfective' (including 'ingressive' and 'resultative') function of verbs,⁸ the concretion of meaning attending verbs denoting a state, or disposition, of mind,⁹ and the unusual, apparently archaic regimen of some verbs¹⁰ are further notable points which will come under the observation of students.

6. Lack of concord as shown in the interchange of cases,¹¹ the coup-as chronological tests are the use of the preposition mid (in place of the instrumental case) and the construction of impersonal verbs with the formal subject hit. In both respects Beowulf would seem to occupy an intermediate position between the so-called Cædmonian and the Cynewulfian poetry. Cf. Sarrazin Käd. 5.

ling of a singular verb with a plural subject,¹ the violation, or free handling, of the *consecutio temporum*² should cause no surprise or suspicion.

7. The construction of mid with accus.³ and the use of in (= WS. on)⁴ are considered Anglianisms. — Both as a dialectal and a chronological test the mode of expressing negation has been carefully studied with the gratifying result of establishing Beowulf as an Anglian poem of about 725 A.D.⁵

8. In the matter of word-order the outstanding feature is the predominance, according to ancient Germanic rule, of the end-position of the verb both in dependent and, in a somewhat less degree, independent clauses, as exemplified in the very first lines of the poem. The opposite order: verb — subject is not infrequently found to mark a distinct advance in the narrative⁶ (the more restful normal order being more properly adapted to description or presentation of situations and minor narrative links⁷) or to intimate in a vague, general way a connection of the sentence with the preceding one, such as might be expressed more definitely by 'and,' (negatively) 'nor,' 'so,' 'indeed,' 'for,' 'however.'⁸ Besides, any part of the sentence may appear in the emphatic head-position, whereby the author is enabled to give effective syntactical prominence to the most important elements, as shown, e.g., in 1323: dēad is Æschere, 548: brēo wāron ýpa, 769: yrre wāron bēgen, 994 f.: goldfāg scinon / web æfter wāgum, 343: Bēowulf is mīn nama, 2583 f.: brēðsigora ne gealp / goldwine Gēata, 1237 f.: reced weardode / unrim eorla, 2582 f.: wīde sprungon / hildelēoman, 287 f.: æg bwæpres sceal / scearp scyldwiga gescād witan. For a detailed study of this subject cf. Ries, L. 6. 12.2. — See also notes on 122 f., 180 f., 575 f., 786. ff.

9. Traces of Latin influence are probably to be recognized in the use of certain appositive participles (thus in 815, 916, 1368, 1370, 1913, 2350) and, possibly, in the predilection for passive construction

² Transition from preterite to present in dependent clauses: 1313 f., 1921 ff., 1925 ff., 2484 ff., 2493 ff., 2717 ff.

³ Cf. Napier, Angl. x 138 f.; Miller's edition of Bede, i, pp. xlv ff.

§ 26. VOCABULARY

The vocabulary of Beowulf, apart from the aspect of poetic diction, invites attention as a possible means of determining the dialectal quality of the text. It must be confessed that extreme caution is necessary in speaking of Anglian elements in the vocabulary, since the testimony of prose texts of a later date is of only limited value. But the following words can with reasonable safety be claimed as belonging primarily to the Anglian area: ¹ gēn, gēna (WS. giet(a)), nefne, nemne, nympe ² (WS. būtan), ac used as interrogative particle, ³ the preposition in (see § 25. 7), bront, semninga, ⁴ ƿorn, gnēaþ, rēc, bebycgan, ⁵ tēo(ga)n, ⁶ and possibly morðor (WS. morð). ⁷ Typical examples of words which are absent, more or less, from the later WS., are gefeon (WS. fægñian), tīd ('time,' disappearing before tīma), snytttru (cp. ƿīsdōm), bearn (cp. cild).

MANUSCRIPT

The only existing manuscript of Beowulf is contained in a volume of the Cottonian collection in the British Museum which is known as Vitellius A.xv.⁸ That volume consists of two originally separate codices⁹ which were arbitrarily joined by the binder (early in the 17th century), and it holds nine different Old English texts, four of them belonging to the first part,¹⁰ and five to the second. Beowulf (folios 129^a–198^b, or, according to the present foliation, 132^a–201^b)¹¹ is the

⁵ At least in the sense of 'sell,' — provided unbeboht, Oros. 18. 10 is rightly rendered by 'unbought.'

⁷ According to Wildhagen, St. Eph. xiii 184 ff., -scua (see l. 160), ƿinnan, geƿin(n) (?) could be added.

⁹ Cf. K. Sisam's valuable observations, MLR. xi 335–37.

fourth number of the second codex, being preceded by three prose pieces and followed by the poem of Judiib. (See above, p. xci.) We do not know where Sir Robert Bruce Cotton (1571-1631), to whose zealous efforts we are indebted for the precious collection of Cottonian manuscripts, obtained that codex.¹ But the name 'Lawrence Nowell' (with date 1563) written at the top of its first page justifies the belief² that Nowell, dean of Lichfield and one of the very earliest students of Anglo-Saxon (d. 1576), had something to do with its preservation in those years following the dissolution of monasteries which witnessed the wanton destruction of untold literary treasures. The date of the Beowulf codex is about the end of the tenth century, as is judged³ from the character of the handwriting exhibited by its two scribes. Thus it is not far removed in time from the three other great collections containing Old English poems, viz. the Exeter Book, the Vercelli Codex, and the so-called Cædmon Manuscript.

While the Cottonian library was lodged in Ashburnham House, in Little Deans Yard, Westminster, the manuscript, like numerous other volumes of the collection, was injured by a disastrous fire (in 1731) causing the scorching of margins and edges and their subsequent gradual crumbling away in many places. In Zupitza's words (1882), "the manuscript did not suffer so much from the fire of 1731 itself as from its consequences, which would, without doubt, have been avoided if the MS. had been at once rebound as carefully as it has been rebound in our days. . . . Further losses have been put a stop to by the new binding; but, admirably as this was done, the binder could not help covering some letters or portions of letters in every back page with the edge of the [transparent] paper which now surrounds every parchment leaf."³ The great value of the two Thorkelin transcripts in supplying readings which in the meantime have been lost will become apparent to everyone that turns over the leaves of the excellent, annotated facsimile edition.

Of the one hundred and forty pages of the MS., seventy-nine (ff. 129^b-162^b, 171^a-174^a, 176^b-178^b) contain 20 lines each (including the line for the Roman numeral), forty-four (ff. 174^b-176^a, 179^a-198^b) 21 lines, sixteen (ff. 163^a-170^b) 22 lines, and the first page (f. 129^a) has 19 lines, the first of which is written in large capitals. In accordance with the regular practice of the period, the Old English text is written continuously like prose. There are on an average slightly less than 23 alliterative verses to the page; towards the end where the scribe endeavored to economize space, the percentage is highest.

1352-77, f. 184^a = ll. 2428-50) will give a fairly good idea.¹ Attention is called to some details. Two forms of y (both punctuated) are used, as seen, e.g., in l. 7 of f. 184^a, — the second one being much rarer than the first, and very seldom found in A. The three forms of s used in B appear, e.g., on f. 184^a, l. 11, viz. the high s (long above the line), the low 'insular' s (long below the line), and the round, uncial s. In A the second of these varieties is completely lacking, and the third is rather sparingly used, — mostly in initial position, and (almost regularly) as a capital. A few times the high s is combined with a following t to a ligature, viz. in l. 168 : moste, l. 646 : wiste, l. 661 : gedigest (?), l. 672 : hyrsted, l. 673 : cyst, l. 1096 : hengeste, l. 1211 : breost. The difference in the shape of g seen in the A and B specimens respectively applies, with absolute consistency, to the entire MS.

The letter k appears five times in kyning, ll. 619, 665, 2144, 2335, 3171. The runic character . ʀ ., for ēpel, is found three times, ll. 520, 913, 1702.²

Regarding the distribution of þ and ð,³ B is decidedly averse to the use of þ in non-initial position, spelling a medial þ only in rare (about a dozen) instances, and a final þ only once (l. 2293), whereas initially both þ and ð are found. Scribe A makes a more liberal use of þ in initial and also — obviously — in medial position, avoiding it, however, generally at the end of words. (Two instances of final þ may be seen in the last but one line of folio 160^a.) As a capital the more ornamental Ð is written. Only in ll. 642, 1896 there appears a somewhat larger þ, which may have been intended as a capital letter. A real large þ is used at the beginning of fit xlii.

That scribe B was, on the whole, following the traditions of a somewhat older school of penmanship is proved especially by his frequent use of the high e, e.g., before n, m, r, t, o, a, and by the shape of his a.

Small capital letters are found in a number of instances after periods,⁴ and large ones appear regularly at the opening of the cantos. Twenty-one times the first letter only of the canto is capitalized, sixteen times⁵ the first two letters (eight times : ÐA), once each the first syllable

² Thus, Wald. i 31; Oros. 168. 11.

ble of Hun-ferð (viii) and Beo-wulf (xxiv),¹ twice the full name of Beowulf (xxi, xxii), once (xxvii) cwom, and the entire first line of the MS. is written in large capitals. But illuminated letters are completely lacking.

The commonest abbreviations of the MS. are 1) \neg = ond, uniformly used with the exception of ll. 600, 1148, 2040; also in \neg sware 354, 1493, 1840, 2860, \neg swarode 258, \neg bwearf 548, \neg sacan 786, 1682, \neg langne 2115 (see Gloss.: and-). 2) \bar{p} = pæt, exceedingly frequent, the full spellings pæt, ðæt forming a very small minority. 3) $\bar{p}\bar{o}n$ (i.e. a stroke above the line, coming between o and n) = ponne, — frequent in both parts of the MS. (ðon also in A).² 4) The sign for m, consisting of a line drawn over the preceding vowel. It is exceedingly common in the dat. ending -um, but is frequent also in pā, ðā, bī, i.e., pām, ðām, bim (at least, in B). Other instances: frā 581, 2366, 2565, frō 2556, hā 374, 717, 2992, gū (cystum) 1486, 1723, 2469, 2543, 2765; maðpū 1023, 2055, 2193, 2405, 2750, 2757, 3016, gegnū 1404; beaṛ 896 (the only example of m abbreviated after a consonant); further (in B): sū 2279, 2301, 2401, 3123 f., sū ne 3061, rū 2461, bī rū 2690, fultū 2662, frū gare 2856, glūpe 2637, grī 2860, 3012, 3085, brī 2930, for nā 2772, streā 2545, cwō 2073, dō 2890, wō mū 3073, -sōne 3122, ȳb(e) 3169, 3172.

This abbreviation is never used for n in our MS.³

In B, which is much more partial to abbreviations than A, the following additional contractions occur.⁴ \bar{g} = ge, as prefix: 2570, 2637, 2726, 3146, 3165, 3166, 3174, 3179, besides in berge 3175, freoge 3176;⁵ — \bar{m} = men in 3162: men, 3165: men and genumen (\bar{g} num); — $\bar{a}f\bar{i}$ = after, 2060, 2176, 2531, 2753; $\bar{o}f$ = ofer, 3132, 3145; — $\bar{d}ry\bar{h}$ = dryhten, 3175.

The numerals are nearly always spelt out; only in ll. 147, 1867, 2401; 207; 379, 2361 the signs of the Roman numerals .XII., .XV., .XXX. respectively are substituted.

There are comparatively few instances of the mark of vowel length, the so-called apex of Latin inscriptions,⁶ consisting of a "heavy dot,

² Strangely, the form ðonne (with initial ð) never occurs in B.

Twice the prefix ā- is provided with this ‘accent’ (ābeag 775, āris 1390), once the suffix -lic (sarlic 2109), and twice the stem of an inflected adjectival form (hārne 2553, fāne 2655).

are freely divided; e.g., ge frunon 2, of teab 5, ge scæp brwile 26, on woc 56; þæt te 151, wol de 200, wur don 228, fæt tum 716, alum þen 733, gefreme de 811, teob hode 951; hea þo lafe 460, heoru grim me 1847, etc. On the other hand, separate words are run together, as shown, e.g., on the specimen page of B, by tolife, togebidanne, ongalgan, hissunu, tobroðre, nemæg; or swaða 189, þarwas 223, ærbe 264, þaselestan 416, arwyrd 455, meto 553, forfleat 1908-9; arassa 2538, þenuða 426, þeheme 2490, etc. That these practices are liable to result in ambiguity and confusion, is illustrated by nege leafnes word 245, mægen hres manna 445, wist fylle ævenne was 734, medo/stig ge mæt 924, onge byrd 1074, eallang twidig 1708, wigge weorþad 1783,¹ wind gereste 2456, mere wio ingasmiltis 2921.

Punctuation is rather sparingly used.² A period occurs on an average once in four or five lines, but with greatly varying degrees of frequency in different portions. It is usually placed at the end of the second half-line, occasionally at the end of the first half-line, and a few times — nearly always by sheer mistake — within the half-line (61^a, 273^a, 279^a, 423^a, 553^b, 1039^a, 1159^a, 1585^b, 2542^a, 2673^b, 2832^b, 2897^a). These marks may be said to correspond to major or minor syntactical pauses or, in a good many instances, merely to divisions of breath-groups. Twice a colon is found in the text, viz., after hafelan 1372^a, and after gemunde 2488^b. After reccan 91^b, at the end of the page, two raised periods followed by a comma occur. (Is this meant to stress a pause before a significant passage?) A colon followed by a curved dash is placed six times — in B only — at the end of a canto; once the same sign is found after the canto number (xl).

A pretty large number of corrections, mostly by the original hands, are scattered through the MS. Those which are of positive interest have been recorded among the Variants (or in Lang. § 19). On the freshening up of ff. 179 and 198^b, and on the modern English gloss to l. 6^a and the Latin gloss to l. 3150^b, see likewise the Variants.

Like all of the more extensive Old English poems, Beowulf is divided into 'cantos' or 'chapters' which were, in all likelihood, denoted by the term fit(t).³ They are marked by leaving space for one line vacant between sections,⁴ by placing a colon with a short dash or

² On metrical and syntactical pointing, see Luick, Beibl. xxiii 226 ff.

curve at the close of a section,¹ by the use of capitals and the addition of Roman numerals at the head of a new division. Besides the unnumbered introductory canto,² they are forty-three in number. The numerals xxxviii and xxviii have been omitted, and there is no indication at all of division xxx.³ Leaving out of account canto xxxv, which is exceptionally long,⁴ the divisions vary from 112 lines (xli) to 43 lines (vii), the usual length being between 60 and 90.

Though sometimes appearing arbitrary and inappropriate, these divisions are not unnaturally to be attributed to the author himself, who may have considered his literary product incomplete without such formal marking of sections. Of course, it must be borne in mind that his conceptions of structure were different from our modern notions. He felt at liberty to pause at places where we would not, and to proceed without stop where we would think a pause indispensable. He cared more for a succession of separate pictures than for a steady progress of narration by orderly stages. Thus he interrupts, e.g., the three great combats by sectional divisions, but he plainly indicates by the character of the closing lines that he did so on purpose (ll. 788-90, 1555 f., 2600 f.). He even halts in the middle of a sentence, but the conjunction oð þæt which opens the ensuing sections, xxv, xxviii, was not considered an inadequate means of introducing a new item of importance, cf. above, p. lviii. (See Gen. 1248.) On the other hand, the last great adventure is not separated by any pause from the events that happened fifty years before (see l. 2200). A closer inspection reveals certain general principles that guided the originator of those divisions. He likes to conclude a canto with a maxim, a general reflection, a summarizing statement, or an allusion to a turn in the events. He is apt to begin a canto with a formal speech, a resumptive paragraph,⁵ or the announcement of an action, especially of the 'motion' of individuals or groups of men.⁶ Very clearly marked is the opening of cantos xxxvii and xxxviii (Ðā ic snūde gefrægn etc.)⁷ and of xxxvi (Wiglāf wæs

² Cf. below, p. cix, and note on 1 ff.

bāten, Wēoxstānes sunu).¹ Altogether there is too much method in the arrangement of 'fits' to regard it as merely a matter of chance or caprice.²

It need hardly be mentioned that no title of the poem is found at the head of the MS. But since the days when Sharon Turner, J. J. Conybeare, and N. F. S. Grundtvig first designated it as 'the Poem of Bēowulf,'³ it has been regularly, and most appropriately, named after its great hero.

VIII. Genesis of the Poem

Like nearly all of the Old English poems, like the epics of the Chanson de Roland and the Nibelungenlied, the Beowulf has come down to us anonymously. Nor do we find in Anglo-Saxon times any direct reference to it which would throw light on the vital questions of when, where, by whom, and under what circumstances the most important of the Anglo-Saxon literary monuments was composed. Hence, a bewildering number of hypotheses have been put forward with regard to its authorship and origin. A brief survey of the principal points at issue will be attempted in the following pages.

UNITY OF AUTHORSHIP⁴

It has been the fate of Beowulf to be subjected to the theory of multiple authorship, the number of its conjectural 'makers' ranging up to six or more. At the outset, in this line of investigation, the wish was

no doubt father to the thought.¹ Viewing the poem in the light of a 'folk epic' based on long continued oral tradition, scholars labored hard to trace it back to its earliest and purest form or forms and to establish the various processes such as contamination, agglutination, interpolation, modernization by which it was gradually transformed into an epic of supposedly self-contradictory, heterogeneous elements. While Ettmüller, who first sounded this note, contented himself, at least in his translation (1840), with characterizing the Beowulf as a union of a number of originally separate lays and marking off in his text the lines added by clerical editors, daring dissectors like Müllenhoff, Möller, ten Brink, Boer undertook to unravel in detail the 'inner history' of the poem, rigorously distinguishing successive stages, strata, or hands of authors and editors. With Möller this searching analysis was reinforced by the endeavor to reconstruct the primitive stanzaic form. Ten Brink emphasized the use of variants, that is, parallel versions of ancient lays which were eclectically combined for better or worse and became the basis of parts of the final epic poem. To instance some of the results arrived at, there existed, according to Müllenhoff, two short poems by different authors recounting the Grendel fight (I) and the Dragon fight (IV) respectively. To the first of these certain additions were made by two other men, namely a continuation (fight with Grendel's mother, II) and the Introduction. Then a fifth contributor (interpolator A) added the Home-Coming part (III) and interpolated parts I and II to make them harmonize with his continuation. A sixth man, the chief interpolator (B) and final editor, joined the Dragon fight (IV) to the Grendel part thus augmented (I, II, III) and also introduced numerous episodes from other legends and a great deal of moralizing and theological matter.² Schücking elaborated a special thesis concerning Bēowulf's Return. This middle portion, he endeavored to show, was composed and inserted as a connecting link between the expanded Grendel part (Bēowulf in Denmark) and the Dragon fight, by a man who likewise wrote the Introduction and interpolated various episodes of a historical character. Still more recently Boer thought he could recognize several authors by their peculiarity of manner,³ e.g., the so-called 'episode poet' who added most of the episodic material; a combiner of two versions of the Gren-del part; another combiner who connected the combined Grendel part with the Dragon part, composed Bēowulf's Return and two or three episodes, remodeled the last part by substituting the Geats for the original Danes, and placed the introduction of the old Dragon poem at the head of the entire epic. Truly, an ingeniously complicated, perplexing procedure.

³ Similarly Berendsohn would discriminate three different strata of poetical transmission on the basis of broad, general stylistic criteria.

There is little trustworthy evidence to support positive claims of this sort.

It is true, the probability that much of his material had come to the author in metrical form, is to be conceded. But — quite apart from the question of the forms of language or dialect — we can never hope to get at the basic lays by mere excision, however ingeniously done. The Beowulfian epic style is incompatible with that of the short heroic song, not to speak of the more primitive ballads which must be presumed to have existed in large numbers in early Anglo-Saxon times.

Contradictions, incongruities, and obscurities that have been detected in the story can, as a rule, be removed or plausibly accounted for by correct interpretation of the context¹ and proper appreciation of some prevalent characteristics of the old style and narrative method. Instances of apparent incoherence, omissions, repetitions, digressions, or irrelevant passages can no longer be accepted as proof of the patchwork theory, since analogous cases have been traced in many Old English poems of undoubted single authorship, in addition to examples from other literatures.² A number of inconsistencies may also be naturally explained by the use of conventional elements, that is, current motives and formulas of style,³ or by imperfect adaptation or elaborate refashioning of old saga material.⁴ Chronological incompatibilities as observed in the case of Hrōðgār, Bēowulf, and (perhaps) Hygd are straightened out without difficulty.⁵ Variations in detail between Bēowulf's report of his experiences in Denmark and the actual story of the first two divisions furnish no basis for the charge of separate workmanship (see note on 1994 ff.). Nor would it be at all reasonable to insist throughout on impeccable logic and lucidity of statement, which would indeed be strangely at variance with the general character of Beowulf and other Old English poems.

That the Christian elements have not been merely grafted on the text, but are most intimately connected with the very substance of the poem, has been remarked before.¹ A certain want of harmony that has resulted from the Christian presentation of heathen material is not such as to warrant the assumption that a professed redactor went over a previously existing version, revising it by interpolation or substitution of Christian touches. The mere technical difficulties of such a process would have been of the greatest,² and vestiges of imperfect suture would be expected to be visible in more than one passage of our text.

No serious differences of language, diction, or meter can be adduced in favor of multiple authorship.³ A few seemingly unusual instances of the definite article,⁴ some exceptional verse forms,⁵ the occurrence of a parenthetical exclamation in some first half-lines,⁶ several minor syntactical and rhetorical features⁷ have been suspected of indicating a later date than that attributed to the bulk of the poem. Words, formations, or combinations could be mentioned which occur only in definitely limited portions.⁸ But it would be hazardous, in fact presumptuous to assign any decisive weight to such insecure and fragmentary criteria. Contrariwise, it is entirely pertinent to emphasize the general homo-

A number of remarkable nonce words are met with in 'Beowulf's Return,' such as æfengrom 2074, blöðigtöð 2082, müðbona 2079, sinfrea 1934, ligetorn 1943, friðusibb folca 2017. — The postposition of the definite article is confined to the second main part: 2007 (æbtlem þone), 2334, 2588, 2959, 2969, 3081, cp. 2734 (2722). In the second part only, occur words and phrases like stearcheort, ondslybt, morgenlong, morgenceald, uferan dögrum, sigora waldend, etc. However, the repeated use, within a short compass, of one and the same word or expression (or rhythmical form or, indeed, spelling), especially a striking one, is rather to be considered a natural psychological fact (cf. Schröder L 8. 18. 367; Schücking L 4. 139. 7). generosity of the poem in matters of form as well as substance and atmosphere.¹

Not that style and tone are monotonously the same, as to kind and quality, in all parts of the poem. In particular, the second part (Dragon fight) differs in several respects appreciably from the first (Bēowulf in Denmark), though for very natural reasons. Its action is much simpler and briefer, not extending beyond one day; ² there is less variety of incident and setting, a smaller number of persons, no dialogue. The disconnectedness caused by encumbering digressions is more conspicuous, episodic matter being thrown in here and there quite loosely, it seems, though according to a clearly conceived plan.³ No allusions to non-Scandinavian heroes are inserted, but all the episodes⁴ are drawn from Geatish tradition and show a curiously distinct historical air. A deeper gloom pervades all of the second part, fitly foreshadowing the hero's death and foreboding, we may fancy, the downfall of Geat power. The moralizing tendency is allowed full sway and increases inordinately towards the end. Regarding the grave structural defects characteristic of the 'Dragon Fight,' it would not be unreasonable to charge it primarily to the nature of the material used by the poet. Unlike the Danish element of the first part, which was no doubt familiarly associated with the central contests, the heroic traditions of Geatish-Swedish history were entirely separate from the main story, and the author, desirous though he was of availing himself of that interesting subject-matter for the purpose of epic enlargement, failed to establish an organic relation between the two sets of sources. Hence what generally appears in 'Bēowulf's Adventures in Denmark' as an integral part of the story, natural setting, or pertinent allusion, has been left outside the action proper in the Dragon part. No description of Geat court life has been introduced, no name of the royal seat (like the Danish Heorot)⁵ is mentioned, the facts pertaining to Bēowulf's bām (in which he does not seem to live, 2324 ff.) remaining altogether obscure. Queen Hygd⁶ is a mere shadow in comparison with Hrōðgār's brilliant consort, be-

² Excepting, of course, the vaguely sketched preliminaries and the ten days needed for the construction of the memorial mound. The action of the first part can be definitely followed up for a series of five (or six) days, see note on 219.

sides being suspicious because of her singular name. Whether King Bēowulf was married or not, we are unable to make out (see note on 3150 ff.).

In explanation of some discrepancies and blemishes of structure and execution it may also be urged that very possibly the author had no complete plan of the poem in his head when he embarked upon his work, and perhaps did not finish it until a considerably later date.¹ His original design — if we may indulge in an unexciting guess — seems to have included the main contents of 11, 12, 13,² or, to use a descriptive title: Bēowulfes sīð.³ The Danish court being the geographical and historical center of the action, the poet not unnaturally started by detailing the Scylding pedigree⁴ and singing the praise of Scyld, the mythical ancestor of the royal line. It is possible, of course, that some passages were inserted after the completion of the first draft; e.g., part of the thirteenth canto with its subtle allusion to Bēowulf's subsequent kingship (861), or the digression on (Hāma [?] and) Hygelāc the Geat (1202 [1197] — 1214), which can easily be detached from the text. The author may have proceeded slowly and may have considered the first adventure (up to 1250) substantial enough to be recited or read separately; hence, some lines of recapitulation were prefixed to the story of the second contest (1252 ff.). Gradually the idea of a continuation with Bēowulf's death as the central subject took shape in the author's mind; thus a hint of Bēowulf's expected elevation to the throne (1845 ff.) is met with in the farewell conversation. A superior unity of structure, however, was never achieved. The lines in praise of the Danish kings placed as motto at the head of the first division and those extolling the virtues of the great and good Bēowulf at the close of the poem typify, in a measure, the duality of subjects and compositions.

Whether the text after its completion has been altered by interpolations it is difficult to determine. The number of lines which could be eliminated straightway without detriment to the context or style is surprisingly small; see 51 (cp. 1355 f.), 73,⁵ 141, 168 f., 181 f., 1410, 2087 f., 2329 ff., 2422–24, 2544 (?), 2857–59, 3056; of longer passages, 1197–1214 (Hāma, Hygelāc), 1925–62 (prȳð, Offa), 2177–

³ L. 872: sīð Bēowulfes. Cf. Müllenhoff xiv 202; Möller 118.

89 (Bēowulf's conduct). A decided improvement would result from the removal of 1681^b-84^a (and perhaps of 3005).

It is possible, of course, that certain changes involving additions were made by the author himself or by a copyist who had some notions of his own. But the necessity of assuming any considerable interpolations cannot be conceded. Even the þrȳð-Offa episode, far-fetched and out of place as it seems, can hardly have been inserted after the numbering of the sections was fixed by the author,¹ unless, indeed, it was substituted for a corresponding passage of the original. For the presumable Cynewulfian insertions, see the discussion of Hrōðgār's sermon, below ('Relation to other Poems').

DATE. RELATION TO OTHER POEMS

Obviously the latest possible date² is indicated by the time when the MS. was written, i.e. about 1000 A.D. It is furthermore to be taken for granted that a poem so thoroughly Scandinavian in subject-matter and evincing the most sympathetic interest in Danish affairs cannot well have been composed after the beginning of the Danish invasions toward the end of the 8th century.

Historical Allusions

The only direct historical data contained in the poem are the repeated allusions to the raid of Hygelāc (Chochilaicus), which took place between 512 and 520 A.D. (cf. above, p. xxxix), and the mention, at the close of one of those allusive passages, of the Merovingian line of kings (Merewioing 2921). As the latter reference is primarily to a bygone period, and as, on the other hand, the use of that name could conceivably have been continued in tradition even after the fall of the Merovingian dynasty (in 751), no definite chronological information can be derived from its mention. The latest of the events classed as 'historical,' the death of Onela, has been conjecturally assigned to the year 530 (cf. above, p. xl).³

It should be added that the pervading Christian atmosphere points to a period not earlier than, say, the second half of the 7th century.

Linguistic Tests

³ The þrȳð-Offa episode cannot be used for dating, since we have no right to connect it with Offa, king of Mercia (who died in 796).

1. A study of the gradual increase in the use of the definite article (originally demonstrative pronoun), the decrease of the combination of weak adjective and noun (wisa fengel), the increase of the combination of article and weak adjective and noun (se grimma gæst).

2. Sound changes as definitely proved by the meter, viz.

a) earlier dissyllabic vs. later monosyllabic forms in the case of contraction, chiefly through loss of intervocalic b, e.g. bēaban, bēan — bēan (T. C. § 1).

b) earlier long vs. later (analogical) short diphthongs in the case of the loss of antevocalic b after r (or l), e.g. mearbas, mēaras — mearas (T. C. § 3).

c) forms with vocalic r, l, m, n to be counted as monosyllabic or dissyllabic, e.g. wundr (wundor) — wundor (T. C. § 6).

It must be admitted that these criteria are liable to lead to untrustworthy results when applied in a one-sided and mechanical manner and without careful consideration of all the factors involved.¹ Allowance should be made for individual and dialectal² variations, archaizing tendencies, and (in the matter of the article and weak adjective tests)³ scribal alterations. Above all, a good many instances of test 2 are to be judged non-conclusive, since it remains a matter of honest doubt what degree of rigidity should be demanded in the rules of scansion (cf. T. C. §§ 3 ff.). Yet it cannot be gainsaid that these tests, which are based on undoubted facts of linguistic development, hold good in a general way. They justify the conclusion, e.g., that the forms of the language used by Cynewulf are somewhat more modern than those obtaining in Beowulf. They tend to show that Exodus is not far removed in time from Beowulf.⁴ The second set of tests makes it appear probable that Genesis (A) and Daniel are earlier than Beowulf.

A means of absolute chronological dating was proposed by Morsbach.⁵ He collected, from early texts which can be definitely dated, evidence calculated to show that the loss of final -u after a long stressed syllable did not take place before 700 (slightly earlier than the loss of intervocalic and antevocalic b, see tests 2 a, b), and demonstrated that in a number of instances the use of the forms without -u (and of forms like fēorum) was positively established by the meter, thus arriving at the conclusion that Beowulf could not have been composed until after the year 700.¹ Though several examples cited by Morsbach and by Richter (pp. 8 f.) are doubtful on account of metrical uncertainty,² there occur indeed some lines in which the older forms with final -u would disturb the scansion, e.g. 104^b: *fifelcynnes eardu, 2609^b: bondu rond gefēng(?)*.

¹ Surprisingly wide discrepancies between the computations made by different scholars who have applied the second set of tests (Sarrazin L 4. 144, Richter L 6. 6. 1, Seiffert L 6. 6. 2) have resulted from (1) a failure to eliminate from the calculations of cases under 2c) those words which always (or nearly always) are dissyllabic (e.g. mōdor, ēðel), (2) differences in the practice of scansion naturally arising from the fact of metrical latitude, and (3) unavoidable oversights in collecting the material. Contradictory conclusions are indicated by the fact that Barnouw, on the basis of his syntactical criteria, dated Genesis (A) at 740, Daniel between 800 and 830, Beowulf at 660, Cynewulf's poems between 850 and 880; whereas the dates arrived at by Richter (with the help of the more reliable phonetic-metrical tests) are 700, 700, 700-730, 750-800 respectively. The corresponding dates set up by Sarrazin are 700, 700, 740, 760-80. For an earlier chronological list (1898) by Trautmann, see his Kynewulf, pp. 121-3.

There is a possibility that in our only extant MS. a few forms are preserved which would seem to indicate a date anterior to about 750 A. D.,³ viz. wundini 1382 and unigmetes 1792. The latter, however, admits of a different interpretation (cf. Lang. § 18. 8), and as to the former, it is a question whether it is not more natural to assume a mere scribal blunder (for wundnū, i.e. wundnum) than a perpetuation — in thoroughly modern surroundings — of such an isolated form reflecting a much earlier state of language.

Relation to other Old English Poems

Bearing in mind the conventional use of a remarkably large stock of stereotyped expressions and devices of alliterative poetry, and furthermore the fact that many Old English poems must have been lost chiefly as a result of the Danish and Norman invasions and of the dissolution of monasteries, it behoves us to exercise extreme caution in asserting a direct relation between different poems on the basis of so-called parallel passages.⁴ Otherwise we are in grave danger of setting up an endless chain of interrelations or, it may be, of assigning to one man an unduly large number, if not the majority, of the more important poems. We must certainly reckon with the fact that Anglo-Saxon England was wonderfully productive of secular as well as of religious poetry, and that the number of individual authors must have been correspondingly large. It might well have been said of the pre-Norman period: Vetus Anglia cantat.

² E.g., 1297^a on *gestāes bādu, 1189^b on *bælepa bearnu. (Cf. T. C. § 23.) In Genesis (A) Sarrazin recognized several instances (e.g., 1217, 1308, 1417) in which defective half-lines would be set right by the insertion (restoration) of the -u, cf. ES. xxxviii 178 f., Kād. 25 f. For the metrical use of the forms of the fēorum type, see T. C. § 3.

One of the reasonably certain relations brought to light by a close comparison of various Old English poems is the influence on Beowulf of the extensive poem of Genesis (A), which in its turn presupposes the poetical labors of Cædmon as described by the Venerable Bede. Not only do we discover numerous and noteworthy parallelisms of words and phrases, many of them being traceable nowhere else,¹ but the occurrence in both poems of the religious motives of the Creation, Cain's fratricide, the giants and deluge (not to mention what has been called the Old Testament atmosphere), tends to establish a clear connection between the two. More than that, certain minor traits and expressions are made use of in Beowulf in such a manner as to suggest a process of imitation, as may be seen, e.g., from the lines at the close of the poem referring to the praise of the hero, which vividly recall the opening of Genesis (1 ff., 15 ff.).²

Likewise the priority of Daniel has been fairly demonstrated.³ It can hardly be doubted that the picture of a king (Nebuchadnezzar) living in splendor and opulence, who suffers punishment for his pride, is reflected in Hrōðgār's edifying harangue, 1700 ff.⁴ Also the 'devil' worship of the Danes, 175 ff., is curiously suggestive of the idolatry practised by the Babylonians.⁵ In both instances the phraseological correspondence is sufficiently close.¹ That Hrōðgār should caution Bēowulf against the sin of pride, and that the poet should go out of his way to denounce the supposed heathen worship among the Danes, will not appear quite so far-fetched, if the author was guided by reminiscences of Daniel which he adapted — not entirely successfully — to the subject in hand.

Furthermore, the spirited poem of Exodus is marked by a large number of striking parallels, some of which, at least, present all the appearance of having been imitated in Beowulf.²

On the other hand, the legend of Andreas exhibits abundant and unmistakable signs of having been written with Beowulf as a model. Wholesale borrowing of phrases, which more than once are forced into a strange context, and various parallelisms in situations and in the general heroic conception of the story leave no shadow of a doubt that the author of the religious poem was following in the footsteps of the great secular epic.³

That the famous Cynewulf was acquainted with Beowulf is to be inferred from the character of certain parallel passages occurring especially in Elene and in the short Fates of the Apostles.⁴ The case will be strengthened if we include in the list of his poems — as seems quite reasonable — all of *Christ*⁵ and Guðlac B, perhaps also Guðlac A. (The inclusion of Phoenix is rather doubtful, the exclusion of Andreas is practically certain.)

At the same time a peculiar and, in fact, puzzling relation is found to exist between Christ 681–85 (659 ff.), 756–78 and Hrōðgār's sermon, Beow. 1724 ff. We may note Christ 660: [God] ūs giefe sealde, 662 ond ēac monigfealde mōdes snyttru / sēow ond sette geond sefan monna; 682 . . . his giefe bryttað; / nyle hē āngum ānum ealle gesyllan / gāstes snyttru, þy lās him gielp scebbe / þurb his ānes cræft ofer ðpre forð; 756 forþon wē ā sculon idle lustas, / synwunde forseōn, ond þæs sēllran gefēon (cp. Beow. 1759). God, so we are told, sends his messengers to protect us from the arrows of the devil: 761 þā ūs gescildap wið sceppendra / eglum earhfarum, . . . þonne wrōbtora . . . onsendeð / of his brægdobogan biterne stræl. / Forþon wē fæste sculon wið þām færsceyte / . . . wearde healdan, / þy læs se attres ord in gebūge, / biter bordgelāc under bānlocan . . . þæt bið frēcne wund . . . Utan ūs beorgan þā. (Cp. Gusl. 781 beorgað him bealonip.)

That this whole series of parallels relating to 1. God's distribution of manifold gifts, 2. the danger of pride, 3. the guarding against the shafts of the devil, should be merely the result of chance, is a supposition exceeding the bounds of credibility.¹ In Christ the first two of those motives are based on the ascertained source (cf. Cook's edition, pp. 136, 141); the third² is consistently connected with one of Cynewulf's favorite motives, that of the baneful wound of sin. In Beowulf the idea of the granting of worldly power and of the punishment of pride can be satisfactorily referred to the example of Daniel, yet there is no hint in Daniel of the distribution of various kinds of gifts to different men. Nor is the theme of the devil's arrows in the least warranted by the situation.

Moreover, at the close of the runic passage which follows immediately, Christ 797 ff., we meet with the expression, 812 (brond bið on tybte,) *æleð ealdgestrēon unmunlice (gæsta gifrast),*³ which reminds us of Beowulf 1756 f. (fēhð ðper tō) sē þe unmunlice mādmas dælep, / eorles ærgestrēon. Again, in Christ iii 1550 we come across the phrase sāwle weard, which by its explanatory variation lifes wīsdōm (1551) helps us to understand the real force of the analogous expression, Beow. 1741 f. se weard . . . sāwele hyrde. Also Christ iii 1400 f. (þā ic þē gōda swā fela forgiefen hæfde) ond þē on þām eallum ēades tō lýt [el] / mōde þūhte recalls Beow. 1748 þinceð him tō lýt el þæt hē lange hēold. That the extended enumeration, Beow. 1763 ff., is entirely in the manner of Cynewulf (cp., e.g., Christ 591 ff., 664 ff.) should not be overlooked in this connection.

Such being the case, we can hardly refuse acceptance to the most natural explanation that offers, viz. that Cynewulf's own hand is to be detected in portions of that homiletic passage in Beowulf. This does not mean, of course, that we should, with Sarrazin, regard Cynewulf as the redactor of *Beowulf*⁴ — there are, with all the similarities in stylistic respect, irreconcilable differences of viewpoint which preclude such an assumption. But it is entirely possible, and more than that, that Cynewulf was sufficiently interested in this speech of Hrōðgār's to alter and interpolate it in accordance with his own views and literary predilections. We might even go one step farther. There are a few brief and easily detachable passages having the air of a corrective afterthought and showing a distinct Cynewulfian flavor, such as ll. 168 f., 588^b-89^a, 3054^b ff.¹ Supposing Cynewulf had a copy of Beowulf before him, what could have prevented him from inserting those pious marginalia to give expression to his own thoughts of stern Christian doctrine?²

Whether any Old English poems besides those mentioned have come under the influence of Beowulf, it is extremely difficult to say. It would be unsafe, e.g., to claim it in the case of Judith or Malton.³ Altogether, we should hesitate to attribute to Beowulf a commanding, central position in the development of Anglo-Saxon poetry.⁴

The chronological conclusion to be drawn from the ascertained relation to other poems agrees well enough with the linguistic evidence. Placing the poems of Genesis, Daniel, Exodus or the so-called Cædmon group in the neighborhood of 700 (to mention a definite date), and Cynewulf in the latter half of the eighth century (or, with Cook, in the period between 750 and 825),⁵ we would naturally assign Beowulf to the first half of the eighth century, perhaps not far from the middle of it.⁶

RISE OF THE POEM. AUTHORSHIP

In discussing this highly problematic subject⁷ we confine ourselves in the main to outlining what seems the most probable course in the development of the story-material into our epic poem.

² It is to be admitted, of course, that some scribe thoroughly familiar with Cynewulf's works might have made all those interpolations.

³ It seems not unlikely in the case of the Metra of Boetbius, especially Met. i; cf. ESr. xlii 325 n. 1.

⁴ The specific Beowulfian reminiscences in Lazamon hunted up by Wülcker (Beitr. iii 551 f.) may safely be laid on the table.

⁷ Cf. especially ten Brink, chs. 11, 13; Rönning L 4. 15. 88 ff.; Sarrazin L 4. 16, 17, 144; Symons L 4. 29; Brandl 952 ff., 999 ff.; Schück L 4. 39, 137; Chadwick H. A. 51 ff.; also A. Erdmann, Über die Heimat und den Namen der Angeln, 1890, pp. 51 ff.; besides the editions of Thorpe, Arnold, Sedgfield, and the translations of Earle and Clark Hall.

1. That the themes of the main story, i.e. the contest with the Grendel race and the fight with the dragon, are of direct Scandinavian provenience, may be regarded as practically certain.¹ The same origin is to be assigned to the distinctly historical episodes of the Swedish-Geatish wars of which no other traces can be found in England.²

2. Of the episodic matter introduced into the first part, the allusions to the Germanic legends of Eormenric and *Hāma*³ as well as of *Weland*⁴ are drawn from the ancient heroic lore brought over by the Anglo-Saxons from their continental home. The Finn legend of Ingvaenic associations reached England through the same channels of popular transmission. Whether old Frisian lays were used as the immediate source of the Beowulfian episode is somewhat doubtful on account of the markedly Danish point of view which distinguishes the Episode even more than the Fragment.⁵ That tales of Breca, chief of the Brondingas, were included in the repertory of the Anglo-Saxon scop, is possibly to be inferred from the allusion, Wids. 25 (cp. l. 63: mid Heaþo-Rēamum), but the brilliant elaboration of the story and its connection with the life of the great epic hero must be attributed to the author himself.⁶ Ancient North German tradition was brought into relation with Danish matters in the story of Scyld Scēfing.⁷ Danish legends form the direct basis of the Heremōd episodes⁸ and possibly even of the Sigemund allusion.⁹ That the tragedy of the Heaðo-Bard feud and the glory of Hrōðgār, Hrōðulf, and the fair hall Heorot were celebrated themes of Anglo-Saxon song, may be concluded from the references in Widsið, but the form in which the dynastic element is introduced so as to serve as historical setting, and the close agreement noted in the case of the old spearman's speech make it appear probable that ancient popular tradition was reinforced by versions emanating directly from Denmark.

A specific Frisian source has been urged for the story of Hygelāc's disastrous Viking expedition of which Scandinavian sources betray no knowledge.¹⁰ A genuine Anglo-Saxon, or rather Angle, legend is contained in the episode of Offa and his strong-minded queen.¹¹

3. There is no evidence to show that 'a Bēowulf legend' had gradually grown up out of popular stories that had been brought over to England by the migrating Angles.¹ If such were the case, it would be inexplicable why the exclusive interest in Scandinavian legends remained virtually unimpaired, and why in particular such a minute attention to the fortunes of Northern dynasties continued to be manifested in the epic.² Regarding its subject-matter as a whole, the Beowulf cannot be called a Germanic, or Anglo-Saxon, epic; it is emphatically Scandinavian. Poema danicum dialecto anglosaxonica — this characterization of the poem by its first editor, if reasonably qualified by latter-day interpretation, remains essentially true.

To account for this very peculiar state of affairs with any approach to probability is not quite easy. The most satisfactory explanation offered by way of a hypothesis³ is that there may have existed close relations, perhaps through marriage, between an Anglian court and the kingdom of Denmark, whereby a special interest in Scandinavian traditions was fostered among the English nobility.⁴ It is true, of direct intercourse between England and Denmark in those centuries preceding the Danish invasions we have no positive historical proof. But we have certainly no right to infer from the statement of the OE. Chronicle (A. D. 787) with regard to the earliest Danish attack: on his [Beorbtrices] dagum cuōmon ærest. iii. scipu . . . þæt wæron þā ærestan scipu Deniscra monna þē Angelcynnes lond gesōbton, that peaceful visits of Danes in England were unknown before, since the reference is clearly to hostile inroads which then occurred for the first time. Another conjecture that has proved attractive to several scholars tried to establish Friesland as a meeting-ground of Danes and Englishmen where a knowledge of Northern tales was acquired by the latter.⁵

² Cf. Sarrazin Kād. 89 f. — If the Geatas were Jutes, i. e. a tribe with whom the Angles had formerly shared the Jutish peninsula (cf. Kier L. 4. 78. 38 f.), the difficulty would be materially lessened. This must be conceded to the advocates of the Jutland theory.

³ See Morsbach L. 4. 143. 277.

4. Evidently, we cannot entertain the notion that there was in existence even an approximately complete Scandinavian original ready to be put into Anglo-Saxon verse. If nothing else, the style and tone of Beowulf would disprove it, since they are utterly unlike anything to be expected in early Scandinavian poetry. But a number of lays (possibly also some poems interspersed with prose narrative like many of the Eddic lays) dealing with a variety of subjects became known in England, and, with the comparatively slight differences between the two languages in those times,¹ could be easily mastered and turned to account by an Anglo-Saxon poet. We may well imagine, e.g., that the Englishman knew such a lay or two on the slaying of Grendel and his mother, another one on the dragon adventure, besides, at any rate, two Danish (originally Geatish) poems on the warlike encounters between Geats and Swedes leading up to the fall of Ongenþeow and Onela respectively.

Whether the picture of the life of the times discloses any traces of Scandinavian originals is a fascinating query that can be answered only in very general and tentative terms. An enthusiastic archeologist² set up the claim that a good deal of the original cultural background had been retained in the Old English poem, as shown, e.g., by the helmets and swords described in Beowulf which appear to match exactly those used in the Northern countries in the period between A.D. 550 and 650. Again, it would not be surprising if Norse accounts of heathen obsequies had inspired the brilliant funeral scene at the close of the poem, ll. 3137 ff. (see note, and 1108 ff., 2124 ff., also note on 4-52: Scyld's sea-burial). But, on the whole, it is well to bear in mind that Anglo-Saxon and Scandinavian conditions of life were too much alike to admit of drawing a clear line of division in our study of Beowulfian antiquities. Certain features, however, can be mentioned that are plainly indicative of English civilization, such as the institution of the witan,³ the use of the harp, the vaulted stone chamber (see note on 2717 ff.), the paved street (320, cp. 725), and, above all, of course, the high degree of gentleness, courtesy, and spiritual refinement.⁴

Some Norse parallels relating to minor motives of the narrative are pointed out in the notes on 20 ff., 244 ff., 499 ff., 804, 1459 f., 2157, 2683 ff., 3024 ff., 3167 f.⁵

It remains to ask whether it is possible to detect Norse influence in the language of Beowulf. Generally speaking, it must be confessed that so far the investigations along this line¹ have brought out interesting similarities rather than proofs of imitation. Assuredly, no such indisputable evidence has been gained as in the case of the Later Genesis, which is, indeed, on a different footing, being a real and even close translation of a foreign (Old Saxon) original. It is worth while, however, to advert to the agreement in the use of certain words and phrases, such as atol, bront; eodor, lëod (in their transferred, poetical meanings, cp. ON. jaðarr, ljóði);² beadolëoma (see Glossary), bona Ongenþëoes (see note on 1968), and other kennings; gebëgan ðing 425 f., cp. ON. beyja þing; mæl is mē tō fëran 316, cp. ON. mäl er mer at riða (Helgakv. Hund. ii 48, cf. Sarrazin St. 69), ic þë . . . biddan wille . . . ännre þëne 426 ff. (see note). On hæstmëce, see above, p. xvii; on the epithets þëah and gamol applied to Healfdene, p. xxxiii. The combination beornas on blancum 856 might be taken for a duplicate of a phrase like Björn reis Blakki (Par. § 5: Kälfsvisa). The employment of the 'historical present'³ has been accounted for as a Norse syntactical feature (Sarrazin Käd. 87; see Lang. § 25.6, and especially l. 2486), but there is reason to suspect that it merely indicates the same sort of approximation to the brisk language of every-day life. That the much discussed isig, 33 is a misunderstood form of a Scandinavian word has also been suggested.⁴ Several others of the unexplained ἀπαξ λεγόμενα might be conjecturally placed in the same category.

5. The author's part in the production of the poem was vastly more than that of an adapter or editor. It was he who combined the Grendel stories with the dragon narrative and added, as a connecting link, the account of Bëowulf's return, in short, conceived the plan of an extensive epic poem with a great and noble hero as the central figure. Various modifications of the original legends were thus naturally introduced. (Cf., e.g., above, pp. xvii f., xix f., xxi f.)⁵ Leisurely elaboration and expansion by means of miscellaneous episodic matter became important factors in the retelling of the original stories. Hand in hand with such fashioning of the legends into a poem of epic proportions went a spiritualizing and Christianizing process. A strong element of moralization was mingled with the narrative. The characters became more refined, the sentiment softened, the ethics ennobled. Bëowulf rose to the rank

² The general, non-technical meaning — normally expressed by gifu — which appears in (feob)gift (21, 1025, 1089), is probably archaic rather than due to the influence of ON. gípt.

of a truly ideal hero, and his contests were viewed in the light of a struggle between the powers of good and of evil, thus assuming a new weight and dignity which made them appear a fit subject for the main narrative theme.

That the idea of creating an epic poem on a comparatively large scale was suggested to the author, directly or indirectly, by classic models is more than an idle guess, though incontrovertible proof is difficult to obtain.¹ In any event, it is clear that a biblical poem like the Old English Genesis paraphrase, consisting of a loose series of separate stories, could not possibly have served as a pattern. Whether there was any real epic among the lost poems of the Anglo-Saxon period we have no means of ascertaining.

6. That the poem was composed in the Anglian parts of England is one of the few facts bearing on its genesis which can be regarded as fairly established. But whether it originated in Northumbria or Mercia is left to speculation.² The evidence of language, as seen above, is indecisive on that point, though leaning slightly in the direction of Northumbria. The strongest argument in favor of Mercia is, after all, the keen interest in the traditions of the Mercian dynasty, made apparent by the introduction of the Offa episode.

Needless to say, the list of Anglian kings has been diligently scanned by scholars with a view to finding the most suitable person to be credited with the rôle of a patron. Several of those presented for consideration, it is important to note, relinquished their royal station to take up life in the quiet of a monastery. In the interest of chronological consistency we should give the preference to Æðelbald of Mercia, Eadberht of Northumbria, or the latter's predecessor Cēolwulf (729–737), of whom Bede says in his dedicatory address (Preface to his Ecclesiastical History): 'non solum audiendis scripturae sanctae verbis aurem sedulus accomodas, verum etiam noscendis priorum gestis sive dictis, et maxime nostrae gentis virorum inlustrium, curam vigilanter impendis.' That some allusions to contemporary history are hidden in the lines of our poem is at least a possibility not to be ignored. Might not the spectacle of internal strife and treachery rampant in the Northern regions of England have prompted the apparently uncalled-for note of rebuke and warning, 2166 ff. (cp. 2741 f., 587 f., 1167 f.)?³

² Successive places were assigned to Northumbria and Mercia in ten Brink's complicated theory of the gradual building up of the poem from a number of original, as well as modified, lays.

We may, then, picture to ourselves the author of Beowulf as a man connected in some way with an Anglian court, a royal chaplain or abbot of noble birth¹ or, it may be, a monk friend of his, who possessed an actual knowledge of court life and addressed himself to an aristocratic, in fact a royal audience.² A man well versed in Germanic and Scandinavian heroic lore, familiar with secular Anglo-Saxon poems of the type exemplified by Widsið, Finnsburg, Deor, and Waldere, and a student of biblical poems of the Cædmonian cycle, a man of notable taste and culture and informed with a spirit of broad-minded Christianity.

The work left behind by the anonymous author does not rank with the few great masterpieces of epic poetry. Beowulf is not an English Iliad, not a standard Germanic or national Anglo-Saxon epos. In respect to plot it is immeasurably inferior to the grand, heroic Nibelungenlied. Yet it deservedly holds the first place in our study of Old English literature. As an eloquent exponent of old Germanic life it stands wholly in a class by itself. As an exemplar of Anglo-Saxon poetic endeavor it reveals an ambitious purpose and a degree of success in its accomplishment which are worthy of unstinted praise. In noble and powerful language, and with a technical skill unequaled in the history of our ancient poetry, it portrays stirring heroic exploits and, through these, brings before us the manly ideals which appealed to the enlightened nobles of the age. It combines the best elements of the old culture with the aspirations of the new.

The poem has been edited many times. The main object which this edition aims to serve is to assist the student in the thorough interpretation of the text by placing within his reach the requisite material for a serious study. It is hoped that he will feel encouraged to form his own judgment as occasion arises — nullius addictus iurare in verba magistri.

thermore imagined that the poem was a sort of allegory written for the benefit of Offa's son Ecgferþ, being in fact 'the institution of a prince.' (Cf. note on 1931-62.) As to its genesis, he thought that the name and also part of the story of Hygelac had been taken from the Historia Francorum, and that "the saga," though of Scandinavian origin, "came out of Frankland to the hand of the poet, and probably . . . was written in Latin." See the ingenious, if fanciful, arguments in Deeds of Beowulf, pp. lxxv ff.; they were first set forth in the London Times, September 30 and October 29, 1885.

c. Criticism of Translations

43. A useful review of the translations published up to 1902 is found in Chauncey B. Tinker's The Translations of Beowulf: a critical Bibliography. (Yale Studies in English xvi.) New York, 1903. The earlier translations are surveyed by R. P. Wülcker in Angl. iv, Anz. (1881), 69-78; more recent ones by James M. Garnett, Publ. MLAss. xviii (1903), 445-51.

44. For a discussion of the verse-form most suitable for a translation see J. Schipper, Angl. vi, Anz. (1883), 120-24; Francis B. Gummere, Am. Jour. Phil. vii (1886), 46-78; James M. Garnett, ib. ii (1881), 356 f., Publ. MLAss. vi (1891), 95-105, ib. xviii (1903), 446 f., 455-58; Prosser Hall Frye, MLN. xii (1897), 79-82; Edward Fulton, Publ. MLAss. xiii (1898), 286-96; M. Trautmann, Bonn. B. v (1900), 189-91; John Ries, L. 3, 26. Cf. also F. B. Gummere, MLN. xxv (1910), 61-3 (in a reply to C. G. Child's criticism of the use of verse, ib. xxiv (1909), 253 f.), and C. G. Child's rejoinder, ib. xxv (1910), 157 f.; further W. J. Sedgefield, ES. xli (1910), 402 f., and M. Trautmann, Beibl. xxi (1910), 353-60 (in reviews of Gummere's translation); J. D. Spaeth in Early English Poems (L. 3, 42, 4), pp. 376-80; A. Blyth Webster, Essays and Studies by Members of the English Association v (1914), 153-71; William Ellery Leonard, "Beowulf and the Niebelungen Couplet," Univ. of Wisconsin Studies in Language and Literature, No. 2 (1918), pp. 99-152 [a spirited exposition of the merits of the 'Nibelungen couplet' as verse-medium; the added specimens convincingly support the arguments].

[45. A drama on the subject of Beowulf (written in 1899-1900), entitled Beowulf: An Epical Drama by Percy MacKaye is in preparation for the press.]

NOTE 1. — A list of the best books in English suitable for an introduction to the subject and its wider relations should, by all means, include Chadwick's Heroic Age (L 4. 22)

Ker's Epic and Romance (L 4. 120)

Gummere's Germanic Origins (L 9. 11).

To these we may add the two most helpful translations, viz. those of Gummere and Clark Hall (Hall's prose translation).

Of books in other languages, Brandl's Angelsächsische Literatur (L 4. 11) and Olrik's Danmarks Heltedigtning (L 4. 35) — each in its own way — invite particular attention on the part of students. Bugge's Studien über das Beowulfepos (L 4. 28, L 5. 6. 3) may serve as a model of philological method.

NOTE 2. — Reports of the progress of Beowulf studies have appeared at various times. See Wülker's Grundriss (L 4. 4); J. Earle, L 3. 4, pp. ix-liii; F. Dieter in Ergebnisse und Fortschritte der germanistischen Wissenschaft im letzten Vierteljahrhundert ed. by R. Bethge (1902), pp. 348-56; cf. A. Brandl, "Über den gegenwärtigen Stand der Beowulf-Forschung," Arch. cviii (1902), 152-55; R. C. Boer, L 4. 140, pp. 1-24. (Th. Krüger, Zum Beowulfiede, Bromberg Progr. (1884), and Arch. lxxi (1884), 129-52; C. B. Tinker, L 3. 43, passim.)

TABLE OF ABBREVIATIONS

NOTE. L (Bibliographical List) signifies the Bibliography of this edition, pp. cxxiii ff. In referring to it, the ten main divisions are denoted by Arabic numerals separated by a period from the given number of the respective title; thus L 2. 16 means W. J. Sedgefield, Beowulf. Figures referring to subdivisions of the numbered items and to pages of books and articles are preceded by additional periods; thus L 6. 12. 2. 379 means John Ries, Die Wortstellung im Beowulf, p. 379.

The following abbreviations of references to this edition need to be mentioned. Intr. = Introduction; Lang. (§) = Introduction, VII: Language; — LF. = Bibliography of the Fight at Finnsburg; — Par. = Appendix I: Parallels; Antiq. = Appendix II: Index of Antiquities; T. C. = Appendix III: Note on Textual Criticism; — (n.) refers to the Notes on the Text; thus (n.), placed after 2195, means: see note on l. 2195; — Varr. = Variant Readings.

BEOWULF

THE TEXT

ITALICS indicate alteration of words by emendation. Letters or words added by emendation are placed within square brackets. Parentheses are used when the conjecturally inserted letters correspond to letters of the MS. which on account of its damaged condition are missing or illegible and were so when the Thorkelin transcripts were made. Expansion of the usual scribal contractions for pat, -um, etc., is not marked.

The apparatus of variant readings, it is believed, has been made sufficiently full, although a system of careful selection had, necessarily, to be applied. Indeed, the inclusion of many useless guesses would have served no legitimate purpose. The emendations adopted are regularly credited to their authors. Of other conjectures, a number of the more suggestive and historically interesting ones have been added. Scholars who have given their support to certain readings have been frequently mentioned; also the expedient of the impersonal et al. has been freely — no doubt somewhat arbitrarily — employed. (P) after a name or a citation indicates that an emendation has been regarded as more or less doubtful by its author. In many cases it has seemed helpful to record the views of the four most recent editors. 4 Edd. = Holt. 3, Schü. 10, Sed. 2, Cha.; 3 Edd. = the same editions except the one specified. — Edd. = (all, or most) editions, or the subsequent editions, with the exception of those specified. In quoting the readings of various scholars normalization has been practised to the extent of providing the proper marks of quantity, etc., in every instance.

A and B denote the two Thorkelin transcripts, see L 1. 3; whenever they are referred to, it is understood that the MS. in its present condition is defective. MS. Ke., etc., means Kemble's (etc.) reading of the MS. The number of colons used in citing MS. readings (see, e.g., 159^a) marks the presumable number of lost letters; in case their approximate number cannot be made out, dots are used. In quoting the readings of A and B — from Zupitza's notes — the plain dots have been kept. The beginning of a new line in the MS. is sometimes indicated by a bar; thus, 47^b MS. g. . / denne. Fol. (130^a, etc.) followed by a word (or part of it) signifies that a page of the MS. begins with that word, which, however, is very often no longer fully visible in the MS. itself.

For other abbreviations see the Table of Abbreviations.

Regarding the somewhat uncertain matter of punctuating, it has been held desirable that the punctuation, while facilitating the student's understanding of the text, should also, in a measure, do justice to the old style and sentence structure.

The student is advised to go carefully through the Note on Textual Criticism (T.C.) in Appendix III, and to study the explanatory Notes constantly in connection with the variant readings.

NOTES

1-188. Introductory. (See Argument, Intr. ix ff.)

1-52. Founding of the glorious Danish dynasty. Being considered a sort of prelude, this canto ('fit') was left outside the series of numbered sections. Bradley (L 4.21) thought this opening section had originally belonged to a different poem, viz. one concerning Bēowulf, Scyld's son. According to Boer (110 ff.), it was at the outset the opening of the dragon lay (Intr. cvi). But see Intr. cix.

1-3. Hwæt, see Gloss. — wē . . . gefrūnon. The only instance in Beowulf of wē — the more inclusive, emphatic plural — in the list of the gefragn- formulas (Intr. lxxviii). Cp. the opening of Exodus, Juliana, Andreas; Nibelungenlied, Annolied (early MHG.). — in gēardagum is to be understood with reference to þrym; see note on 575.

4-52. The Story of Scyld. 'Scyld,' the poet tells us, 'arrived as a little boy, alone and destitute, on the shores of the Danes; he became their king, a great and glorious chief, beloved by his loyal people; he conquered many tribes beyond the sea; he was blessed with a son; and when at the fated hour he had passed away, he was sent out into the sea with all the pomp of military splendor.' Thus his illustrious career fittingly foreshadows the greatness of his royal line.

Scyld¹ is well known in Scandinavian tradition as Skjöldr, the eponymous ancestor of the Skjöldungar.² Especially, the account of Saxo, who pays high tribute to his warlike and royal qualities, resembles the Beowulf version so closely as to suggest the use of the same kind of original Danish source. (See quotations in notes on 4 f., 6^b, 12 ff., 18 f., 20 ff.) But nowhere outside of Beowulf do we find Scyld's strange arrival and his wonderful passing narrated.

Mystery surrounds him, signaling a being of supernatural, divine origin. He is sent by unknown powers on his high mission, and when his life work is done, he withdraws to the strange world whence he had come.³ Whether he is conceived of as arriving in royal splendor Schütte, Oldsagn om Godtjod: bidrag til etnisk kildeforsknings metode med særligt henblik på folke-stamsagn (Kjøbenhavn, 1907), pp. 137-39.

² See Par. §§ 4, 5, 6; 8.1, 3, & 6. Yet in reality the existence of Scyld was probably inferred from the name Scyldingas ('shield men,' see Olrik i 274 f., Chadwick Or. 284). For Scyld(wa) etc. in Aeg. genealogies, see Par. § 1.

³ Like Arthur (Tennyson, The Coming of Arthur 410, The Passing of Arthur 445), 'from the great deep to the great deep he goes.' The similarity of the Scyld or — making allowance for the wide range of litotes (MPh. iii 249) — merely as a helpless foundling,¹ remains somewhat doubtful (ll. 43 ff.). But we feel that our poet's heart goes out in sympathy for the poor, lonely boy (fēasceaft 7, . . . ænne ofer jōse umborwæsende 46).

Scyld's famous sea-burial — one of the gems of the poem — is not to be interpreted, however, merely as a symbolical act, but reflects the actual practice of a previous age. Based on the belief that the soul after death had to take a long journey (feor 42; cp. 808) to the realm of spirits, the custom of sea-burial arose among various peoples living near the sea or great lakes² and was prevalent (according to Stjerna) in Scandinavia from the end of the fourth to the middle of the sixth century A. D. Sometimes the dead were burned on ship-board.³ This custom was subsequently replaced by the ship-burial on land, both with and without the burning of the body, as shown unmistakably by the numerous finds of boat-graves belonging to the period beginning about 600 A. D.,⁴ until finally, through a still further development of the spiritual element, the outlines of corpse-ships were merely suggested by stones suitably piled about the graves.⁵

A counterpart of the story of Scyld's wonderful arrival appears in the chronicles of Ethelwerd and William of Malmesbury, but is told of Scēaf, the father of Scyld and progenitor of the West Saxon legend to the famous (originally, perhaps, Netherlandish) story of the 'swan knight' was first recognized by J. Grimm (L 3.27, D. M. 306 (370), iii 108 (1391)). Cf. O. Rank, Der Mythos von der Geburt des Helden (1909), pp. 55 ff.

⁵ See especially Boehmer L 9.46.558 ff. This stage finds its analogue in the conception of a supernatural boat appearing in poetry and legend (cp. the Flying Dutchman, also Sinfjötli). — On ship-burials in general, see besides: Grimm D. M. 692 ff. (830 ff.); iii 248 (1549 ff.); Weinhold L 9.32.479 ff.; Montelius, S. Müller, passim; du Chaillu L 9.35. ch. 19; Gummere G. O. 322-8; H. kings. (Par. § 1.3 & 4.) Notable variations in the later one of these two versions are the mention of Schleswig in the old Anglian homeland of the English as Scēaf's royal town, and the explanation of his name from the sheaf of grain lying at his head, which has taken the place of the weapons in Ethelwerd's tale. How to account for the attributing of the motive on the one hand to Scyld and on the other to Scēaf (who has no place in authentic Norse tradition¹), is an interesting problem. It has been argued that Scyld Scēfing of the Beowulf meant originally Scyld scēfing, 'Scyld child of the sheaf' (?) or 'Scyld with the sheaf,' but by folk etymology was understood in the sense of 'Scyld son of Scēaf,' and that in course of time the story was transferred from Scyld to his putative father Scēaf. Taking, however, the patronymic designation as the (naturally) original one, we might think that Scēaf, who can hardly be separated from Scēafa, the legendary ruler of the Langobards,² owes his introduction into the Danish pedigree in the Beowulf to the Anglo-Saxon predilection for extensive genealogizing. (Olrík.) According to (Kemle and) Müllenhoff, Scēaf was in ancient tradition a God-sent mythical being to whom Northern German tribes attributed the introduction of agriculture and kingly rule. That the sheaf as a religious symbol among the heathen English was, indeed, an original element of the conceptions underlying the founding ancestor story, and that a sheaf (and a shield) played a part in some ritual practice, has been suggested by Chadwick, — an idea elaborated and studied from a broad comparative point of view by Olrík (ii 250 ff.).³ (Cf. Intr. xxv.) So far as the Beowulf is concerned, the linking of Scēaf (Scyld, Bēow) with the undoubtedly Danish (ancestor) Scyld may be regarded as a characteristic instance of the blending of English and Scandinavian tradition (cf. Cha. Wid. 120). [Björkman (L 4. 82a) is convinced that Scēaf, Scyld, Bēow were originally divine beings of fruitfulness known to the (continental) Anglo-Saxons, and that the ancestor story was shifted by the poet from Scēaf to Scyld, whom he spontaneously identified with the eponymous ancestor of the Skjöldungar. The poet's inconsistency in retaining the epithet Scēfing for the founder of the race is thus naturally explained. Björkman compares Bēow to Byggvir mentioned in Lokasenna (Elder Edda). — On corn-spirits, see also Mogk, R.-L. iii 91-3.]

That Scyld as the progenitor of the Danish Scyldingas had stepped into the place formerly occupied by Ing, the ancestor of the Ingwine (cp. Runic Poem 67 ff.; Intr. xxxvii), is an ingenious and pleasing hypothesis (Olrík, Chadwick).

³ A note on a certain modern analogue, by H. M. Belden, MLN. xxxiii 315.

interfectoque eo omnem Allemannorum gentem . . . tributaria pensione perdomuit' sounds like an echo of the same poetic tradition. — 5^b. meodosetla oftēab, i.e. 'subjugated.' (Cf. Intr. lxiv.) Exactly the same metrical variety of type E occurs in 14^b, 17^b. meodosetl is hardly to be identified with meduseld 3065; 'mead(hall)-seats' (cp. medostig 924), by synecdoche, = 'hall.'

6^a. egsode eorl[as]. The emendation eorlas, strongly advocated by Sievers, has been adopted as, after all, a desirable improvement. The metrical form of egsode eorl, though rare, need not be rejected (T.C. § 21), but stylistically, the sing. eorl would be suspiciously harsh. It is true that the sing. in a collective sense is well substantiated (see note on 794 f.), but this use of eorl (in the acc. sing.) as variation of the preceding collective noun plurals (prēatum, mægþum) would not be satisfactory. A still less acceptable type of variation would result from the interpretation of eorl as nom. sing., 'the hero terrified [them]' (von Grienberger, Beitr. xxxvi 94 f.; B.-T. Suppl., s.v. egesian), the ponderous (plural) object requiring a variation in preference to the subject.

6^b. syððan ærest; ærest (somewhat redundantly) accentuates the meaning of the conjunction syððan (cp. MnE. 'when . . . first'). No doubt Scyld was believed to have distinguished himself in his early youth. Cp. Saxo i 11: 'while but fifteen years of age he was of unusual bodily size, and displayed mortal strength in its perfection . . . ; the ripeness of Skiold's spirit outstripped the fulness of his strength, and he fought battles at which one of his tender years could scarcely look on.' (Elton's transl.) [Only one night old, Váli avenged the slaying of Baldr, see (Elder Edda:) Völuspá 33, Baldrs Draumar 11.]

7^b. þæs, 'for that' (see Gloss. : sē), refers to 6^b-7^a, i.e. his destitute condition. Similarly the OHG. Ludwigslied (3 ff.) says of King Louis: kind uuarth her faterlōs; thes uuarth imo sār buoz, /holōda inan trubtīn, magaczogo uuarth her sīn; /gab er imo dugidi, etc. (Cp. Jud. 157 f., Hel. 3363 f.)

8. wēox, perhaps 'prospered,' practically synonymous with þāb (so that no comma is needed before wēorsmyndum, cp. 131 and note on 36 f.). under wolcnum, see Intr. lxvii; Gloss. : under, wolcen.

9^a. oð is stressed in this line, though it is doubtful whether it was felt to alliterate (Siev. R. 282, A.M. § 28); so 219^a, 1740^a, 2934^a, further 2039^a, 3147^a (clearly type A₃); but more frequently it remains unstressed, as in 56^b, 66^b, 100^b, 145^b, 296^b, etc. In similar manner particles and formulas like þā, þær, þā gēn, þā gýt, þonan, bwilum, þyrde (ic), gefrægn, cwæð show variable accentuation.

10. ofer hronrāde. ofer with acc., see Lang. § 25.5. bronrād, a typical kenning, see Intr. lxiv. Whales were well known to the Anglo-Saxons, see R. Jordan, Die ae. Säugetiernamen (Ang. F. xii, 1903), pp. 209 f., 212; Tupper's Riddles, p. 169.

11. gomban gyldan. See quotation from Saxo in the note on 4 f.

— þæt wæs gōd cyning! The omission of the mark of exclamation would be tantamount to the suppression of a significant stylistic feature; to leave it out in a MnE. translation is a different matter.

12 ff. Scyld has a son, Bēowulf, who gives promise of a continuation of dynastic splendor. So the Danes need not fear a recurrence of the terrible 'lordless' time they had experienced before Scyld came, i.e., after the fall of Heremōd (see note on 901-915). [Also Saxo's Scioldus had a son, named 'Gram, whose wondrous parts savored so strongly of his father's virtues, that he was deemed to tread in their very footsteps' (i 12). However, this parallelism may be purely accidental.]

12. æfter is not exactly 'afterwards,' but denotes rather 'coming after him,' as in 2731.

14. The subject of onġeat is 'God.'

15. þ̅ (= þæt) seems to have been introduced for þē or þā by the late scribe. On þæt standing for the relat. pron. with a sing. masc. or fem. or a plur. antecedent, see Kock L 6.13.1.30 f.; on a few cases of þ̅ used for þā, see Zupitza's note; also l. 3134 (?). Cf. J. M. Hart, MLN. i, col. 175-7; Napier, Philol. Soc. Transact., 1907-10, p. 188 (þ̅ used as contraction for þē); F. Wende, Über die nachgestellten Präpositionen im Ags. (Palaestra lxx, 1915), p. 37 (interchange of þē and þæt). See also 649 (opðe = op þæt) and note on 1141. [Cha. would retain þæt (conj.) and take lange hwile as the object of drugon, 'a long time of sorrow' (?); Kock² 100 takes drugon intransitively, 'they lived without a lord.']

16. him, probably dat. plur., though it might conceivably refer to Scyld's son in particular. — þæs, see 7. Earle: "in consideration thereof."

18 f. On Bēowulf (I) the Dane, see Intr. xxiii ff., espec. xxvf. That this form of the name is an error for Bēow, is likely enough. — The emendation blæd wīde sprang/Scyldes eafera[n] Scedelandum in, supported by Siev. (ix 135) in view of the apparently imitated passage, Fat. Ap. 6 ff., is unnecessary and even unsafe, since springan should be followed by geond or ofer with acc., not by in with dat. (Est. xxxix 428). — 18^b. blæd wīde sprang. Type D4. — According to Saxo (i 12), 'the days of Gram's youth were enriched with surpassing gifts of mind and body, and he raised them to the crest of renown ('ad summum glorie cumulum perduxit'). Posterity did such homage to his greatness that in the most ancient poems of the Danes royal dignity is implied in his very name.' (ON. gramr 'chief.')

20 ff. Swā, 'in such a way [as he (Bēowulf or, more likely, Scyld) did].' The missing reference to Scyld's liberality is virtually implied in the previous statements concerning him. For how could the king have been so successful in war, had he not been conspicuous for generosity, which gained for him the loyalty of his followers? These two ideas were inseparably connected in the minds of the ancient Teutons. Saxo says in his praise of Scioldus' liberality (i 12): 'Proceres non solum domesticis (cp. on fæder (bea)rme, 21, see JEGPh. vi 190) stipendiis colebat, sed eciam spoliis ex hoste quesitis, affirmare solitus, pecuniam ad milites, gloriam ad ducem redundare debere.' Cp. Hrólfs-saga 43.3 ff., 45.28 ff. (Par. § 9), 62.4 ff. (Hrólfr Kraki); Baeda, H.E. iii, c. 14 (Oswini). — gewyrcean (perfective), 'bring about.'

24. læode gelæsten. The object, i.e. probably hine (see 2500), is understood, cf. Lang. § 25.4. (In Andr. 411 f., Mald. 11 f. the dat. is used with gelæstan.) — sceal, 'will,' 'is sure to' (in 20: 'should,' 'ought to').

29-31. Scyld's men prepare the funeral of their beloved king, as he bade them while he still 'wielded his words.' (Cf. Siev. xxix 308, Kock² 101. See ll. 2802 ff., 3140.) L. 31, læof landfruma lange āhte, added paratactically, conveys the very appropriate idea: 'his had been a long reign.' (Cp. Helgakv. Hund. i 10; for the paratactic clause, cp. OE. Chron. A.D. 871: Ond þæs ofer Éastron geför Æperēd cyning, ond hē ricode fif gēar.) The implied object of āhte (it need not be expressed, see 2208^b) is bi, cp. 522, 2732, 911, 2751; folcā-gend(e). Practically the same interpretation would result from construing 31^a as a variation of 30^b (as to the brief clause lange āhte, cp. 1913^b). [It would not seem impossible to regard 31 as parallel to 30, i.e. dependent on penden; in that case the somewhat peculiar lange might be compared to oft, 2867.] Cf. MPh. iii 446.

33. isig, not 'shining like ice' (Kemble, Heyne⁵-Schücking), but 'covered with ice' (see Bu. Tid. 69 f.; Siev. Beitr. xxvii 572, xxxvi 422 ff.; Intr. lxi). Readings like itig (see Varr.) provide very acceptable sense, but involve the introduction of otherwise unrecorded words. ūtfūs, 'ready (i.e. eager) to set out' (personification), cp. the use of fundian 1137.

36 f. mærne be mæste etc. Scyld's body was placed amidships with his back against the mast. The remains of the Vendel ship-graves indicate a similar position for the dead. (Stjer. 127 f.) Also swords, corslets, splendid shield bosses, and other costly objects, including glass beakers of foreign origin, have been found in these graves. (Stjer. 128 ff.) — of feorwegum occupying a medial position between two terms of variation (mādma, frætwā) belongs with both. Similar ἀρχὴ κοινῶν function at the beginning of the line: 754, 935, 3067 (probably 281, 1109); at the beginning of the second half-line: 131 (8).

40. him, ref. to Scyld.

44. þon 'than' (sometimes 'then') is comparatively rare. It is best known from Bede's Death Song 2: þan. Cf. Tr. Kyn. 86 f., & Angl. xxxvii 363 f.; Deutschbein, Beitr. xxvi 172; Angl. xxvii 248; O. Johnsen, ib. xxxix 103 f.

47. segen g(y)ldenne (cp. 1021, 2767; Antiq. § 8). An emblem of royalty; cp. Baeda, H.E. ii, c. 16. The banner was flying on a long pole (see 1022), which was fastened to the mast (Stjer. 130). On the meaning of gylden, see Gloss.: eal(l)gylden.

48. hēah is apparently left uninflected, perhaps on account of its semi-adverbial function. Or is there a shifting from the masc. to the neut. gender (see Gloss.: segn)? Cp. 2767 f. For the absence of inflexional endings of adjectives and participles qualifying a preceding noun (or pronoun), see 46^b, 372^b, 1126^a, 2704^a; H. Bauch, Die Kongruenz in der ags. Poesie, Kiel Diss., 1912, passim; Kock L 5.44.4.19 f. (numerous examples from OE. poetry); cf. also Lang. § 25.6. — lēton holm beran. The object hine is understood (so in 49^a). — See 3132^b: lēton wæg niman.

53-85. The Danish line of kings. The building of Heorot.

53. Bēowulf Scyldinga. See, e.g., 1069, 676, 620, 2603. Grimm, Deutsche Grammatik iv 303 ff. (261).

55 f. folcum gefræge, 'famous among peoples.' The same use of the dative after foremārost, 309. — fæder ellor hwearf (type D₄). Note the periphrasis for 'dying' (Intr. lxxv). The pret. hwearf carries pluperf. sense. aldor of earde; of earde is variation of ellor. The insertion of a comma (aldor, of earde) has not been deemed advisable in cases of this kind; cp., e.g., 36^a: mārne be mæste, 140^a, 213^a, 265^a, 420^a, etc.

57. Healdene. On the Danish genealogy, see Intr. xxx ff.

58. glæde seems to be acc. plur. (Angl. xxix 379); it is usually explained as adv. (cp. 1173).

59. forðgerimed. A variant of a conventional phrase, geteled rīme(s), see Grein Spr.: rīm.

62 f. hȳrde ic practically serves as poetic formula of transition, cf. Intr. lxxviii, MPb. iii 243 f.; see ll. 2163, 2172. — The name of the daughter (which need not alliterate with the names of her brothers and father, cp. Frēawaru) apparently began with a vowel. Cf. Intr. xxxiii f.; MPb. iii 447. — A supposed erasure under beaðo which was taken as evidence of scribal confusion after the word cwēn, and which gave rise to the unfortunate conjecture hȳrde ic þæt Elan cwēn Hrōðulfes wæs (see L 5.42 f.), has now been definitely pronounced non-existent in the MS. (Chambers). A Germanic name for a woman, Elan, would, indeed, be more than doubtful. — On the gen. sing. in -as, see Lang. § 18.5.

64. Heorogār's reign, being irrelevant, is not mentioned here. See 465 ff., 2158 ff.; Intr. xxxi, lviii.

66^b-67^a. magodriht micel represents the variation, as it were, of the preceding clause (MPb. iii 247). — Cf. Par. § 10: Tacitus' Germania, c. xiii.

67^b. bearn, see Gloss.: be-irnan.

69 f. It has been largely assumed that the positive micel is used here for the comparative (cf. that the comparative idea is left unexpressed), cf. Gr. Spr.: panne, ii; Bu. Zs. 193; Aant. 1; Koeppel, Est. xxx

376 f.; Horn, Arcb. cxiv 362 f., Angl. xxix 130 f. But Bright (L 5. 31.2) has thrown strong doubts on the idiomatic status of that construction by showing that, apart from Epistola Alexandri (Angl. iv 154) 405 f., the examples available for support (Par. Ps. 117.8 f., etc.) are due to imitation of the original (i.e., the Latin form of a Hebraism of the Septuagint). His emendation removes the syntactical difficulty. However, the possibility remains that after l.69 a line containing a compar. has dropped out (so Holt.^{2,3}). [It would be tempting to supply a line containing a superl., 'the most magnificent hall (sele),' and thus to account for þone; but in that case pāra þe would probably have been used.] — yldo bearn. See Gloss.: bearn. The ending -o (cf. Lang. § 18.3; § 24, p. xciii) possibly suggests association, by folk etymology, with yldo 'age'; see Angl. xxxv 467 f. (yldo bearn also Ex. 28, Gen. [B] 464.)

73. būton folcscare ond feorum gumena. See Antiq. § 1; Intr. cix n. 5.

74. Dā ic wide gefrægn . . . As to the position of wide, see note on 575.

76^a. frætwan, unless it be considered to depend directly on gefrægn, is to be connected with weorc gebannan, which was probably felt to be of the same import as bātan.

76b-77^a. Him on fyrste gelomp/ædre mid yldum. The work was done quickly (ædre), considering the magnitude of the undertaking; on fyrste 'in due time' (cf. B.-T. Suppl.: first; not to be rendered, with Schū. Bd. 26 ff., by 'speedily'). The rapid construction of the hall seems to be one of the folk-tale elements of the story, cf. Panzer 257 n. 1. — mid yldum, a formula-like expletive, see Intr. lxxvii.

78. The hall is supposed to have been named Heor(o)t from horns (antlers) fastened to the gables, although the appellation born = 'gable' (horn-gēap 82, -reced 704, bornas, Finnsb. 4, born-sæl, -sele in other poems) seems to be derived merely from 'horn-shaped projections on the gable-ends' (B.-T., cf. Miller, Angl. xii 396 f.). But the name may have been primarily symbolical, the hart signifying royalty (A. Bugge, ZfdPh. xli 375 n.). On the Danish royal hall, see Intr. xxxvii.

79. sē þe his wordes geweald wide hæfde. The relative clause ('he who . . .'), containing the subject of the sentence, follows the predicate. So in 90, 138, 143, 809, 825, 1497, 1618, etc.

82-85. Allusion to the destruction of the hall by fire in the course of the Heaðo-Bard conflict. See Intr. xxxiv f., xxxvii, lviii. (The allusion of 83^b-85^b cannot be separated from that of 82^b-83^a.) — 82. bād. Similar light personifications: 1882, 397; 320, 688, 33 (ūtfūs), 1464 (in contrast with the more vigorous instance: 1521 f.), etc. — 83. ne wæs hit lenge þā gēn admits of being explained as a variety of a formula (see 134, 739, 2591, 2845), 'it was by no means (cp. 734) longer' (i.e. long, cf. Lang. § 25.2); see MPb. iii 245 f. (The ana-logical lenge: Chr. 1684, Guðl. 109, Júl. 375; also Varr.: 2423^b.) But as the reference is not to something to happen immediately (as in the other cases), lenge is with a little more probability taken as an adj. (cp. gelenge 2732), recorded in one other place, Gnom. Ex. 121, 'belonging to,' hence perhaps 'at hand'; 'the time was not yet (cp. 2081) come.' (Rie. Zs. 382.)

84. āþumswēoran, MS. apum swerian. A copulative (or 'dvanda') compound, like subtergefæderan (see Gloss.), gisunfader (Hel.), sunufatarungo (Hildebr.), first recognized by Bugge (Tid. 45 f.). Though the existence of a form sweri(g)a showing a suffixal extension like that seen in subtriga, subterga is within the bounds of possibility (so Bugge, l.c.), it appears more likely that a scribe blundered, having in mind āþ and swerian. For the dat. plur. in -an, see Lang. § 18.1.

85. æfter wælniðe. See 2065.

86-114. The introduction of Grendel. The thought of this passage, though proceeding by a circuitous route, is not obscure. An evil spirit is angered by the rejoicing in Heorot (86-90^a). One of the songs recited in the hall is mentioned (90^b-98). After looking back for a moment the poet returns to the demon, Grendel, who is now spoken of as dwelling in the moors (100^b-104^a). This leads the author to relate how Grendel came to live there, viz. by being descended from Cain, whom God had exiled for the murder of Abel (104^b-114). (Whereupon Grendel's first attack on Heorot is narrated.)

86. se ellengæst (or, quite possibly, ellorgæst, see Gloss.); the name is stated in 102. Cf. Intr. lxvi. — Kock² 102 would connect earfoslice (acc. sing. fem.) with bræge, 87 (cp. 283 f.). See Gloss.: bræg; cp. 2302 f.

88 ff. Grendel, in accordance with the nature of such demons (Panzer 264; Grimm D. M. 380 [459]), is angered by the noisy merriment in the hall. This motive is given a peculiar Christian turn. (Angl. xxxv 257.)

90-98. The Song of Creation bears no special resemblance to Cædmon's famous Hymn, but follows pretty closely upon the lines suggested by the biblical account. Cp. 94 f. and Gen. i 16 f., 97^b-98 and Gen. i 21, 24, 26, 28. For some slight similarities to Ex. 24 ff., see MLN. xxxiii 221. The theme is often touched upon in Ags. poetry. See Angl. xxxv 113 ff. [Also Vergil has a court minstrel recite the creation of the world, Æn. i 742 ff.] — The rare note of joy in the beauty of nature contrasts impressively with the melancholy inspired by the dreary, somber abode of Grendel. (God's bright sun: 570, cp. 606, 1571 f., 1801 ff., 1965, 2072.)

90^a. swutol sang scopes. Type D2. 90^b. Sægde, used absolutely like sang 496, rehte 2106. Cf. MPh. iii 245.

93. swā wæter bebūgeð, lit. 'as (far as) the water surrounds (it)'; cp. 1223 f., Andr. 333 f., etc.; also Beow. 2608. (ESl. xxxix 429.)

94. sigehrēpig. See 2875, 3055; Angl. xxxv 115, 120 f. [Cp. Ex. 27.] — 94^a: Type Dx, see T.C. § 24.

95. lēoman, in apposition to sunnan ond mōnan, recalls Gen. i 16: 'duo luminaria'; tō lēohte landbūendum, Gen. i 17: 'ut lucenter super terram.'

97b. lif ēac gesceōp. Type E1. — 98. cynna gehwylcum þāra ðe cwice hwyrfaþ. Cp. Gen. i 21: 'creavitque . . . omnem animam viventem atque motabilem,' i 26, 28.

99. drēamum lifdon. Cp. 2144, Wids. 11, Chr. 621, etc.

100b. oð ðæt ān ongan . . . So 2210^b; cp. 2280^b, 2399^b. ān, 'one,' 'a certain,' is used to introduce a person, object, or situation even if mentioned before (thus, also in 2280, 2410); it looks as if the poet, after a digression, were starting afresh. A really demonstrative function of ān in these cases cannot be admitted. [Discussions by He.-Schü. (Gloss.), Scherer L 5.5.472; Lichtenheld, ZfdA. xvi 381 ff.; Heinzel, Anz. fdA. x 221; Braune, Beitr. xi 518 ff., xii 393 ff., xiii 586 f.; Bugge, ib. xii 371; Luick, Angl. xxix 339 ff., 527 f.; Griemb., Beitr. xxxvi 79 f., Siev., ib. 400.]

101. fēond on helle. See Gloss.: on.

103 f. Grendel's dwelling in the fen-districts reflects popular belief, cp. Gnom. Cott. 42 f.: þyrs sceal on fenne gewunian, / āna innan lande. There existed also, in popular imagination, a connection between hell and morasses. See Bugge L 4.84, p. lxxiv; Angl. xxxvi 185 ff.; ll. 845 ff., 1357 ff.

106 ff. Grendel's descent from Cain. The conception of the descent of monsters (evil spirits) and giants from Cain (cp. also 1261 ff.), and of the destruction of the giants by the deluge (so also 1688 ff.) is based ultimately on the biblical narrative, a causal relation being established between Gen. iv, vi 2, 4 (gigantes) and vi 5-7, vii. The direct source has not been discovered in this case, though Hebrew tradition (like that contained in the apocalyptic Book of Enoch) and Christian interpretation of Scripture have been adduced. See Emerson L 4.149. 865 ff., 878 ff.; Angl. xxxv 259 ff.; also notes on 1555 f., 1688 ff. On Grendel, see Intr. 1.

106-8. siþðan him Scyppend forscifen hæfde/in Cāines cynne. This looks strongly theological. Originally, of course, it was Cain who was proscribed and exiled, but, being one of Cain's offspring, Grendel is included in the condemnation. Note the close correspondence of 104 ff. and 1260 ff. — 108. þæs þe hē Åbel slōg is explanatory (or variation) of þone cwealm; cp. 2794 ff., 1627 f. Cain's fratricide is mentioned again in 1261 ff. (cp. 2741 f., 587 f., 1167 f.). [Cf. Siev. ix 136 f.; Bu. 80; MPb. iii 255, 448. Nearly all edd. begin a fresh sentence with 107^a.]

109^a. ne gefeah hē . . ., 'he [Cain] had no joy . . .' (cp. 827, 1569, also 2277); 109^b. hē, i.e. God.

111 f. The general term untýdras is specified by the following nouns.

114^b. hē him ðæs lēan forgeald. Allusion to the deluge. See 1689 ff.

115-188. Grendel's reign of terror.

115. nēosian. The 'visit' implies 'search' (cp. 118: Fand); this accounts for bū.

120. Wiht unhælo (type D1), 'creature of evil' (Angl. xxxv 252), has been taken by several scholars as 'anything of evil' and made the close of the preceding clause (a second variation). However, 121^a would be unusually heavy as the opening of a sentence.

121^b. gearo sōna wæs. Type D4.

122 f. on ræste genam/þritig þegna. On (see Gloss.; Lang. § 25.5) may be translated by 'from,' but the underlying syntactical conception is not that of motion, on ræste belonging in fact with the object of the verb (cp. 747, 1298, 1302); see note on 575.—Of the disposal of the thirty men we are told in 1580 ff.

123^b. þanon eft gewāt. Probably type E1.

126. Ðā, 128 þā A characteristic case of parataxis (cf. Intr. lxxviii). For a genuine correlative use of 'demonstrative' and 'relative' particles, see Gloss.: þonne, swā, ær, also þā, þær.

128. þā wæs æfter wiste wōp ūp ahafen; i.e., there was weeping where there was formerly feasting. Cp. 1007 f., 1774 f., 1078 ff., 119 f.—128^b. Type D4.

131. *þegn*sorge belongs both with þolode and drēah.

133. wergan gāstes. Sievers, guided by linguistic and metrical considerations, strongly contended for wērgan, gen. sing. of wērig 'weary,' then 'wretched,' 'evil' (see IF. xxvi 225-35). Yet it seems unnatural to separate wergan in this well-known combination from wearg (see Gloss.: beorowearh, werhō), (ā)wergan, (ā)wyrgan, '(ac)curse' (se āwyrg(e)da gāst, etc.). Thus, an adj. wer(i)g (from wargi*), or (better) werge (from wargja*) has been postulated (Hart, MLN. xxii 220 ff.; Trautmann, Bonn. B. xxiii 155 f.) in substantial agreement with the older explanation (Ke., Tho., Gr. Spr., et al.: werig). The line of division between the two sets is often difficult to determine.

134^b. Næs hit lengra fyrst. Formula of transition, cf. note on 83.

135 f. We are told here that Grendel made an attack on two successive nights (as the troll does on two successive Yule-eves, before the final defeat, in the Grettissaga [Intr. xiv] and the Hrólfs saga [Par. § 9], cp. analogous folk-tales, Panzer 96 ff., 266). But in fact, he wrought destruction 'much oftener' (1579), see 147 ff., 473 ff., 646 ff.—On mære 136, 'additional,' see MPh. iii 450.

137. wæs tō fæst on þām. An allusion to the fetters of sin. See 2009; El. 908: on firenum fæstne; etc.; Angl. xxxv 135 f.

140. æfter is to be construed with [sōbte], 139.

141. gesægd, i.e. made known (by deeds), manifested; cp. cýðan, ýwan.

142. The compound healðegn is coined for the occasion, like renweard 770, cwealmcuma 792, mūðbona 2079, etc.

145. idel, i.e. at night. See 411 ff.

151 ff. þætte Grendel wan etc. The profusion of parallel expressions is apt to suggest an actual paraphrase of 'plaints' concerning the distress of the Danes (which certainly became widely known, 1991).

154 ff. feorhbealo feorran is best taken as variation of the term sibbe (Bu. 82, MPh. iii 238). By construing sibbe as dat. (instr.) and removing the comma after Deniga the meaning would be slightly modified; cf. Siev. xxix 316 f. — 157 f. nē þær nænig witena etc. An indirect form of statement expressing the same idea as the preceding phrase, . . . fēa þingian. From the legal point of view Grendel, being guilty of murder, was under obligation to compound for it by payment; see Antiq. § 5: Feud; Intr. lxiii n. 3.

159. ēhtende wæs. The periphrastic form (so 3028: secggende wæs, 1105: myndgiend wære) in this instance seems to signify continuation. Cf. C. Pessels, The Present and Past Periphrastic Tenses in Ags., Johns Hopkins Diss. (1896), pp. 49 f., 81 f. [possibility of Lat. influence?]; Sweet, New English Grammar ii §§ 2203 ff.; Curme, Publ. MLAss. xxviii 181. — It is of interest to note that the devil was often represented as 'persecuting' men, cf. Angl. xxxv 257 f.

160. deorc dēaþscua — used as epithet of Satan in Cbr. (i) 257 (MS.: deor dædscua; see Cook's note) — is generally understood as 'deadly sprite.' But it was perhaps meant principally as a symbol of 'darkness,' cf. Angl. xxxv 255.

161. seomade (and sƿæde), perhaps 'lay in wait' (and ambushed), or 'lingered' (and . . .), i.e. kept on ambushing. ŷyrwan calls to mind Lat. 'insidiari,' which is frequently applied to the devil; Angl. xxxv 257 f.

163. hwyder helrūnan (type C₁) hwyrftum scriþað. In this context helrūnan implies 'such demons.' The nom. sing. of this form has been posited as belrūne, which is recorded in Glosses (denoting 'witch,' 'sorceress'), cp. (Lat.) Go. baljaruñae (emend.), = 'magae mulieres,' Jordanes, c. 24; OHG. bellirūna 'necromancia.' Cf. Grimm D.M. 1025 (1225); Bu. Zs. 194 f.; Kauffmann, Beitr. xviii 156; Förster, Arch. cviii 23 f. The use of this noun denoting primarily female evil beings is paralleled by Go. unhulþō serving as translation of δαυβνιον, cf. Grimm D.M. 827 (990). — brwyrfstum merely amplifies scrīpað, 'go' (moving).

164 f. fela . . . oft. A similar redundant combination is that of monig and oft, 4 f., 171, 857, 907 f.

168 f. nō hē þone gīfstōl etc. A side remark of similar import to 711: Godes yrre bær. 'He was not allowed to approach the throne (of God, cp. Chr. 572), the sacred one (lit.: the precious thing), [appearing] in the presence of the Lord, nor did he (God) take thought of him' (cf. Angl. xxxv 254). The curse resting on Grendel is complete. witan is to be understood in the well-established sense of 'be conscious of,' 'feel,' 'show'; cp. Wand. 27: [min] mine wisse. See JEGPh. viii 254 f. — It is obvious that these two lines could have been easily interpolated; see Intr. cxvi. — The difficulties experienced in the interpretation of this passage arise chiefly from (1) the ambiguity of gīfstōl, which could denote either God's or Hrōðgār's throne, (2) the possibility of rendering grētan either by 'approach' or 'attack,' (3) the uncertainty as to the real force of myne. (The possibility of identifying hē with the king is too remote to be seriously considered.) In case gīfstōl is understood as Hrōðgār's throne, the lines might be thought to mean that Grendel was not allowed, because he was 'prevented by the Lord,' to approach the royal throne; i.e., though making his home in the hall at night, he was unlike a dutiful retainer, who receives gifts from his lord. See espec. Kock 225 f. & L 5.44.4.7 f. (māþðum ref. to the precious gifts dispensed by the king; myne 'gratitude.') [Cf. also Holtzm. 489 f.; Aant. 5; Pogatscher, Beitr. xix 544 f.; Tr.¹ 135, Bonn.B. xvii 160 f.; Siev. xxix 319; Emerson L 4.149.863, 870; Tinker, MLN. xxiii 239; Hart, MLN. xxvii 198.]

171b. Monig oft gesæt. Type E1.

175-88. Hwilum hie gehēton æt hærgrtafum etc. A passage remarkable both for the reference to the heathen practice of the Danes and the author's pointed Christian comment. Since Hrōðgār is throughout depicted as a good Christian, the Danes' supplication to a heathen deity (termed gāsbona, 'devil,' cf. Angl. xxxv 137) might conceivably indicate that in time of distress they returned to their former ways — as was done repeatedly in England, see Baeda, H.E. iii, c. 30; iv, c. 27, cp. ii, c. 15. (Routh L 4.138.54 n.; Angl. xxxv 134 f., xxxvi 184.) But it is at least equally possible that the author, having in mind the conditions existing among the Danes of the sixth century (on the pagan sanctuary at Hleiðr, see Intr. xxxvii), at this point, failed to live up to his own modernized representation of them. Besides, he seems to have been influenced by reminiscences of the idol worship of the Babylonians described in Daniel, see Intr. cxiii f. — On sacrifices offered for relief from affliction, see *P. Grdr.*² iii 389. The killing of oxen by the Anglo-Saxons 'in sacrificio daemonum' is mentioned in Baeda's H.E. i, c. 30.

178. Swylc wæs þēaw hyra. A conventional phrase of explanation, cp. 1246; Grein Spr.: þēaw; Sievers (Heliand), L 7.34.446.

180b, 81b. Metod hīe ne cūþon etc. A similar inverted arrangement of words in two successive clauses (chiasmus) occurs in 301^b-2, 817^b-18^a, 1160^b-61^a, 1615^b-16^a, 2680^b-81, 3047 f.

183b. Wā bið þām ðe sceal. Type E. So 186b.

184-86. þurh slīðne nīð, hardly 'through fierce hostility'; rather 'in dire distressful wise' (Cl. Hall), see Arch. cxv 178. — sāwle be-scūfan (cp. Lat. 'trudere')/in fýres fæþm; cf. Angl. xxxv 265 f. — Both wiht gewendan and frōfre depend on wēnan (MPb. iii 238: variation).

189-498. Bēowulf's voyage. His reception in Denmark. (A translation of ll. 189-257 by Longfellow may be found in his Poets and Poetry of Europe [and among his Poems].)

189 f. ðā mælceare . . . sēað; similarly 1992 f. The unique phrase, lit. 'he caused the care to well up,' i.e. 'he was agitated by cares,' shows an individualized application of the favorite metaphor of the surgings of care (Arch. cxxvi 351, MLN. xxxiv 131 f.). In its accentuation of personal action it may be compared to sāwle be-scūfan etc., 184 f.

194 f. þæt . . . Grendles dæda; see Intr. lxvi. — fram hām gefrægn, practically 'heard at home' (cp. 410), see Lang. § 25.5; Sievers, Beitr. xi 361 f., xii 188 ff. The addition of the phrase fram hām bespeaks the shifting of the scene from Denmark to Geatland. — Higelāces þegn. His name is not mentioned before l. 343.

197. on þām dæge þýsset lifes. See Gloss.: dæg, sē (note); Angl. xxxv 461.

200. swanrād. Cp. bronrād 10, ganotes bæð 1861. According to the Encyclopædia Britannica ¹¹, xxvi 179 f., the (mute or tame) swan (cygnus olor) "is known to breed as a wild bird not farther from the British shores than the extreme south of Sweden." The whooper, whistling or wild swan (cygnus musicus) "was doubtless always a winter-visitant to Britain, . . . it is a native of Iceland, eastern Lapland, and northern Russia, whence it wanders southward in autumn." — See the 8th Riddle.

202 f. Ðone siðfæt him snotere ceorlas/lýthwōn lōgon. See 415 ff.; Antiq. § 1.

204. hæl scēawedon. Cp. Tacitus, Germania, c. x: 'auspicia . . . observant' (Par. § 10). See Grimm D. M. 944 ff. (1128 ff.), 77 ff. (94 ff.), iii 324 ff. (1639 ff.); Müllenhoff L 9.14.1.222 ff.; Gummere G. O. 467; Liebermann L 9.10.2.574. That the omens which are watched by the men are favorable is understood. Cf. ESl. xlv 123. [Tr. 137, & Ed.; Siev. xxix 322; Sed., MLR. v 286, & Ed.]

205 f. Gēata lēoda belongs with cempan. The peculiar enclosing of the superl. in the relat. clause is found in OE. (see 2869 f., 3161 f.) as well as in ON. and Lat.; cf. Wagner L 6.18.98.

208 ff. There is no reason for assuming an unskilful blending of two versions, or suspecting any other kind of disorder (ten Brink 32; Tr. 137 f.); sundwudu sōhte means 'went to the ship' (not 'on board'); the lagucræftig mon, i.e. Bēowulf, who like Sigfrít, Nibel. 367, is an experienced seaman, 'led the way to the shore.' The characteristic paratactic expression Fyrst forð gewāt would be, in modern usage, 'in course of time'; flota wæs on yðum states the 'result of an action' (Intr. lviii, lxxvii); i.e., the ship, which had been ashore, was now launched (cf. Falk L 9.48.28; Cleasby-Vigfússon, Icel.-Eng. Dict.: blunnr). An interesting parallel to this scene: Odyssey iv 778 ff.

216. wudu bundenne. (Gummere: "the well-braced craft.") Cp. [s]æl timbred 307, (naegled sinc 2023; 2764, 406 (and note on 455), 322, 551 f, 1548, 2755; 1679, 2717, 2774; naegledcnear, Brun. 53; perhaps bundenstefna (see Gloss.), — epithets exhibiting the ancient pride in skill of workmanship.

217. winde gefýsed. It is important to observe that a sailboat is used; see 1905 f. (one sail). Cf. Antiq. § 11; Schnepper L 9.47.25 ff.; Falk L 9.48.56. Its size may be judged from 1896 ff.

218. flota fāmiheals fugle gelicost. The top part of the prow of smaller vessels in ancient Scandinavian times frequently had the shape of a goose's neck. See Falk, p. 38; Gloss.: wunden-bals, -stefna, bringedstefna.

219. ymb āntid, 'after the lapse of a normal space of time'; ōþres dōgores, 'on the following day.' Cf. Siev. xxix 326 f., Gloss.: āntid. It seems possible, however, to construe ōþres dōgores as depending on āntid; the voyage takes one day and a reasonable space of time (as much as is to be expected) of another day. [Leonard, L 3.44, returning to Grein's suggestion 'āntid = hora prima,' translates "after the risen sun Of the next day"; cf. 569 ff.] Whether the distance from Bēowulf's home to the coast near Hleiðr (see Intr. xxxvii, xlvi) could really have been covered in so short a time, is to be doubted. (In the brief account of the return voyage, 1903 ff., no mention is made of the passing of a day.) The measuring of distance by the days required for the voyage (ON. dágr, i.e. 12 hours) was customary among the Scandinavians (see Falk, p. 17; Öhthere's voyage in Ælfred's Orosius [ed. Sweet] 17.9 ff. and passim). — The different days are clearly marked off in the first main part: 3rd day, l. 837; 4th day, l. 1311 (nōn 1600); 5th day, l. 1802; (arrival on the 6th day? l. 1912, sigel sūðan fūs 1966).

223^b-24^a. þā wæs sund liden, / eoletes æt ende. One of the frequent summing-up remarks, Intr. lxii. eoletes, possibly representing an otherwise unrecorded OE. word, is still unexplained. We expect the gen. sing. of a noun meaning 'voyage,' 'sea,' or (perhaps) 'land.' Several conjectures are mentioned under Varr. But the list of possible guesses is not yet exhausted. Holthausen's ēoledes, i.e. ēa-lādes, fits the context well enough, but the form is questionable (lād is fem., see 228; gelād is neut., see 1410). [Cf. also Bu. Tid. 46 f.; Brenner, ESL. iv 139; Tr.¹ 139; Sed., MLR. v 286.]

229. weard Scildinga. A man of importance (see 293). It is not unlikely that the office of coast-guard was established in early times in the Scandinavian countries as well as in Britain.

230. scolde. See Gloss.: sculan.

235. þrymmum. The plur. of abstract nouns is often used with sing. meaning, in many instances semi-adverbially. So, e.g., ārum, duguðum, ēstum, fyrenum, geþyldum, listum, lustum, searawum, orpancum, weorcum, wundrum; on sælum, tō gemyndum; (gp. :) oferhygða, nīða. See Lang. § 25.1.

237 ff. Hwæt syndon gē etc. On the typical motive of such 'question and answer,' see Ehrismann, Beitr. xxxii 275 f.; Intr. lvii. (Odysey iii 71 ff., xv 263 ff., Iliad vi 123 ff.) — For the meaning of hwæt, see Gloss.

243. sceðþan. See Gloss.; Epinal Gloss. 736: wicing-sceaða, 'pirate.'

244-47. Nō hēr cūðlicor cuman ongunnon . . . Cp. Hel. 558 f. : nio hēr ēr sulika kumana ni wurðun/ēri fōn ðōrun thiodun. — An alternative interpretation takes cuman as a noun and assigns to onginnan the (recorded) meaning of 'behave,' 'act'; 'visitors never behaved less as strangers.' (Bu. Tid. 290; Angl. xxviii 439; cf. B.-T. Suppl.: angin.) However, the chief emphasis seems to be placed on their entering the country without permission. (Cp. Völsungasaga, ch. 26; Hrólfs saga 36.23 ff.) — 246. Probably gearwe is an error for gearo (predicative adj.); 'you were not sure that permission would be readily granted.' — 247. māga gemēdu. (Cp. māga rice 1853.) māgas refers to those in authority at the court, see Antiq. § 2; it could even be understood as a specific allusion to Hróðgār and Hróðulf (Intr. xxxi).

249. nis þæt seldguma. Bugge's explanation (Tid. 290 f.) of seldguma as 'hall-man,' 'retainer' (cp. ON. búskarl) is the most convincing one; 'that is not a [mere] retainer [but a chief himself].' Two of the other meanings attributed to it, viz. 'stay-at-home' (Grein), 'a man who possesses only a small homestead' (Heyne², et al., similarly Förster [Beibl. xiii 168 n. 2], who thought of equating it with cotsetla 'cottager'), are rendered improbable by the fact that OE. seld (sæld) denotes a (royal) hall, palace. Bright's emendation is þæt [or: þæt is (?)] seldguma (cp. seldan, 'seldom,' see Varr.), 'that is a rare, or superior, man', makes admirable sense, but the formation proposed is open to doubt, since the other seld- compounds cited in support (seld-cūð, -siene, -cyme, -brwanne) are of a different order, showing a more or less adverbial function of the first element.

252 f. ær, 'rather than,' see Gloss. Only in case they should attempt to proceed without an explanation are they liable to be taken for spies. lēasscēaweras, type D2.

256 f. ofost is sēlest etc. Cp. 3007 f., Ex. 293 f. (MLN. xxxiii 223.)

259. wordhord onlēac; so Wids. 1, Andr. 316, 601, Met. Bt. 6.1. Cp. ll. 489, 501, (2791 f.); Andr. 470: wordlocan onspēonn, 671; Jul. 79: ferðlocan onspēon; Wand. 13: þæt hē his ferðlocan fæste binde.

260. gumcynnes, probably gen. of specification, 'as to race'; cp. Hel. 557 f.

262. 265 f. Wæs mīn fæder etc. Similarly Hadubrand says of his father: chūd was her [allēm, Holt.] chōnnēm mannum, Hildebr. 28.

272^a. þæs ic wēne, 'as I think' (cp. colloq. 'I guess'). See 383, 3000. — 272^b-73. gif, 'if (in case)' it is . . . A peculiarly guarded, polite remark.

274^b. sceaðona ic nāt hwylc. Type A₁. See 2233^b.

278^a. (þurh) rūmne sefan, like (þurb) sīdne sefan 1726^a, 'wisdom.'

280 f. Though edwendan (MS.) might possibly be considered a verb (edwendende = 'rediens' occurs Regius Psalter 77.39), it is far more likely that the noun edwenden was intended, see 1774, 2188 (predic. cwōm). The genitive phrase bealuwa bisigu belongs both with edwenden and bōt (see 909, 933 f.).

283^a. oððe ('else') ā syþðan. Type C₁.

284. Note the alliteration of þær.

286. ðær ('where') on wicge sæt. Cp. Mald. 28: þær hē on ofre stōd; El. 70, Hel. 716. (Par. Lost vi 671, viii 41, etc.) See 356, þær 'to where . . .,' etc.

287^b-89. Æghwæpres sceal etc. The purport of this general remark applied to the particular situation is: 'It was my duty to scrutinize your words and your conduct.' sē þe wēl þenceð, 'who has a clear mind'; cp. 2601: (þām) se wēl þenceð, 'who is right-minded.' Schücking (following a suggestion of Krauel's) and Holthausen place these lines in parenthesis, making the speech begin at 290. However, although the insertion of some descriptive and explanatory matter between the announcement and the beginning of a speech is quite customary (Intr. lvi), the intercalated statement never takes the form of an abstract maxim, but relates directly to the person or event in question. On the other hand, a maxim is placed at the beginning of a speech, 3077 f.

297. lēofne mannan; 299 f. gōdfremmendra swylcum gifeþe bið etc. Probably the whole band is referred to ('to whomsoever of the brave ones it will be granted'), the sing. of the noun and pronoun being used in a collective sense. (Cf. Rie. Zs. 385; MPh. iii 250.) The def. article: þone (hilderæs) perhaps signifies 'such (a battle).' It is not to be denied that Bēowulf alone may have been meant (swylcum = 'to such a one').

302 f. On the anchor, see Falk, L 9.48.23; Vogel, R.-L. i 105-7. See note on 1918.

303^b-6^a. A much discussed passage, see Varr. Several facts are considered well established; viz., that -beran is a blunder for (hlēor)-ber- gan (which, however, should not be referred to a weak fem. blȝorberge), that ferh should not be equated with fearb ('pig'), and that grummon is in need of emendation. The reading adopted in the text involves a change from the plur. Eoforlic scionon to the sing. hēold, men (collect.), which, although somewhat harsh, is not without parallel. (MPb. iii 250, 451.) [Holthausen understands the whole passage with reference to Bēowulf alone, whose helmet is adorned with several boar-figures (l. 1453); but ferbwearde hēold/gūpmōd gummon (Holt.) — i.e. 'Bēowulf protected his men' — would be an unduly otiose remark in this place.] — On helmets, see Antiq. § 8; Figure 2 showing helmets surmounted by a boar; Par. § 5, ch. 41 (Hildisvin). One such helmet has been found in England, viz. at Benty Grange, Derbyshire. As the boar was sacred to (ON.) Freyr (OE. Frēa, cf. Intr. xxiv, xxxvii), this decoration of helmets no doubt had originally a religious significance. Cf. Grimm D.M. 176 ff. (213 ff.); Gummere G. O. 433 f.; Par. § 10, c. xlv.

308. goldfāh. The lavish use of gold, even on the roof of the hall (see 927, 311; cp. 777, 994), recalls analogous folk-tales, see Panzer 96 ff., 257. Scandinavian imagination delighted in such pictures (e.g., Völuspá 37, 64; Grimnismál 8, 12, 15; Prose Edda, Gylfaginning 2). The immense gold hoards of Germanic chiefs of the migration period (see note on Eormenric, 1197 ff.), the precious ornaments found in the Scandinavian countries, and the splendor of Anglo-Saxon court life indicate the historical background of this poetic fancy. Cf. Montelius 164 ff.; Chadwick Or. 185 ff.; R.-L. ii 264 ff. See Gloss.: gold, and cpds. (Silver is never mentioned in Beowulf.)

313. him tō, i.e. tō hofe, cp. 1974.

314. gūðbeorna sum. This use of sum (so 1312) may be compared to that of ān, 100.

320. Stræt wæs stānfāh. So Andr. 1236: strāte stānfāge. The street was "paved in the Roman fashion" (Gummere G.O. 98). Or was it, by poetic extravagance, thought to be paved with stones of various colors?

322 f. hringfren scīr/song. See 1521 f., Finnsb. 6 f.

325. sāmēþe. Similarly sipes wērig 579, 1794; sīðwōrig, Hel. 660, 670, 678, 698, 2238; Kudrun 1348; Nibel. 682. (Cf. Arch. cxxvi 45.)

328. gāras stōdon; i.e., the spears were placed (stacked together). Cf. Intr. lxvii & n. 2.

330. (æscholt) ufan græg, lit. 'grey (looked at from) above'; ref. to the iron point. Cf. Lang. § 25.5.

331. wlonc hāleð, named Wulfgār, 348.

333 ff. The normal equipment of warriors; cf. Antiq. § 8.

348. Wendla lēod. See Gloss.: Wendlas; Intr. xxx, xliv, xlviii. Two possible reasons for a foreigner's staying at Hrōðgār's court are suggested by ll. 461 ff., 2493 ff.

349 f. The general term mōdsefa, 'mind,' 'character,' is followed by the more specific, explanatory words wīg ond wīsdom.

350. þæs is preliminary to the exegetical phrase ymb þinne sīð, 353.

356. Hwearf þā hrædlice þær Hrōðgār sæt. Similarly 1163, etc., see Gloss.: þær. Cp. Nibel. 1348: si ilten harte balde dā der künic saz, 442, etc.

357. anhār. MS. un hār. un- has sometimes been looked upon as a variant of an-, or an intensive prefix (Heyne, Bu. Tid. 71, 303, Bu. Zs. 197, Aant. 18; B.-T.; Angl. xxix 381), but the evidence is, indeed, insufficient.

361 ff. By no means a verbatim report of the speech. The same is true of the report, 391 ff. Cf. Intr. lxvi.

377. Ðonne, 'further,' 'moreover'; sægdon þæt sæliþende, see 411, Hildebr. 42.

378. Gēata, objective gen.; 'gifts for the Geats' (MPb. iii 452). See 1860 ff.

383. West-Denum, simply 'Danes.' See 392, 463, 783; Intr. lxx n. 1.

386 f. hāt in gān/sēon sibbegedriht samod ætgædere. sibbegedriht probably refers to Bēowulf and his men, as in 729; the object of sēon is understood, viz. mē, see 396. (MPb. iii 253.) In case the company of Danes were meant by sibbegedriht, the object of hāt would have to be supplied: 'command them to go in.'

390. inne, i.e., being still inside the hall.

397 f. The weapons are to remain outside. So Nibel. 1583, 1683 f.

398. wudu wælsceaftas. An interesting type of asyndetic parataxis. So sigla searogimma 1157, windgeard weallas 1224, ides āglæcwīf 1259, eafor bēafodsegn 2152, eard ēðelriht 2198, eard ēðelwyn 2493. (Siev. ix 137; MPb. iii 250.) Similar collocations of adjectives, e.g., ealdum infrōdum 1874, frome fyrðwate 1641, 2476; probably undyrne cūð 150, 410 (Angl. xxviii 440).

404. heoðe (MS.) ('interior'?) is to all appearances spurious; the form hel-heoðo which has been quoted from Sat. 700 is extremely doubtful.

407. Wæs . . . hāl! A common Germanic form of salutation. So Andr. 914; OE. Gosp., Mat. 28.9, Luke 1. 28 (cp. Par. Lost v 385 ff.), Lazamon's Brut 14309: Lauerd king, wæs hæl. Cf. Grimm, Deutsche Grammatik iv 356 (298 f.); Stroebe, Beitr. xxxvii 190, 197. On wæs (= wes), see Lang. § 7.1.

408^b-9^a. hæbbe ic mærdða fela/ongunnen on geogoþe. This proud self-introduction is in line with the best epic usage: Æneid i 378 f.; Odyssey ix 19 f.; Finnsb. 25.

409^b. Grendles þing, 'the affair of Grendel,' with the subaudition of 'case,' 'dispute' (see 425 f.).

413^a. (stande . . .) īdel ond unnyt. So Gen. 106 (stōd . . .) idel ond unnyt. A familiar phrase of somewhat didactic (and religious) flavor, occurring both in prose and poetry. (Also Ormulum, Dedic., 41.) Cf. Angl. xxxv 468.

413^b-14. siððan æfenlōht/under heofenes haðor (MS. bador) beholen weorpeð. The plain meaning is: 'after the sun disappears from the firmament'; heofenes haðor (misspelling d for ð occurs also in 1837, 2869, 2959, 3119), a periphrasis like swegles begong, heofones bwealf, foldan fæpm (see Gloss.). (Generally in OE. poetry the setting sun or stars are said to pass under the earth or the sea.) The reading of bador as bādor ('brightness,' so Kc., Tho., et al.) is not entirely impossible, though bādor is nowhere else found as a noun. — Other poetical expressions for the coming of night, 649 ff., 1789 f.

420-24. It is not clear whether these feats were performed in the course of a single adventure or on several occasions. In the latter case, the slaying of the níceras could refer to the Breca episode, 549 ff. (cp. 567 ff. (1428 f.) with 423^a). By the term níceras (cp. sādracan 1426, wyrmas ond wildðeor 1430, wundra . . . fela 1509; 1510, 558, 549) were understood strange sea-beasts of some kind; the definite sense of 'walrus,' 'hippopotamus' (Rie. Zs. 388 f., Bu.Zs. 197) need not be looked for in the Beowulf. The fight against giants, five of whom were bound, seems reminiscent of folk-tales. Did Bēowulf bring those five with him as prisoners? (Cf. Panzer 44 ff., 58 ff.) — 423. The subject of āhsodon is níceras.

425 f. gehēgan/ðing, 'hold a meeting,' 'settle the dispute,' 'fight the case out.' A legal term applied to battle. See Antiq. § 6.

426^b. Ic þē nū ðā. Type C1. See 657^b, (El. 539, 661). nū ðā became ME. nouthe.

427 f. (Ic þē . . .) biddan wille . . . ānre bēne. bēn is here 'favor' rather than 'petition,' cp. MnE. boon. The same expression occurs Sigurðarkv. en skamma 64: biþja munk þik bómar einnar.

430^b. nū ic þus feorran cōm; cp. 825^b, 361, 1819^a. An appeal to Hrōðgār's sense of fairness. Very similar sentiments: OE. Bede 60.5 ff. (i, c. 25), Mald. 55 ff.

432. fælsian. The notion of the 'cleansing' of infested places was in accord with popular tradition (see Intr. xvi: Grettissaga, ch. 67; Ker L 4.120.1.196; Panzer 100 f., 266). It also admitted of a Christian interpretation (Fat. Ap. 66, El. 678; cf. Angl. xxxvi 191 n. 1).

433^a. Hæbbe ic ēac geāhsod. Type A3.

434. wæpna ne recceð, 'does not care to use weapons.'

435 ff. Bēowulf wishes to meet Grendel on 'equal terms' (so 679 ff.); that the monster cannot be wounded by ordinary weapons, he does not yet know (791 ff.). No doubt, the story called for a wrestling contest, which is also Bēowulf's favorite method of fighting (2506 ff., 2518 ff.; Intr. xix & n. 2), — though he sometimes does use weapons (note 2684 ff.). The introduction of the motive of Bēowulf's chivalry, or self-confidence, makes a modern impression. [Yet there is no need to operate with different structural layers in this connection, as Boer (59 f.) does.]

435^b-6. swā mē Higelāc sīe . . . A form of asseveration; 'as [I wish that] H. may be . . .' (or: 'so may H. be . . .'). In the same measure as Bēowulf will acquit himself heroically, Higelāc will feel kindly disposed towards him. Cp. Ælfric's Gen. 42.15: swā ic āge Pharaones helde.

440^a. lād wið lāpum. 'Grammatical rime' within the half-line; so 931^a, 1978^a, 2461^a.

444^b. swā hē oft dyde. Some edd. have omitted the comma after dyde, construing dyde as 'verbum vicarium' with the object māgen (cp. 1828; Grein Spr.: dōn, 9); but 444^b has all the appearance of a complete formula, see 1238^b, 1381^b, 1676^b, 1891^b. The literalness of the statement must not be pressed any more than in 1891^b.

445^a. The reading māgen Hrēðmanna has been set aside metri causa. (T.C. § 28 n. 2.) Cf. Schröder, ZfdA. xliii 366; Krackow L 7.19.44, Arch. cxi 171 f.

445 ff. Nā þū minne þearft/hafalan hýdan etc. The general sense of this passage is clear: there will be no need of funeral rites (cp. 2124 ff.). hafalan hýdan refers either to interment (cp. Wand. 83 f.), or to the custom of covering the head of the dead with a cloth (Konrath, Arch. xcix 417; Angl. xxxvi 174 n. 2). [Heyne thought of a guard of honor (see He.-Schü.), Simrock L 3.21.199, Schücking L 4.126.1.5, of a 'lichwake.')] — 450^a. mearcað, probably 'marks with blood,' 'stains.' [Bu. Tid. 70: 'marks with his footprints,' 'traverses'; Gr. Spr.: 'inhabits' (?).] — 450^b-51. nō ðū ymb mīnes ne þearft/lices feorme leng sorgian. The rendering 'sustenance of my body' is trivial and hardly appropriate in view of Bēowulf's very brief visit; feorm is more likely 'taking care of,' 'disposal,' being another allusion to the funeral. nō . . . leng 'no longer,' i.e. 'not a moment,' 'not at all' (Aant. 9).

452^a. Onsend Higelāce. Type C1. Cp. 460^a.

455. Wēlandes geweorc. If a weapon or armor in Old Germanic literature was attributed to Wēland, this was conclusive proof of its superior workmanship and venerable associations.¹ The figure of this wondrous smith — the Germanic Vulcanus (Hephaistos) — symbolizing at first the marvels of metal working as they impressed the people of the stone age, was made the subject of a heroic legend, which spread from North Germany to Scandinavia and England. Evidence that the striking story of Wēland's captivity and revenge told in the Eddic Völundarkviða (in a later, expanded, and somewhat diluted form, in the hidreks saga, chs. 57-79) was known to the Anglo-Saxons, is furnished by the allusions in the first two stanzas of Deor and the carving on the front of the Franks Casket (dating from the beginning of the eighth century).² The tradition of Weland was continued until modern times in connection with the motive of the 'silent trade.' It became attached to a cromlech in the White Horse valley in Berkshire called 'Wayland Smith's Cave,' or 'Forge'³ and was used also, in a rather peculiar way, by Walter Scott in his Kenilworth (chs. 9 ff.).⁴

457. For [g]ewy[r]htum is parallel to for ārstafum (fōr denoting cause, not purpose); 'because of deeds done' (ref. to the good services rendered to Bēowulf's father, 463 ff.) — and 'the resultant obligations you are under.' Accordingly, the meaning of 457 f. is: 'from a sense of duty and kindness you have come to us.' (JEGPh. vi 191 f.) [Cf. also Siev. ix 138, xxxvi 401 f.; Bu. 87 f.; Aant. 9 f.; Tr. 152 f.; Holt. Zs. 114; MPb. iii 452 f.; Grienb., Beitr. xxxvi 80 f.; Boer 44 n.]

459. Geslōh þin fæder fæhðe mæste. geslēan is understood in the perfective (resultative) sense: 'thy father brought about by fight the greatest feud' (or, 'of feuds,' since fæbse perhaps stands for fæbða, cp. Cbr. 617, Beow. 78, 193, 1119, 2328, etc.). See Müllenhoff, Anz. f.d.A. iii 179; MLN. xvi 15, MPb. iii 262. The feud was probably considered memorable on account of the persons or circumstances connected with it. — The chief alternative renderings advocated are: 'fought the greatest fight' (see Kock 226 f.), and 'fought out the greatest feud' (see Lorz 64; Chambers). The former, while not entirely impossible (cp. 1083), ignores the customary perfective function of geslēan. The latter is unconvincing, since the slaying of Heapolāf by no means finishes the feud. Moreover, Hrōðgār is not interested primarily in relating a great exploit of Ecgþeow's, but means to emphasize the friendly relations existing between the Danes and Geats, his main point being the subsequent settlement of that feud (bā [demonstr.] fæbse 470).

461 f. for herebrōgan, 'on account of [anticipated] war-terror.' (Angl. xxviii 440.) Ecgþeow was compelled to leave the country after the manslaughter. Interesting parallels: Odyssey xv 271 ff.; Grettis saga, chs. 16, 24, 27; Vǫlsungasaga, ch. 1 (Sigi kills a man — ok má hann nú eigi heima vera með febr sinum); Æpelberht's Laws 23 (gif bana of lande gewiteþ . . .).

489 f. onsæl meoto, sigehrēð secgum. See Varr. The apparent metrical objection to an imper. onsæl, which prompted the reading on sæl(um), has been shown by Bright to be largely imaginary, the occurrence of imperatives under the first metrical stress of the second half-line being not infrequent. For such imperatives taking precedence, in alliteration, of a following noun, see Finnsb. (111^a), 111^b, Gen. 1513^b, (Andr. 914^a), Gr.-Wū. ii 219.38^b; similarly, Wald. i 22^b, Gen. 1916^b, Andr. 1212^b (cf. Siev. A. M. §§ 24.3, 27). On the other hand, no really appropriate function of on sæl can be presented. Bright's rendering, "do thou, victory-famous one, disclose to these men what thou hast in mind" (emend. mëtto, found in no other place, but cp. ofermëtto), makes very satisfactory sense; for the figurative meaning of onsælan, see onlūcan 259, onbindan 501; for the use of the dative, cp. Andr. 171 f., 315 f. In fact, the king's exhortation, 'enjoy yourself and speak your mind freely,' leaves nothing to be desired. But the assumption of an adj. sigehrēð (a 'possessive compound,' so He.¹⁻³, Tr.¹ 154 & ed.) is open to doubt. May not the noun sigehrēð refer to the hero's glorious deeds which he is expected to relate? Dietrich and Grein Spr. took meoto for a fem. noun, 'meditation,' 'thoughts' (cp. Go. mitōn, wk. v. 2), Grein², Bu. Tid. 292, Tr.¹ 154, for the plur. of a neut. noun met (cp. gemet), 'measure,' 'etiquette' (Bu.: 'courtly words,' cf. He.¹⁻³ [Leo]). That an unrecorded noun is hidden in the MS. reading is by no means improbable. [Moore, ÆGPb. xviii 206 (like Körner, ES. ii 251, and Kock² 105): "think of good fortune (on sæl meoto), victory-renown to men."]

499-661. The Unferð Intermezzo: Account of Bēowulf's swimming adventure with Breca. Entertainment in the hall.

Bēowulf, taunted by Unferð with having been beaten in a swimming match with Breca,¹ sets him right by telling the true story of the incident; whereupon he makes a spirited attack upon his critic's character and record, winding up with a confident prediction of his own success against Grendel.

Unferð represents the swimming tour as a contest (506 f., 517). Bēowulf, on the other hand, explains that the adventure was entered upon solely to fulfill a boastful pledge (bēot, 536) without any idea of rivalry (543), although he does consider himself superior to any contestant whatever. In fact, he makes much more of his struggles with the sea-monsters.

This swimming exploit, which has frequently been assumed to rest on a mythological basis,² looks rather like an exaggerated account of one of those sporting feats common among the sea-loving Northern people (and which naturally often took the form of contests).³ In particular, a somewhat similar tale of a swimming match in the Égils Saga ok Ásmundar (of the 14th century) has been cited,⁴ but the parallelism noted is far from exact. That Breca was known to Ags. heroic legend,⁵ is proved by the allusion in Wids. 25: Breoca [wēold] Brondingum. But nothing points to an old tradition in which the Breca incident was connected with the person of Bēowulf. It should be added that the story of the swimming could not well have formed the subject of a separate lay.

The narrative of this youthful trial of strength, inspiring, as it does, confidence in Bēowulf's ability to cope with the fearful monster, is eminently appropriate at this point. It may also be abundantly illustrated by analogies from folk-tales.⁶

The distance covered by the two endurance swimmers is very considerable. The Finna land 580 (land of the Finns or rather Lapps) where Beowulf comes ashore is usually identified with Finmarken in the north of Norway. By the land of the *Heaðo-Rēmas*⁷ 519 is probably

⁵ Perhaps in connection with the sea; see also Glossary of Proper Names.

⁶ See Panzer 272. That the name of Breca, Bēanstān's son, is derived from a Stānbreca* (cf. Steinhauer, etc.) of some such folk-tales, is a rather far-fetched hypothesis of Panzer's.

meant the region of the modern Romerike (to the north of Christiania), called in ON.: Raumariki, and cited as a tribal name Raumaricii by Jordanes, c. 3. In prehistoric times it may very well have included a strip of seashore.¹ However, we are by no means compelled to believe that the poet had very clear notions of the geography of the scene.

Unferð, a most interesting personage of our poem, has been declared² an impersonation of the type of 'the wicked counselor' — like Bikki, e.g., at Jormunrek's court —, well known in Germanic legend, although there is no clear indication (see 1164 ff.) that he is fomenting dissensions within the Scylding dynasty. The name Unferð, i.e., more properly, Unfrið, 'mar-peace,'³ it should be noted, appears to have been coined on English soil, such descriptive abstract appellations pointing to West Germanic rather than Scandinavian origin.⁴ On the other hand, it has been suggested⁵ that his peculiar position would seem to reflect conditions at the Irish courts where the fili (members of the learned poets' guild) enjoyed a remarkable influence and surprising freedom of speech.⁶

What the title þyle applied to Unferð (1165, 1456) meant, cannot be determined with certainty. The þyle (ON. þulr)⁷ has been variously

⁵ By Deutschbein, GRM. i 114. It is strongly opposed by Olson, MPh. xi 419 ff.

⁷ See the discussions of Müllenhoff, Deutsche Altertumskunde v 289 ff., Fr. Kauffmann in Philologische Studien: Festgabe für E. Sievers, pp. 159 ff., Koegel in *P. Grdr.*² ii^a, p. 33; Mogk, ib., p. 575; Heusler, R.-L. i 443 f.; Larson L 9.19.120 f. (convenient summary); B. C. Williams, Gnomic Poetry in Anglo-Saxon, pp. 72 ff. — As a proper name, þyle occurs Wids. 24.

described as a sage, orator, poet of note, historiologist, major domus, or the king's right-hand man. The OE. noun occurs several times as the rendering of 'orator,' besides the compound þelcraft = 'rethorica' (see B.-T.); hence the meanings of 'orator,' 'spokesman,' 'official entertainer' suggest themselves as applicable to the situation in the Beowulf. As to the pulr, the characteristics of his office seem to have been "age, wisdom, extended knowledge, and a seat of honor" (Larson). Also Unferð has a seat of distinction: æt fōtum sæt frēan Scyldinga (500, 1166) — like the scop of The Fates of Men, 80 ff.¹ And by his reference to the Breca incident he shows that he is the best informed man at the court.

He is depicted by our poet as a sharp-witted (589) court official of undoubted influence and a reputation for valor (1166 f.), which he is jealously (501 ff.) anxious to guard. He has laid himself open to the terrible charge of fratricide (587 ff., 1167 f.), which, strange to say, does not seem to have imperiled his prominent position at the court,² although he is certain — so the Christian author informs us through the mouth of Bēowulf (588 f.) — to receive his punishment in hell (cf. Angl. xxxv 133, 265).

In noteworthy contrast with the original conception of his character as expressed by his name, Unferð evinces a spirit of generosity, courtesy, and sportsmanlike fairness toward Bēowulf when the latter has demonstrated his superiority (1455 ff., 1807 ff.), — a feature obviously added by the poet himself.

The speeches of Unferð (506–528) and Bēowulf (530–606), if rather ornate considering the occasion, show the style of the poem at its best. The admirable use of variation, the abundance of sea terms (508 ff.), the strong description of the scene (545 ff., cp. Wand. 101 ff.) chiming in with the hardy spirit of the Northern heroes are conspicuous features of this famous passage.

501^a. onband beadurūne, 'unbound a battle-rune,' i.e. 'disclosed a hidden quarrel' (see note on eardlufan 692), 'began a bellicose speech.' It is probable that only the vaguest suggestion of ancient heathen belief (Müllenhoff in R. v. Liliencron & K. Müllenhoff, Zur Runenlebre [1852], p. 44) was lingering in beadurūn. Cp. El. 28: walrūne ne mād, 1098: hygerūne ne mād. The use of onbindan is illustrated by Beow. 259, 489.

² That Unferð remained unmolested in spite of the murder, because there can be no 'feud' within one and the same family (cp. 2441 ff.), is scarcely believable.

502. æþynca, which has been found in one other passage only, viz. Lib. Scint. 176. 12, need not be changed to æþpanca (*Tr.*¹ 155) or considered a weakened variant of it (Bülb. § 408, cf. B.-T. & Suppl.). Its genuineness is vouched for by the well-known verb ofþyncan.

526. The gen. heaðoræsa is construed with dohte (cp. 1344) rather than with gebwær.

543^b. nō ic fram him wolde. Type C₁.

545. fiþ nihta fyrst. See 517: seofon niht. They kept on swimming for two days after their separation. That Bēowulf meant to correct Unferð's statement is not very likely. It is true, from a literal interpretation of the following passage one might conclude that Bēowulf landed on the sixth day; but it is more reasonable to believe that the poet omitted further details of the time element (which he neglected altogether in the account of Bēowulf's return voyage, 1903 ff.).

548. ondhwearf. The usual form of this (unstressed) verbal prefix is on; see Gloss.: on-, and-.

557 f. heaþoræs fornam/mihtig meredēor þurh mine hand. Back of this remarkably impersonal manner of viewing the action lies the idea of fate. Cf. Intr. xlix & n. 2.

561. dēoran sweorde, 'with my good sword.' See 1528, 2050. (Lazamon's Brut 28051: mid deore mine sweorede.)

(Cf. Sievers, Beitr. xii 191.) See also 1197 (hýran). The case is modified and complicated by the addition of the element of variation: 1 f.

581^b-83^a. Nō... wiht... swylcra searoniða... , billa brōgan. Terms of variation expressed by different grammatical forms; see 2028 f., 2067 ff. (MPb. iii 238.)

597. Sige-Scyldinga. A mechanical use of sige- as a general commendatory word (Intr. lxx n. 1) without regard to the specific situation. There is no irony intended here.

599. ac hē lust wigeð, / swefeð ond sendeþ. lust wigeð, 'feels joy,' 'enjoys himself' (or, according to Moore, JEGPh. xviii 208, 'has his own way'), placed paratactically by the side of the two following verbs. sendan may perhaps be credited with the sense of 'send to death,' like forsendan 904, forð onsendan 2266 (see Schü. xxxix 103 f.); cp. Lat. 'mittere Orco, umbris,' etc. (e.g. Æneid ix 785, xi 81). Yet the meaning of 'feasting' formerly (orig. by Leo in Heyne¹) attributed to it — on the basis of the noun sand 'dish of food,' 'repast' ('that which is sent to the table') —, though generally given up at present, may be right after all.

603^b. (Gæþ est) sē þe mōt. A mere formula; so 1387^b (cp. 1177^b, 1487^b); Hildebr. 60; Rieger, Germ. ix 310; Sievers's note on Hel. 224. — 603^b, either type D4 or E1.

617. bæd hine bliðne. Omission of wesan, see Gloss.: eom.

620^a. Ymbēode þā. Type B1.

622. sincfato sealde; i.e., she passed the cups. On Ags. cups, see Tupper's Riddles, p. 204. No drinking horns are mentioned in Beowulf.

627 f. þæt hēo on ænigne eorl gelyfde / fyrena frōfre; i.e., she counted on help from a hero. An instance of a peculiar mode of viewing direction (Lang. § 25.5). Quite parallel to this use of on with acc. is is: 909, 1272 f.

628. Hē þæt ful geþeah etc. Evidently a definite drinking ceremony. Cp. the salutation, 617, 625. See 1024 f.

635. on wæl crunge. Note the use of on with acc. (cp. 772, 1540, 1568, etc.). On the other hand, 1113: sume on wale crungon.

644. oþ þæt semninga; so 1640. It looks as if the adverb were added merely to accentuate the meaning of the conjunction. Thus also op þæt færinga, 1414.

646 ff. The emendation adopted by all recent edd.: siððan hie sunnan lēoht gesēon [ne] meahton has a false ring; one would expect, at least, something like leng gesēon ne meahton. (Cf. also Schuchardt L 6.14.2.25.) Ll. 648 ff. plainly mean: 'from the time that they could see the light of the sun, until (op ðe) night came'; exactly as Brun. 13 ff. (sippan . . . oð . . .). Thus, the meaning (of op ðe, or opðe) 'until' (so some earlier edd., like Grein, Arnold, cf. Heyne³) need not be given up for Bugge's opðe = 'and' (i.e., a variant of the regular 'or,' see Bu. Tid. 57, cf. E. tr.). Nor do we need to assume a lacuna (Grein, cf. Gru.). In other words, the king knew that fight had been in Grendel's mind all day long; Grendel had been waiting from morning till night to renew his attacks in the hall, just as the dragon — hordweard onbād/earfoðlice, oð ðæt æfen cwōm 2302 f. — Close parallels to the use of tō (þām hēabsele) are found in 1990, 1207. Whether we consider ablācan as 'dat. used as instr.' (Sedgfield), as 'dat. of personal agency' (Green L 6.8.5.98: 'a fight was contemplated by the monster'), or a variety of the dat. of interest (cp. Lat. 'mihi consilium captum est,' see also Heusler, Altisl. Elementarbuch § 383), is immaterial to the general interpretation of the context. [Cf. also Bu. 89; ten Brink 52; Tr.¹ 160.]

655. ænegum men, 'any man,' i.e. excepting, of course, Hrōðgār's own men. (Cf. Jellinek & Kraus, ZfdA. xxxv 272.)

660 f. It may jar on our feelings that Hrōðgār should offer a material reward to the high-minded hero, but he did just what was expected of him. Cp. 384 f., 1380 ff., 2134, also 1484 ff.

673^a. irena cyst. irena (so 1697^a, 2259^b) stands for older irenna (so 802^b, 2683^a, 2828^a). Cf. Lang. § 19.5. Even if the n was really meant to be single, this would not necessarily involve a gross violation of meter. (T.C. § 21.)

675 ff. Bēowulf is made to utter his 'boast,' gylpworda sum, in deference to general epic practice. (Intr. lvii.) The occasion is singular enough, but the circumstances of the fight allowed no chance for oratory immediately before the action. — How are the beds procured? See 1239 f.

681. nāt hē þāra gōða. Semi-partitive gen. in connection with the negation. The following þæt-clause explains gōða. Cp. Ælfric, Hom. i 190.31: þæt fōlc ne cūðe sǣra gōða, þæt hī cwædon þæt hē God wære; also Mald. 176 f. (MPb. iii 455.)

698b-99. fēond is acc. sing. (not plur.), ealle, nom. plur. (not acc. plur.). See 939 ff., 705; Angl. xxxv 470.

700b-2a. 'It is well known that God has always (in every instance up to this time) ruled over the race of men.' Cp. 1663 f.

703. How is it possible for the Geats to fall asleep in this situation? Obviously, their failing enhances the achievement of Bēowulf. Or does this feature reflect ancient tales in which preliminary unsuccessful attempts to cope with the intruder are incident to the defenders' failure to keep awake? Cf. Panzer 96 f., 99, 267.

707. under sceadu bregdan; under 'down to,' or 'to the inside of,' see Gloss. The 'shades' might well be of classical origin; cp., e.g., Æneid xi 831, xii 952: 'vitaque cum gemitu fugit indignata sub umbras.' Cf. MPb. iii 257; Arch. cxxvi 349. Hel. 1113 ff.: giwēt im the mēnskaðo . . . undar ferndalu; Par. Lost vi 141 f.: 'and whelm'd Thy legions under darkness.'

710 ff. The presentation of the Grendel fight, the first climax of the poem, shows the author's characteristic manner. (Cf. Intr. lii, lix.) Partly excellent, vigorous narrative — yet the story is very much interrupted by interspersed general reflections on the situation and by remarks on the persons' thoughts and emotions, which greatly lengthen it and detract from its effectiveness. The corresponding combat of Grettir (Intr. xiv f.) is a good deal shorter, and also more direct and realistic.

710. Ðā cōm. After a digression, the poet returns to the subject, see Cōm 702; likewise Cōm pā 720 is an entirely natural expression. No appeal to a patchwork theory is necessary to explain this repetition. Some enthusiasts have found the threefold bell-like announcement of

Grendel's approach a highly dramatic device. (Cf. also Intr. lix & n. 1.)

719. heardran hǣle, healðegnas fand. hǣle, hilde, bælescipes, and the like are metrically, at any rate, safer than bæle (T.C. § 17). Holthausen's former interpretation (Angl. xxiv 267) of heardran hǣle (from hǣl 'omen') as 'in a worse plight' (or with A. J. Daniels's modification [Kasussyntax zu den Predigten Wulfstans, Leiden Diss., 1904, p. 162]: 'tot een rampzaliger omen,' i.e. in effect, 'with a more disastrous result') was a happy suggestion — cp. ME. expressions like to wroþer hele, till ðlerhayle, with il a hail (see, e.g., Mätzner, AE. Sprachproben, Wbch. ii 391a), ON. illu beilli —, but this use of the dat. appears rather doubtful. The same is true of Sedgfield's rendering 'with sterner greeting' (from hǣlo). We may venture to take heardran hǣle as acc. sing., 'worse luck' — cp. the meaning of beardsǣlp, beadsǣlig —, heardran referring at the same time to the second object, healðegnas. That seemingly incongruous objects may be governed by one and the same verb, is seen from 653 f.

721. drēamum bedǣled. A permanent characteristic (epitheton perpetuum) of Grendel, like wonsǣli 105, fēasceaft 973, earmsceapen 1351, synnum geswenced 975.

723. onbrǣd þā; i.e., then he swung the door wide open; not a mere repetition of Duru onarn, 721.

724^b. Raþe æfter þon. Type D4. As to the accent on the preposition, cf. Rie. V. 31 f., also 61.

725. fāgne (flōr), perhaps 'fair-paved' (Gummere); see 320.

736. ðicgean ofer þā niht. þrȳðswyð behēold. Types A 1 (—×××|—×), E 1.

736^b-38. Why does Bēowulf in the meantime remain lying on his bed? Presumably this is a feature of the original story (see Intr. xv, xvii; Grettissaga, chs. 65, 35) retained by the poet, though he had added the incident of a previous attack on one of the comrades (named Hondsciōb, 2076). — under (færgripum) denotes attending circumstances ('with') rather than time ('during,' Aant. 14); "set to work with his sudden snatchings" (Cl. Hall). Cp. the use of mid, 2468, and OE. Chron. A.D. 1132 (MS. E): hē fēorde mid suīcdōm.

744 f. eal . . . fēt ond folma, 'all, (even) feet and hands,' or 'feet, hands, and all' (Aant. 14).

748 f. fēond, i.e. Grendel; hē onfēng . . . inwitþancum, 'he (Bēowulf) received him (pron. object understood, cf. Lang. § 25.4) with hostile intent.' [Cf. also Schü. xxxix 105.] — wið earm gesæt (ingressive function), 'sat up supporting himself on his arm.' Thus Sat. 432: ārās þā ānra gebrȳlc and wið earm gesæt, / hleonade wið banda. (Cf. Arch. cix 312, MPb. iii 263.) Note the progress in 759: ūþlang āstōd.

756. sēcan dēofla gedræg. This cannot be literally true, as Grendel is supposed to live alone with his mother.

758. Gemunde þā se gōða, mæg Higelāces. The exceptional alliteration (see Varr., T.C. § 26) seems permissible, especially in view of the syntactical pause assumed here (comma after gōða). The usual type of alliteration in such lines may be seen in 1474, 2971, 2977.

760. (fingras) burston; 'broke' (cracked, snapped), as in burston bānlocan 818, when a more serious stage of the fight has been reached; not (as was suggested by Tinker, MLN. xxiii 240) 'bled' (cp. 1121), though this hardly authentic result was brought about by gripping, Nibel. 623.

764 f. wiste his fingra geweald/on grames grāpum, 'he realized etc.' Cp. 821; ON. vita (e.g., Völundarkv. 14.3).

766. þæt se hearmscaþa tō Heorute ātēah. Kock² 106 ff. argues for the relative character of this clause, þæt (instead of þone) being justified by þæt 765; sīð ātēon, 'take a journey.' Cp. 1455 f. This is indeed more satisfactory than to take þæt as conjunct. and ātēon as intrans. verb (as suggested MPb. iii 455).

769. ealuscerwen. -scerwen, related to scerwan* 'grant,' 'allot' (bescerwan = 'deprive'). 'Dispensing of ale,' or, in a pregnant sense, of 'bitter or fateful drink' might have come to be used as a figurative expression for 'distress' (Bu. Tid. 292 ff.; Beibl. xxii 372 f.). The interpretation 'taking away of ale,' 'terror' (at the loss of ale) (Heyne⁴) has found much favor (see Schücking¹⁰), though the form -scerwen (instead of bescerwen*) does not support it. (Spaeth L 3.42.4 describes the term as "reminiscent of the wild oversetting of tankards and spilling of ale when the hall was suddenly attacked.") Of course, the original form as well as meaning may have been obscured. [Cf. Cosijn, Beitr. xxi 19; Krapp's note on Andr. 1526; Grienb., Beitr. xxxvi 84 f.; Siev., ib. 410; Sedgfield's note.]

770 ff. The havoc made of the building and the furniture is naturally emphasized in encounters of this sort; cp. 997 ff.; Grettisaga, chs. 65, 35 (Intr. xv, xvii); Bjarkarimur iv 12.

777. golde geregnad. Does this imply gold-embroidered covers on the benches? (Falk, R.-L. i 166.)

779. The neuter hit seems to refer to the hall in a general way, without grammatical regard to the gender of any of the nouns that might have been used; see 770-73.

781 f. nymþe liges fæþm/swulge. See 82 f.

783a. niwe geneahhe. See Gloss.; niwe is naturally taken as adj. [Kock L 5.44.4.8: niwe, geneahbe, "(the din arose) in manner strange and strong."]

785. þāra þe of wealle wōþ gehyrdon. As of wealle, in all probability, denotes the standpoint of the subject of gehyrdon (Sievers, Beitr. xii 192; see l. 229), the meaning appears to be that the Danes heard the wailing from the wall(s) of their sleeping apartments. (We might translate: 'through the walls.') Sievers supposed that they had fled in terror to the shore, but this would seem a little far-fetched.

[Tinker (MLN. xxiii 240), who connects of wealle with the object, is enabled to render: "who heard the howling in the house (Heorot)."]

786 ff. gryrelēoð galan Godes andsacan etc. Cries of pain and lamentation denoted by the use of galan and similar terms: 2460 (?); Andr. 1127, 1342, Guðl. 587, etc. Cf. Siev. A.M. § 5.3, Beitr. xxix 314 ff. (Numerous examples are found in Chaucer.) — The infin. phrases are variations of the preceding noun (wōþ). Cp. 221 f., 1431 f., 1516 f.; 728 f., 2756 ff. (MPh. iii 237 f.) — In acc. with infin. constructions after gehýran, gefriġnan we note the tendency to give the acc. of the object the first place; so also 1027 ff., 2022 f., 2773 f. (but see 2484 f., 2694 f.); so after bātan, 68 f. [according to the MS. reading] (but see 2802); after forlātan, 3166.

793 f. nē his lifdagas lēoda ænigum/nytte tealde. Litotes, cf. Intr. lxvi. his refers, of course, to Grendel.

794^b-5. þær genehost brægd/eorl Bēowulfes ealde lāfe; virtually, 'many a man brandished his sword.' The sing. of concrete nouns is often used in a collective sense; thus in connection with manig, ofī, genehost, ġhgesēne, 794 ff., 1065, 1110 ff., 1243 ff., 1288 ff., 2018 f.; also without any such auxiliary word suggesting the collective function, 296 ff., 492 (?), 1067, 1284 ff. Cf. Kock 219, Siev. xxix 569 ff., MPh. iii 249 f.

800. on healfa gehwone hēawan, lit. 'strike on (towards) all sides.'

804. ac hē sigewæpnum forsworen hæfde. Grendel had laid a spell on swords. Cp. Saxo vii 219, where a certain Haquinus is called 'hebetandi carminibus ferri peritus'; Sal. 161 ff. (Cf. Falk L 9.44. 44.) See note on 1523.

810. mōdes myrðe, in accordance with Holthausen's explanation of myrð(u) as 'trouble,' 'affliction' (cp. OHG. merrida), is stylistically preferable to mōdes myr(b)ðe, 'joy of heart,' whether myr(b)ðe be taken as dat. or as gen. (parallel with fýrene; Cl. Hall, Lawrence, MLN. xxv 156: "had accomplished much of the joy of his heart"). Cp. mōdes brecða 171; 164 ff., 474 ff., 591 ff., 2003 ff.

811. hē fāg wið God. See 154 ff.; Intr. lxiii n.3; Anġl. xxxvi 178 f. For the omission of wæs, see 2035, 1559 (?), 2262, 2297, cp. 936; Glossary.

814^b-15^a. wæs gehwæþer ððrum/lifigende lāð, 'each one was hateful to the other while living.' A pointed phrase (involving litotes) of an almost classic ring; cf. Arch. cxxvi 357 & n. 1. See 2564 f., Ma!d. 133.

816 f. wearð . . sweotol, 'became visible.'

833. þæt wæs tācen sweotol, 'that was clearly proved.' (MPh. iii 456; Anġl. xxv 280.)

836. under gēapne hr(ðf). The victor places Grendel's right (2098) arm above the door outside the hall (on some projection perhaps) as high as he can reach. See 926 f., 982 ff.

837-924. Rejoicing of the retainers. Stories of Sigemund and Heremōd.

839 ff. This excursion to Grendel's mere has been declared an unwarranted duplication of the trip preceding Bēowulf's second adventure, 1399 ff.; see Panzer 276 ff. It might as well be called a legitimate expansion of the story. folctogan a high-sounding term like selerādende 51, 1346.

850-52. dēof is pluperf.; siððan, adv. — Grendel's abode is vaguely identified with hell, cp. 756; he is even said to pass into the power of devils, on fēonda ge-weald 808 (in contrast with on Frēan wære, 27). No conscious personification is contained in the expression þær him hel onfēng. Cf. Angl. xxxv 267 f.

862 f. Nē hie hūru winedrihten etc. Note the delicacy of feeling and the author's unshakable respect for kingship.

867^b-915. Summary of songs recited (while the thanes ride slowly), the subjects being Bēowulf, Sigemund, Heremōd. Starting with a lay of praise concerning Bēowulf's exploit, which has just been extolled by the warriors in informal, yet highly eloquent language (856-61), the court poet, well versed in ancient heroic lore, proceeds to recite the adventures of Sigemund, thus raising Bēowulf, as it were, to the rank of pre-eminent Germanic heroes. From indirect discourse the account passes almost imperceptibly to direct statement, and when the Heremōd theme is taken up, we feel like questioning whether Hrōðgār's thane has not been altogether forgotten by the Ags. poet. — We have here a valuable testimony both of the improvisation of lays in connection with great, stirring events and of the circulation of famous short epic poems comparable in scale to The Fight at Finnsburg.

870 ff. Nearly all edd. place a period after gebunden, taking 870^b-71^a as the close of the sentence, "framed a new story, founded upon fact" (Cl. Hall). But it is much to be doubted whether word would have been used to convey such a meaning. (Fat. Ap. 1: ic bysne sang siðgeōmor fand.) The parenthetical clause, according to the punctuation introduced by Rieger (Ric. L., see Zs. 390) and approved by Bugge (Bu. Zs. 203), 'one word found another rightly bound,' contains an apt description of the alliterative verse form. (See also Earle's note.) The est of 871 ('in his turn') goes with brwīlum 867, and both correspond with brwīlum 864 (cp. 2107 ff.); secg takes up the subject of the sentence, cyninges þegn. (Cf. MPb. iii 456.) — The type of the combination word oþer (similarly 652, 2484, 2908, 2985) is a substitute for the repetition of the noun ('grammatical rime'), see note on 440^a. (Kluge, Beitr. ix 427.) Cp. Gnom. Cott. 52: fyrð wið fyrde, fēond wið oðrum.

871^b. secg est ongan. Type E1.

874. wordum wrixlan, here (unlike its use in 366) = 'vary words' (cp. Phoen. 127, Rid. 9.2 f.) in the customary manner of Germanic poetry.

875-900. Sigemund.¹ The cursory, epitomizing report embodies two separate stories, going back, perhaps, to two originally separate lays, viz. 1) Sigemund's wīde sīðas of fierce fighting, especially those undertaken in company with Fitela, 2) his dragon fight.

1) The vague abstract of the former receives full light from the Volsungasaga, chs. 3-8.² Sigmundr, we are told, is the eldest son of King Volsungr, a descendant of Óþinn. His twin sister Signý is married against her will to Siggeirr, king of Gautland. While on a visit at Siggeirr's court, Volsungr and his men are treacherously slain (cp. the Finnsburg legend); his sons are taken prisoners and meet death one after another except Sigmundr, who escapes into the forest. Sigmundr and Signý brood revenge. Seeing that her sons by Siggeirr are lacking in valor and that only a true Volsung son will be able to help in the work of revenge, Signý, impelled by a desperate resolve, disguises herself as a witch and visits her brother in the forest, and when her time comes, she gives birth to a son, who is named Sinfjötli. Ten years old, the boy at his mother's bidding joins Sigmundr (who does not know until the final catastrophe that Sinfjötli is his son) and is trained by him in deeds of strength and hardship. 'In summer they fare far through the woods and kill men to gain booty' (ch. 8); living for a time as werewolves 'they performed many famous deeds in the realm of King Siggeirr.' (Cp. Beow. 883 f., fæbæ ond fyrena 879 [Helgakv. Hund. i 43: firin-verkum (?)].) Finally Sigmundr and Sinfjötli accomplish the revenge by setting fire to Siggeirr's hall.

How far the version known to the author of Beowulf agreed with this part of the Volsungasaga, it is impossible to determine. The fact that Fitela is referred to as Sigemund's nefa only (881), might perhaps be held to betoken Sigemund's own ignorance of their true relation, or it may be attributed to the Christian author's desire to suppress that morally revolting motive. But we do not know, indeed, whether the Anglo-Saxons of that time were at all acquainted with a story answering to the Sigmundr-Signý motive. The form Fitela differs from the established Norse compound name Sinfjötli (whose bearer figures in the Eddas and in *Eiriksmál*³) and from the High German Sintarfizzilo (merely recorded, by the side of Fezzilo, Fizzilo, as a man's name). Also the designation of Sigemund's father as Wæls (897; Sigemund = Walsing 877) differs from his Norse name Volsungr, which latter is presumably the result of confusion, the patronymic form being taken for a proper name. It is possible, though, that Wals itself (used in Walses eafera 897 = Walsing) is a (secondary) 'back formation' inferred from Walsing (Sievers, Zum ags. Vocalismus [1900], p. 22; Boer L 4.113.93).—It should be mentioned that a perplexing OE. poem in the Exeter MS., the so-called First Riddle, has been interpreted by Schofield as a lyric, 'Signý's Lament,' referring to the Sigmund-Signý-Fitela incident, but the evidence is by no means conclusive.¹

2) Sigmund's dragon fight is peculiar to the Beowulf. It naturally suggests the far-famed dragon fight of his still greater son, (ON.) Sigurðr, (MHG.) Sigfrid, which kindled the imagination of the Scandinavians² and was not forgotten by the Germans,³ and which in fact—especially as part of the great Nibelungen cycle—has been celebrated in modern Germanic epic, drama, and music. As Sigmund is called wereccena wīde mārost/ofer werpōde 898, Sigurðr, in the seer's words, is to be 'the greatest man under the sun, and the highest-born of all kings' (Gripispá 7); and the slaying of the dragon brings no little renown to Sigmund (æfter dēaðdæge dōm unlytel 885) just as to his illustrious son ('this great deed will be remembered as long as the world stands,' Volsungasaga, ch. 19). But there are differences between the two stories, quite apart from the greater fulness of detail found in the narrative of Sigurð's exploit. The manner of the fight itself is not the same, Sigmund's deed appearing the more genuinely heroic one. Noteworthy incidents of the Beowulf version are the dissolving of the dragon in its own heat (897) and the carrying away of the hoard in a boat (895).⁴ For points of contact with Bēowulf's and Frotho's dragon fights, see Intr. xxii f.

It is widely held that the dragon fight belongs properly to Sigfrid and not to Sigmund, his father;⁵ yet there is no positive evidence to prove that the Ags. poet was in error when he attributed that exploit to the latter. Sigurðr-Sigfrid may, in fact, have been unknown to him. It is, on the whole, probable that in his allusions to Sigmund as well as to Herc-

⁴ In Guþrúnarkv. ii 16 Sigmundr is represented as a maritime king.

⁵ Thus, according to Goebel, "there seems little doubt that Siegfried's famous deed was transferred to Sigmund when through the latter the legend began to connect Siegfried with the chosen clan of the Volsungs and their special protector, Oðinn." (ÆGPh. xvii 2 f.) Excepting this variation in respect to the name, the Beowulfian account has been thought to contain the oldest form of the legend of Siegfried. (Cf. Goebel, l.c.)

mōd he followed good old Danish tradition,¹ and that at that time no connection had yet been established between the Sigemund (Wælsing) legends and those of Sigfrit and of the Burgundians. Grundtvig's ingenious attempt to read Sigfrīð into the Beowulf episode (Gru., pp. xxxviii f.) rests on violent emendation and interpretation; and the more recent claim of [Söderberg and] Wadstein (The Clermont Runic Casket, 1900) that the figures and runic inscription on the right side of the Franks Casket refer to scenes from the Sigurðr saga has not been substantiated, see Napier, Furnivall Miscellany (1901), pp. 371 ff.; Schück, Studier i nordisk litteratur- och religionshistoria, i (1904), pp. 176 f.² The antiquity of the heroic lore embedded in Beowulf need not be insisted upon anew.

878. þāra þe gumena bearn gearwe ne wiston. Though ne wiston admits of being construed with the genitive (see 681), it is probable that its use here is due mainly to the partitive idea suggested by uncūpes fela, 876. The þāra þe combination regularly agrees with the syntactical requirements of the governing clause,* cf. Delbrück L 6. 13. 2. 682 f.

879. Fitela is merely the follower of Sigemund. So the Norse Sinfjōtli appears in the rôle of a subordinate, not an independent saga figure (Bugge L 4. 84. 200).

880. þonne hēs wulces hwæt secgan wolde. The reference is to deeds done by Sigemund before Fitela joined him. For wulces, see Lang. § 8 n. 1.

885. æfter dēaðdæge dōm unlytel. 'Renown after death' was the ideal hero's chief aim in life. See 1387 ff.; Intr. xlix, lxiii; Angl. xxxvi 173.

887. hordes hyrde. The hoard motive appears here properly connected with the dragon fight. In the Nibelungenlied the winning of the hoard is separated from Sigfrit's slaying of the dragon.

888. āna genēdde. . . A single-handed fight is, of course, especially glorious. Cp. 431, 2541, 2345 ff. (Bēowulf); Saxo ii 39 (Frotho: 'solitarius,' see Par. § 7); Nibel. 89 (Sigfrit: 'aleine ān alle helfe'); Nennius, Historia Britonum § 56 (Arthur: 'ipse solus'); Plutarch, Theseus § 29 (μηδενὸς συμπάχου δεθέρρα).

890-92. According to Norse legend, Sigmundr — an 'Óðinn hero,' like Hermóðr — received a wondrous sword from the great god. See Hyndl. 2 (Par. § 4), Völsungasaga, ch. 3 (a detailed account of Sigmund's obtaining the sword). — The dragon is, as it were, nailed on the wall. — Note the end rime of 890^b: 891^b.

895. selfes dōme; i.e., such treasures — and as many — as he desired. Cp. 2775 f.; 2147. — gehleōd. The spelling eo for o (i.e. ō) after l is occasionally met with (Angl. xxv 272; cf. ZfdPh. iv 215). Was it caused in this case by analogy with (Mercian) bleadan? (Or was the scribe thinking of gebōld?)

897. wyrm hāt ('being hot,' i.e. 'by its own heat') gemealt. (Cp. 3040 f.; 1605 ff., 1666 ff.; Intr. xxii f.) This motive — cp. Seyfridslied 10, 147 — has been enlarged upon (and modified) in the accounts of the dragon fight of Sigurðr-Sigfrít. Cf. L. Polak, Untersuchungen über die Sigfridsagen (Berlin Diss., 1910), pp. 47 f. — Note the w-alliteration in three successive lines. (Intr. lxxi n. 3.)

901-915. This digression on *Heremōd*¹ is to be interpreted in conjunction with a similar one (occurring in Hrōðgār's famous harangue after the second combat), 1709-1722.² The main point of the story referred to in these two allusive passages is that Heremōd was a strong, valiant hero, pre-eminent among his fellows, giving promise of a brilliant career, but subsequently proved a bad ruler, cruel and stingy, and having become a burden to his people, ended miserably. A minor feature, which in the Beowulf itself remains obscure, is connected with certain events preceding his accession (907-13).

Müllenhoff looked upon Heremōd as a mere allegorical personification setting forth the dangers of bere-mōd, i.e. 'warlike disposition.'³ But later studies have shown him to be a definite figure in Danish historical-legendary tradition.⁴ Thus Saxo tells of Olo who was a wonderfully strong and gifted youth, but later showed himself a cruel and unrighteous king, so that twelve generals ('duces'), moved by the distress of their country, plotted against his life and induced Starcatherus to kill the king while alone at the bath (viii 265). This Olo as well as the figure of Olavus, on whom the three goddesses of fate bestowed

'beauty and favor in the eyes of men,' 'the virtue of generosity,' but also 'the vice of niggardliness' (Saxo vi 181), is identical with the Danish king Áli inn frókni,¹ who after a long, vigorous reign was killed by Starkaðr (Ynglingasaga, ch. 25 (29); Skjöldungasaga, ch. 9). In view of the fact, however, that according to the Nornagestspátr (cir. 1300 A.D.) and the Egils Saga ok Ásmundar (14th century) it is King Armóðr that was slain by Starkaðr while bathing, there is good reason to believe (with Bugge) that the name Heremōd applied to this saga figure in Beowulf goes back to true old Danish legend, the names Heremōd (ON. Hermóðr) and Armóðr (Ár-?) being insignificant variations.

Another version of the story (transferred to Lotherus), which is apt to throw light on the hidden meaning of ll. 907-13, occurs in Saxo i 11. (A brief mention in the Annales Ryenses, Par. § 8.5.) Of the two sons of Dan — the fabulous eponymous ancestor of the Danish kings — '*Humblus*² was elected king at his father's death; but [later on] by the malice of ensuing fate . . . he was taken by Lotherus in war, and bought his life by yielding up his crown But Lotherus played the king as insupportably as he had played the soldier, inaugurating his reign straightway with arrogance and crime; for he counted it uprightness to strip all the most eminent of life or goods, and to clear his country of its loyal citizens, thinking all his equals in birth his rivals for the crown. He was soon chastised for his wickedness; for he met his end in an insurrection of his country; which had once bestowed on him his kingdom, and now bereft him of his life.' Putting together the veiled allusion of the last clause ('which had once bestowed on him his kingdom') and Beow. 907 ff., Sievers concluded that Lotherus gained the throne through the support of an active minority of the people which had been from the beginning in favor of his succession and regretted (ærran mælum 907) the turn Danish affairs had taken under the rule of his [weaker] brother.

A faint and confused echo of this narrative has been discovered by Sarrazin (Angl. xix 392 ff.) in the Scondia illustrata of the Swedish chronicler Johannes Messenius (beginning of the 17th century). 'Lotherus igitur Danorum rex' — we are informed — 'ope suorum propter nimiam destitutus tyrannidem, superatusque in Jutiam profugit' He returns from this exile, slays the rival king *Balderus*³ and temporarily regains possession of his kingdom, but loses his life in a war of revenge instigated by Othinus.

Moreover, both in Ags. and Norse genealogies (Par. §§ 1. 1 & 2, 5, 8. 1, cp. 1. 4), Heremōd figures as the father, i.e. predecessor of Scyld(wa) (Skjǫldr), just as Saxo (i 11) represents Scioldus as Lotherus' son and follower on the Danish throne. More precisely, he belonged to an earlier line of kings,¹ and it was after his fall that the Danes endured distress — aldorlēase 15, until the God-sent Scyld inaugurated a new dynasty.

The coupling of Heremōd and Sigemund as heroes of greatest renown springs from a Scandinavian tradition (which may have arisen even before Heremōd was given a place among the Danish kings). This is proved by Hyndluljóð 2 (Par. § 4) and, indirectly, by a comparison of Hákonarmál, l. 38² with Eiríksmál, l. 16³ (Chadwick, The Cult of Othin (1899), p. 51).

In contrast with the Sigemund episode, which is introduced as a pure heroic tale, our author has infused into the Heremōd story a strong spirit of Christian moralization (cf. Angl. xxxv 475, 479 f.), adding besides a touch of sentimental softness (904 f., 907, 909). In both of the passages Heremōd is made to serve as a foil to the exemplary Bēowulf.

898^a. Sē was wreccena. Type C₂, see Est. xxxix 427; or, according to Holthausen (who reads wreccena), A₃.

901. siððan Heremōdes hild sweðrode. For the punctuation, see MPh. iii 457. Sigemund's glory survived that of Heremōd (who in Hyndluljóð is mentioned before Sigmund). It was unrivaled after Heremōd's decline, — sweðrode refers either to his advancing years or (probably) to his lamentable death. (Cp. Grettissaga, ch. 58: 'Grettir was the strongest man ever known in the land, since Ormr Stórólfs-son and Þórálfr Skólmsson left off their trials of strength.' Similarly two heroes, Offa and Alewih, are set against one another in Wids. 35 ff., see the quotation in note on 1931-62.)

A gratuitous transposition of ll. 901-915 (861, 901-915, 862-900, 916 ff.) was proposed by Joseph (L 5.22). (Cf. ten Brink 60.)

902^{b-4}. Hē mid Ēotenum wearð etc. Heremōd, forced to flee the country (cp. 1714), sought refuge in the land of the Ēotan ('Jutes,' see the quotation from Messenius, p. 159), the enemies of the Danes (cf. Intro. to The Fight at Finnsburg), exactly as the rebellious Swedish princes Ēanmund and Ēadgils were sheltered by the hereditary foes of their country, the Geats (Intr. xl). There he was slain (as Ēanmund was in Geatland). His death was brought about by treachery (forlācen 903), but the circumstances are unknown. (Bugge, who reads mid eotenum, points to the murder of Áli (Olo, Armóðr) by Starkaðr, who was sometimes regarded as a jǫtunn.) — on fēonda geweald

904^b-5^a. Hine sorhwylmas/lemede tō lange. Heremōd was unhappy during the greater part of his life (iō lange); first because excluded from the throne and exiled, later because hated by his own people and put to death. The singular of the verb may be explained syntactically, sorh-wylmas being felt to be equal to sorb. Cf. Lang. §§ 25.6, 19.3; also Dietrich, ZfdA. x 332 f., xi 444 ff. Only sporadically do we find the ending -on of the pret. ind. plur. of wk. verbs weakened to -e; cf. E. M. Brown, The Lang. of the Rusbw. Gloss to Matthew, ii (1892), § 38; O. Eger, Dialekt. in den Flexionsverhältnissen der ags. Bedaübersetzung (Leipzig Diss., 1910), § 13.

910 f. þæt þæt ðeodnes bearn geþeōn scolde etc. In accordance with the rule: 'no article before qualifying nounal genitive and noun,' Barnouw (p. 22) would strike out the second þæt, which may very well be a late scribe's addition (cf. Schücking L 5.48.2). But ðeodnes bearn (cp. 888) was perhaps felt to be a compound, see 2059^a and Varr. (Of course, Heremōd is meant, not his son.) — With geþeōn scolde cp. geþeoh tela 1218. — fæderæþelu, 'ancestral (nobility, or) rank.' Cp. Ex. 338 f.: frumbearnes riht . . . ead and æðelo.

OHG. gifag(o) 'content,' MHG. gevage 'satisfied,' 'acceptable'; so Grein², Corrigendum; Siev., ZfdPh. xxi 356; Angl. xxviii 440 f.), — though it would not be impossible to derive a compar. gefægra from gefæge* (see gefēon), 'causing joy' (Bu. 42), or 'cheerful,' 'genial' (B.-T. Suppl.), 'gracious' (cp. meanings of glæd). — hine fyren onwōd. Sin entered Heremōd's heart (Angl. xxxv 128).

922. getrume micle. 924. mægþa hōse. King and queen appear with a train of attendants. A common epic trait. Cf. Cook, JEGPh. v 155; Arch. cxxvi 45.

926. stōd on stapole. The interpretation, 'stood by the (central) pillar' (Heyne¹, see L 9.4.1.48), has been largely discarded, since

Hrōðgār is supposed to stand outside the hall, and such a use of on would be, at least, out of the ordinary. stapol more likely denotes "the steps leading up to the hall, or the landing at the top of the flight" (Miller, Angl. xii 398 f.) or, possibly, "an erection in the open air, standing in the area in front of the hall" (Earle, Hand-Book to Land-Charters [1888], p. 467, see also his note on Beow. 926; Midden-dorff, AE. Flurnamenbuch [1902], pp. 123 f.). Cf. 946 ff. Nū ic, Bēowulf, þec etc. See 1175 f., 1479. The relationship entered into by Hrōðgār and Bēowulf does not signify adoption in the strict legal sense, but implies fatherly friendship and devoted helpfulness respectively, suggesting at any rate the bonds of loyal retainership (see Antiq. § 2). Cf. Chadwick H. A. 374; v. Amira L 9.10.1 § 60. [Scherer L 5.5.480 ff.; Müller L 9.28.19 f.; Rietschel, R.-L. i 38 f.]

983. ofer hēanne hrōf hand scēawedon. They looked over the high roof, i.e. they 'looked up to' or 'in the direction of the high roof, and beheld the hand.' (MPb. iii 256.)

984^b-87^a. The treatment of this passage has not yet reached the stage of finality. Even the commonly accepted form of 984^b, foran æghwylc wæs (advocated by Sievers, ix 138, R. 232, in place of foran ægbwylc [with wæs added to the following l.] as printed by Grein, Heyne, et al.), has been assailed on syntactical grounds by Ries (L 6.12.2.378 f.), who suggests, as alternatives, wæs foran ægbwylc or foran wæs ægbwylc. The retention of the MS. reading steda nægla gebwylc 985^a, 'each of the places of the nails' (Schücking, Chambers), carries no conviction. On the other hand, gebwylc may very well be a thoughtless repetition like bilde of 986. Regarding handsporu 986, it seems that spora, elsewhere a wk. masc., has passed over into the fem. class (cf. Siev. § 278 n. 1). The form egl of the MS. has been taken by many scholars (e.g., Kemble, Grein, Heyne, Sedgfield, Chambers) as a noun, 'spike,' 'talon' (Kemble: 'molestia'), but the only substantiated meanings of egl, egle (the latter being the usual form) are 'awn' ('ail'), 'beard of barley' (B.-T. Suppl.), 'mote' (Luke 6. 41 f.). As to eglu, see T. C. § 25. [Cf. also Aant. 17; Tr.¹ 176-8; Arch. cxv 179.]

991 f. Ðā wæs hāten . . . Heort . . . gefrætwod. The inf. wesan is to be understood in connection with gefrætwod, cf. Aant. 18. The construction of the passive of hātan with a passive inf. looks like a Latinism, see Arch. cxxvi 355. [Chambers places a comma after breppe. He is followed by J. F. Royster, who cites the sentence as an example of 'mixed construction,' — the idea of the 'ordering' or 'causing' giving way to that of the 'completion' of action, see JEGPh. xvii 89 n. 28.] — 992^b. fela þæra wæs. 1002^b-3a. Nō þæt yðe byð/tō befiēonne. The import of the vague þæt is fully cleared up by the context: it is impossible to escape death (fate). A proverbial saying well known in ON. literature; e.g., Saxo viii 295: 'fatis arduum obstarē.' Cp. Iliad vi 488: μοίραν δ' οὐτινὰ φημι πεφυγμένον ἔμμεναι ἀνδρῶν. (Arch. cxv 179 n.)

1003^b. fremme sē þe wille, 'do (or, try) it who will.' (Imperfective function of fremman.) A kind of formula; see 2766^b, 1394^b; note on 603^b.

1004-6. The parallel genitives sāwlberendra, niþða bearna, grundbūendra depend on gearwe stōwe (cp. Hel. 4453); nýde genýdde . . . stōwe 'the place forced (upon him) by necessity' (cp. Chr. [i] 68 f.). No gehwylc or æghwylc need be inserted, since a pronominal subject is easily supplied from the preceding lines (cp. 1290 f.). Cf. Bu. 368 f.; MPh. iii 241, 457; Angl. xxxv 466. [Rie. Zs. 391; Tr.¹ 179; Sed., note.] — The MS. reading gesacan makes bad meter and worse sense. Brett's rendering (MLR. xiv 7): "gain in spite of his striving" is a desperate guess; cf. also B.-T.

1008. swefep æfter symle; i.e., sleeps after the feast of life. See 128, 119; Earle's note; Cook, MLN. ix 237 f. (classical and modern parallels). — The dat. of symbel and the adv. sym(b)le have sometimes been confused.

1011 f. Ne gefrægen ic þā mægþe mārān weorode . . . sēl gebæran. A combination of two types, viz. a) ne býrde ic cýmlícor cēol gegyrwan 38 (1027, 1197, 1842); b) ðā ic wíde gefrægn weorc gebannan 74 (2484, 2694, 2752, 2773). Accordingly, þā is adverb. — sēl gebæran; i.e., they behaved properly, as the occasion required, cp. Finnsh. 38. The reference here is to the etiquette (cp. fægere 1014) or to the splendid appearance of the retainers on the festive occasion (cp. Nibel. 593: sowie wol man dā gebārte).

1018 f. nalles fācenstafas/þēod-Scyldingas þenden fremedon. Unquestionably an allusion to Hrōðulf's treachery in later times. Intr. xxxii.

1022. hiltcumbor. As hilt is normally a st. neut. (occasionally, in the later language, a st. masc. or wk. fem.), a compound hiltcumbor cannot well be admitted. (Siev. xxxvi 420.) The banner seems to have been fastened to a staff with a sort of handle at its lower end. (Cp. the designation hæstmēce, 1457.) That the very common bilde- should have been misspelt hilt-, it is difficult to believe.

1023 f. manige gesāwon practically serves the same purpose as a gefrægn- formula of transition (MPb. iii 244), enlivening the plain enumeration and signaling the value of the fourth present. This consideration precludes the punctuation mark (colon, semicolon, comma) placed after sweord by several edd. (thus Holthausen, Schücking, Sedgfield). Cf. Aant. 18.

1024^b-25^a. Bēowulf geþah/ful on flette. Bēowulf empties the cup and expresses his thanks, no doubt in obedience to well-regulated courtly custom. See 628.

1025^b-26. See 1048, 1901 f., 2995 f. A form scotenum, though not impossible in the later language (Siev. § 277 n. 1), would be objectionable on metrical grounds. Besides, no instance of scota seems to be recorded. (gescota, Wr.-Wü., Ag. & OE. Vocab. i 15.1, 207.7.)

1028. gummanna fela. Litotes; cf. MPb. iii 248.

1031. The exact nature of a wala, which seems to be an ornamental as well as useful part of the helmet, is not known. Stjerna (2 f.) guessed that "there was an inner head-covering of cloth, leather or the like . . . and that this was fastened to an outer convex plate" (wala). Cf. Rie. Zs. 392-4; Bu. 369; Falk L 9.44.158.

1032. fēla lāf, 'that which is left after the files have done their work.' A notable kenning for 'sword,' see Gloss.: lāf. A form fēl (by the side of fēol, fil) may well have existed (Bülb. § 199; see Lang. § 10.7). But it is equally possible that an earlier MS. had feoia (= fēola), which by a thoughtless scribe was taken for feola 'much' and normalized to fela. This might also account for the plur. meabton. — With 1032 ff. cp. 1453 f.

1036. on flet teôn. The horses are led directly into the hall. A custom frequently mentioned in ballads and romances; see Gummere G.O. 105, Earle's note.

1053 ff. Hrōðgār, who feels responsible for the safety of his guests, compounds for the loss of a man by the payment of wergild.

1056-62. God and mōd, 1056 f. constitute the dual subject; see note on 572 f. The apparent subordination of fate to God (Intr. xlix) does not justify us in recognizing in this passage the influence of Boethius' Consolation of Philosophy (as Earle does, see his note; H. F. Stewart, Boethius, an Essay [1891], pp. 163 ff.). Nor do we need to follow the earlier dissecting critics who condemned this passage as an interpolation. It is merely one of those interspersed reflections in which the author of the poem delighted. It enjoins rational trust in the governance of the Almighty and readiness to accept whatever may be in store for us, be it good or evil. (Cf. Angl. xxxv 118.) With 1060-62 cp. Gnom. Cott. 11 f.: gomol [bið] snoterost, / fyrngēarum frōd, sē þe ær feala gebīdeð. [The adversative meaning 'yet' proposed, though "very tentatively," for Forþan 1059 (M. Daunt, MLR. xiii 478) does not improve the context.]

1064. fore Healfdenes hildewisan, 'in the presence of Healfdene's battle-leader,' i.e. of Hrōðgār. We may assume that the title appertaining to Hrōðgār during his father's reign is here retained, in violation of chronology. For the use of fore, see 1215, Wids. 55, 104. Cf. Angl. xxviii 449 n. 3. [Cf. Aant. 18 ("louder onzin"); ten Brink 68; Tr.¹ 183: hildewisan = -wīsum, dat. plur.]

1066-70. Scholars are not at all agreed on the punctuation and construction of these lines. A detailed survey of the various modes of interpretation has been offered by Green (LF. 4.27). See also Varr.

According to the punctuation here adopted the lines announcing the recital of the Finn story, [be] Finnes easerum, ðā hīe se fār begeat, indicate, by a characteristic anticipation, the final triumph of the Danes over their enemies, see 1146 f.: Swylice . . . Finn eft begeat / sweordbealo, 1151 ff. The clause ðā hīe se fār begeat 1068^b certainly looks like the termination of a sentence, cp. 1291^b, 2872^b, 2883^b, 2230^b. — healgamen 1066, 'entertainment,' hence 'entertaining tale'; with ðonne 1066 cp. 880. gid oft wrecen 1065^b, 'many a song was recited' (cf. Siev. xxix 571; note on 794^b-5); whereupon a definite specimen of the scop's repertory is exhibited in summary and paraphrase. It may seem that the author passes very abruptly to the new theme, leaving unexpressed the thought: 'and thus he sang.' However, this difficulty vanishes, if the phrase of 1065^b is understood in a more general sense: 'there was plenty of entertainment by the minstrel' (or if gid is interpreted as part or 'fit' of a lay). The insertion of be in 1068: [be] Finnes eaferum, 'about Finn's men' or 'about Finn and his men' (cp. Hröslingas 2960, eaforum Ecgwelan 1710; Sat. 63 (?); Aant. 26) is on the whole more natural than the change to eaferan (a second object of mānan), though the latter would be quite possible stylistically (Angl. xxviii 443).

The reading of Schücking (xxxix 106, ed.), Holthausen⁵, who make the Episode (direct quotation) begin at 1071, and who — virtually returning to the practice of the earliest edd. — place a comma after begeat, thus considering 1069–70 the continuation of the subordinate clause introduced by ðā 1068, and taking bales as nom. sing., is incompatible with the facts of the story, since it is the Danes, not the Frisians, who are overtaken by the sudden attack (fār) which leads to Hnæf's death.

Dispensing with an emendation in 1068, Etmüller, Grein, and others mark the beginning of the Episode at Finnes eaferum. Moreover, Grein, Bugge (29), Green construe bales as acc. plur. (parallel with biē), thus arriving at the rendering: 'By Finn's men — when onset befell them, the heroes of the Half-Danes — Hnæf was fated to fall.' See Green, l.c., also L 6.8.5; cf. Kock² 109. This must be admitted to be a highly satisfactory interpretation, provided it can be justified on syntactical and stylistic grounds. However, it is still a question whether jeallan could be construed with a dative of personal agency, especially as this intrans. verb is elsewhere used absolutely (or with an expression denoting instrumentality in a more indirect way, see 2834 f., cp. 2902, Mald. 71). Besides, the opening of the sentence by such heavy, complex phraseology (1068–69^a) is decidedly harsh, and the use of the so-called proleptic pronoun hie (cf. MPh. iii 255; Intr. lxvi) in this context is felt to be unnatural. It may be that absolute certainty is not within reach.

1074^a. bearnum ond brōðrum. Generic plural: 'son and brother'; see 565. Möller (59) thought the combination an archaic idiom derived from the (elliptic) 'dvandva dual' (cf. note on 2002); but see Osthoff, IF. xx 204 f.

1074^b. hie on gebyrd hruron. Cp. 2570. A variant, but hardly convincing rendering of on gebyrd is 'in succession,' 'one after another' (Aant. 18; cf. B.-T. Suppl.).

1077. syððan morgen cōm. This may or may not mean the first morning after the night attack; see Finnsb. 41.

1082–85^a. The purport of these lines as commonly understood is: 'he could be successful neither in the offensive nor in the defensive.' gefeohtan does not mean here (as might be expected): 'obtain by fighting'; wig serves as 'cognate accus.' (Cf. Lorz 50; JEGPh. xiv 548.) As to forþringan, the meaning 'rescue' generally assigned to it is questionable — it would indeed fit oðþringan —; the only prose instance of the verb, Ben. R. (ed. Schröder, in Gr.-Wü., Bibl. d. ags. Prosa iii) 115.7 (cp. Ormulum 6169), would favor the sense ‘thrust aside,’ ‘crush.’ Carleton Brown (MLN. xxxiv 181 ff.) suggests the change of ðegne to ðegna; thus the object of forþringan (‘crush’) would be ‘the remnant of the thanes of the prince,’ wēalāfe referring in 1084 as well as in 1098 to the Danish party. — (Met. Bt. 1.22: ne meabte þā sēo wēalāf wīge forstandan/Gotan mid gūðe. . .) — The stress laid by the poet on the weakening of the Frisian forces (cp. 1080 f.) attests his desire to exalt the valor and success of the Danes. (Cf. Lawrence, Publ. MLAss. xxx 403.) [Moore, JEGPh. xviii 208 f., like Brown, understands forþringan as ‘put down,’ but takes þēodnes ðegne as variation of Hengeste and considers 1084 semi-parenthetical.]

1085^b. hig, i.e. the Frisians; so hīe, 1086^a.

1087^b-88. hīe, i.e. the Danes. It is reasonable to believe that the Danes and Frisians are to be entertained in one and the same hall, a different one from that wrecked by the fight; hence eal 1086 does not imply the exclusion of the Frisians. (Cp. Vǫlsungasaga, ch. 11: skipa bāþir konungar eina hǫll.)

1097. unflitme is unexplained. It may be connected with flitan ‘contend,’ cp. unbefliten ‘uncontested’; elne unflitme: ‘with undisputed zeal.’ It has been held that the instr. elne has the force of an intensive adverb, ‘much,’ ‘very,’ (and that unflitme is an adv. form), which is but adding another guess. Kock² 109 proposes elne, unflitme: ‘strongly and indisputably.’ No light is obtained from the equally obscure unblitme 1129. [Grienb. 748 would translate ‘firmly’ or ‘inviolably,’ deriving unflitme from flēotan ‘float.’]

1098. weotena dōme. A noteworthy allusion to the authority of the king’s advisory council. Cp. Jul. 98: ofer witenena dōm. King Ælfred undertook the codification of the laws ‘mid mīnra witenena geseabte,’ Ælfr. Laws, Introd. 49.9. Cf. F. Purlitz, König u. Witenagemot bei den Angelsachsen, Leipzig Diss., 1892; F. Liebermann, The National Assembly in the Anglo-Saxon Period, Halle a.S., 1913.

1099^b. þæt, ‘upon condition that.’ (Angl. xxviii 444.)

1101 f. nē . . . æfre gemænden etc., ‘nor . . . ever mention [the fact] although they followed . . .’ — banan. Whether Finn himself slew Hnæf we do not know; see note on 1968. — Making peace with the slayers of one’s lord was entirely contrary to the Germanic code of honor. Cp. OE. Chron. A.D. 755 (‘Cynewulf and Cyneheard’): Onð þā cūædon hīe þæt him nænig mæg lēofra nære þonne biera blāford, onð hīe næfre his banan folgian noldon.

1104^a. þonne, adversative, ‘on the other hand.’ (Angl. xxviii 444.)

1106^b remains problematical, see Varr. The reading sēðan (JEGPh. viii 255, cf. Lang. § 24, p. xci, n. 4) would mean ‘declare the truth,’ ‘settle’; cp. scýran 1939; Antiq. § 6. Kock² 109 argues for the existence of a wk. verb syðsan (rel. to sōðsan), ‘atone,’ ‘clear.’

1107-8^a. Ād (MS. að) was geæfned, ond icge gold/āhæfen of horde. Why is gold fetched from the hoard? Presumably the reference is to precious objects to be placed on the funeral pile — cp. 1111 f., 3138 ff., perhaps 3134 f.; 3163 ff.; 36 ff.; Par. § 7: Saxo viii 264 —, which points to ād as the proper reading; see also 1110: Æt þām āde. (If āð were meant, we should expect the plural, cp. 1097.) [Lawrence, Publ. MLAss. xxx 406 suggests that Finn intended to reward his warriors with presents of gold. — The payment of wergild seems out of the question.] — icge is entirely obscure; see Varr., B.-T. One of many possibilities is to explain it as a corruption of the adj. æce found once in the runic inscription of the Isle of Wight sword, which perhaps means 'one's own' (Hempl, Publ. MLAss. xviii 95 ff.); æce gold = 'aurum domesticum'; JEGPh. viii 256.

1109^a. betst beadorinca, i.e. Hnæf. — 1109^b. wæs on bælgearu, 'was ready to be placed on the funeral pile.'

1116. bānfatu bærnan, ond on bælgdôn. The same hysteron proteron in 2126. Evidently the purpose, or the result, of the action was uppermost in the author's mind.

1117^b-18. Ides gnornode/geðmrode giddum. The song of lament by Hildeburh is in keeping with primitive custom. See 3150 ff., 2446 f. Cf. Gummere L 4.121.1.222; Schücking L 4.126.1.7 ff. (The reading gūðhring or the interpretation of -rinc as -bring (so Holt-hausen; cp. atspranc 1121), 'loud lamentation,' would add the wailing of a chorus as a kind of refrain; cp. Iliad xxiv 719 ff.) Gūðrinc āstāh; i.e., the warrior was placed on the funeral pile. Cf. Bu. Tid. 50 f.; Sarrazin, Beitr. xi 530. [Grimm L 9.2.262: 'the warrior's spirit rose into the air.']

1120. hlynode for hlāwe. Does blāw denote the place where the mound is to be built, or an old mound which is to be used again? See 2241 ff., 2802 ff., 3156 ff.

1121 f. bengeato burston, ðonne blōd ætspranc,/lāðbite lices. This seems to be an accurate description of what might easily happen during the initial stage of the heating of the bodies by the funeral fire; cf. JEGPh. xiv 549. lāðbite is parallel with bengeato.

1125 ff. The Frisian warriors — presumably men who had been summoned by Finn in preparation for his encounter with the Danes — return to their homes in the country (bēaburb is a high-sounding epic term that should not be pressed), whilst Hengest stays with Finn in Finnes burb (where the latter is afterwards slain: æt his selfes hām 1147). There is no basis for the inference that Finnes burb (see Finnsb. 36) lies outside of Friesland proper. — Frýsland . . . , bāmas ond bēaburb is one of the favorite paratactic constructions (Lawrence, Publ. MLAss. xxx 402 n. 17).

1128. wælfagne winter. The unique epithet of winter has been surmised to mean 'slaughter-stained' or 'deadly hostile,' 'forbidding,' or (reading wælfagne) 'hostile to moving waters' (cp. 1610, 1132 f.).

Could wālfūg mean 'marked by troubled (orig. 'battling') waters' (see 1131^b-32^a)? Note scūrfūb winter, 'stormy winter' (M. Förster, St. Eph. 1 172). Quite possibly wālfūg is nothing but a back-formation from wālfāhð.

1129^a. [ea] unhlitme. The puzzling unhlitme may be an adverb related to blytm 'lot' (3126): 'very unhappily' (?). B.-T., Griemb. 749: unblytm 'ill-sharing,' 'misfortune'; B.-T.: 'and his lot was not a happy one.'

1129^b-30. eard gemunde, /pēah þe hē meachte etc.; i.e., he thought longingly of his home, if . . . [speculating whether . . ., wishing for a chance to sail]. See the parallel lines, 1138^b-40. Cf. Beibl. xxii 373 f. Of course, a somewhat smoother text could be obtained by the insertion of ne before meachte.

1134-36^a. swā nū gýt dēð. A trivial statement of a matter-of-course fact (cp. 1058). dēð refers to ōper gēar, i.e. spring; weder, with its preceding relative clause (1135), is amplifying variation of the implied subject of dēð. The bright spring 'weathers' always observe (hold to) the proper time; cp. 1610 f. [Boer, ZfdA. xlvii 138, Schücking xxxix 106 understand 1134^b with reference to 1129 ff.: 'as those people do (or, as is the case with those) who watch for the coming of spring.' Similarly Thorpe, Grein, Arnold, Sedgefield.]

1137 ff. fundode, 'he was anxious to go.' [Lawrence, l.c. 421 n. 2: "he hastened."'] Whether Hengest actually sailed is not clear. If he did, it was primarily for the sake of furthering his plans for revenge.

1141. þæt hē Eotena bearn inne gemunde. The adv. inne, 'inside,' 'within' (cp. breðer inne wēoll 2113), in combination with gemunde signifies 'in the bottom of his heart'; gemunan, by concretion, means 'show one's remembrance by deeds.' Kock L 6.13.1.35 would connect inne with þæt (= þe), 'in which.'

1142-44. A passage that has received most divergent comments. him . . . on bearm dyde, which has been sometimes rendered by 'plunged into his bosom' (killing him) (so Kemble, Ettmüller, Grein, cf. Heinzel, Anz.fdA. x 227), very likely means 'placed on his lap,' i.e., gave to him as a present; cp. 2194, 2404; also Gnom. Cott. 25: swæord sceal on bearme.—The reading Hūn (nom.) Lāfing (acc., name of sword) is less acceptable than Hūnlāfing, meaning 'son of Hūnlāf,' i.e. quite possibly, nephew of Gūslāf and Ōslāf, see Intro. to The Fight at Finnsburg.—The conjectural worodrædenne (an unknown word; according to Bugge's interpretation: 'he did not refuse retainership,' i.e. he agreed to become Finn's liegeman [by accepting from Hūn, one of Finn's followers, the sword Lāfing]) has been very generally rejected. worodræden has been variously explained as law, way, rule, or custom, of the world, implying such diverse ideas as 'death,' 'fate,' 'revenge,' 'duty,' 'sanctity of oath.' (E.g., Huchon: "aussi lui ne recula-t-il pas devant la destinée"; Cl. Hall: "he did not run counter to the way of the world," i.e. 'he fell into temptation'; Ayres: "he did not thus prove recreant to his duty"; Schücking: "without running counter to the law of the world," i.e. 'without violating his oaths.') More to the point seems the sense 'condition,' 'stipulation,' the rather redundant worold- referring vaguely to something which is in accordance with the ordinary course of life (cp., e.g., woruld māgas, Gen. 2178). As to forwyrnan, it is regularly used with the dat. of the person (expressed or, as in this case, implied) and the gen. of the thing asked for or insisted upon [or a þæt-clause]. Accordingly the following rendering is considered plausible: 'Under these circumstances (or, in this frame of mind) he did not refuse [him, i.e. Hūnlāfing] the condition, when Hūnlāfing placed the battle-flame (or : Battle-Flame), the best of swords, on his lap.' In other words, Hengest is presented with a famous sword (which has wrought havoc in the fight against the Frisians, 1145) with the stipulation [we now supply by conjecture:] that the vengeance he is brooding over is to be carried into execution. Hengest accepts and keeps his word. (Cf. JEGPb. xiv 547.) [Cf. Ric. Zs. 396 ff.; Heinzel, Anz.fda. x 226 f.; Bu. 32 ff.; Aant. 20 f.; Shipley L. 6.8.4.32; Tr. F. 25 f., Bonn. 1146 f. Swylce ferhðfreca Fin eft begeat/sweordbealo slīðen. Swylce, "likewise," seems to be used with reference to the former destructive work of Hūnlāfing's gift (according to Bugge, with reference to the slaying of Hnæf); eft, 'in his turn.'

1148 ff. siþðan grimne gripe etc. We may imagine that an attack on the Frisians was being planned by Hengest. But the fight broke out prematurely when Gūðlāf and Ōslāf, losing their temper (1150^b-51^a), upbraided the Frisians for the treacherous onset (grimne gripe 1148, i.e. the Finnsburg Fight) and their resultant humiliation. (Cf. Bu. 36.) Both sorge and grimne gripe are the objects of māndon.

1159-1250. Further entertainment, Wealhþēow taking a leading part.

1163 ff. The first set of hypermetrical lines; cf. Intr. lxxi.

1164 f. þā gýt wæs hiera sib ætgædere etc. Hint at Hrōðulf's disloyalty. See 1018 f., 1180 ff., 1228 ff.

1165 ff. It is very doubtful whether Unferð's presence is mentioned here because he was regarded as Wealhþēow's antagonist who incited Hrōðulf to treachery (Olrík i 25 ff., cf. Scherer L. 5.5.482). Perhaps the poet merely wished to complete the picture of the scene in the hall.

1167 f. þeah þe hē his māgum nære/ārfæst etc. Litotes; see 587 f. [Cf. also Lawrence, MLN. xxv 157.]

1171. spræc. Cf. Lang. § 7.1.

1174. nēan ond feorran þū nū hafast. 'You have them (i.e. gifts) now from near and far' (cp. 2869 f.) is not a very satisfactory version. Probably at least one line has dropped out either before or after 1174. Cf. Varr.

1175. Mē man sægde. The remark may seem surprising, since the queen did not need to be told about the 'adoption' of Bēowulf (946 ff.), having been present at the king's speech. But it is entirely natural to suppose that the author, perhaps a little thoughtlessly, employed a variety of the gefrægn- formula, thereby securing a slight stylistic advantage. (MPb. iii 244.)

1177 f. brūc . . . manigra mēdo, 'make use of many rewards,' i.e. 'dispense many gifts.' Cp. mēdgebo, Hel. (MS. M) 1200.

1193 ff. wunden gold (distinguished from brād gold 3105, fāted gold, fātgold) probably refers to earm[h]rēade twā, the term hringas 1195^a being another variation of it. (Cf. MPb. iii 242 f.) The hrægl is called brēostge wādu, 1211. The great collar, healsbēaga mæst, is called bring, 1202, bēag, 1211.

1197-1201. The allusion to Hāma and Eormenric, though very much discussed, is only imperfectly understood.¹

Ermanaric, the great and powerful king of the East Goths, who, on the disastrous inroad of the Huns, died by his own hands (cir. 375 A.D.), became in heroic poetry the type of a ferocious, covetous, and treacherous tyrant. (Thus Deor 23: grim cyning, 22: wylfenne gepōbt, Wids. 9: wrāpes wærlogan.) He causes the fair Swanhild to be trodden to death by horses and his son (cp. Wids. 124: Freoþeric?) to be hanged at the instigation of his evil counselor, (ON.) Bikki (Wids. 115: Becca); he slays his nephews, the (Ger.) Harlunge (Wids. 112: Herelingas); and — in the singularly unhistorical fashion of the later tradition — wars upon and oppresses Theodoric, king of the East Goths, the celebrated Dietrich von Bern of German legend. Great is the fame of his immense treasure (see, e.g., Saxo viii 278), which in a MHG. epic² is stated to include the Harlung's gold.

Hāma (MHG. Heime), usually met with in the company of Widia (or Wudga, MHG. Witege), plays a somewhat dubious part in the MHG. epics of the Theodoric cycle as a follower now of Theodoric (Dietrich) and then again of the latter's enemy Ermanaric (Ermenrich). Whether his character was originally conceived as that of a traitor or rather that of an exile, adventurer, and outlaw,³ is a mooted question.

A more or less complete knowledge of these legends among the Anglo-Saxons is to be inferred from allusions and mention of names (Deor 21 ff., Wids. 7 ff., 18, 88 ff., 111 ff.).¹

As to the wonderfully precious Brōsinga mene,² we should naturally believe it to be the same as the ON. Brisinga men, which figures as the necklace of Freyja in the Elder Edda (Þrymskviða) and elsewhere. Reading between the lines of the Beowulf passage, we judge that Hāma had robbed Eormenric of the famous collar. As Ermenrich had come into possession of the Harlungs' gold (see above), it has been concluded that the Brisinga mene originally belonged to the Harlung brothers, whom (late) tradition localized in Breisach on the Rhine ('castellum vocabulo Brisahc,'³ not far from Freiburg). (In other words, the Harlungs, OE. Herelingas = Brisingas.) Upon this unsafe basis Müllenhoff reared an elaborate structure of a primitive sun myth about Frija's necklace and the heavenly twins (Harlungs), which, however, compels admiration rather than acceptance.⁴

The nearest parallel to the Beowulf allusion has been found in the Þidrekssaga,⁵ which relates that Heimir was forced to flee from the enmity of Erminríkr (ch. 288), and that later he entered a monastery, bringing with him his armor and weapons as well as ten pounds in gold, silver, and costly things (ch. 429). The latter feature looks like a further step in the Christianization of the legend which is seen in its initial stage in Beowulf, l. 1201. Probably the expression gecēas ēcne ræd implies that Hāma became a good Christian and that he died as such.⁶ The 'bright city' to which he carried the treasure (= the monastery of the Þidrekssaga), is possibly hinted at in Wids., l. 129 (see above),⁷ but the details of the original story are lost beyond recovery.

1200^a. Neither 'jewel' nor 'ornamental casket' seems to be the proper rendering of sincfæt. It is more likely to signify 'precious setting,' cp. Phoen. 303; sigle ond sincfæt (sing. understood in a collective sense), 'precious gems in fine settings.' (JEGPb. vi 194.) [Cf. also Schü. Bd. 88.]

1200^b-1^a. searonīðas flēah/Eormenrices. In Hildebr. 18 we are told (in accordance with earlier tradition) that Hiltibrant (with Dietrich) — flōb . . . Ōtachres nīd, 'fled from the enmity of Odoacer.'

1202-14^a. The first of the allusions to Hygelāc's fateful expedition. See Intr. xxxix f., liv.

1202. þone hring hæfde Higelāc etc. The apparent discrepancy between this statement and a later passage, 2172 ff., where Bēowulf presents to Hygd the necklace bestowed upon him by Wealhþēow, may be explained in two ways. Either Hygd gave the necklace to her husband before he set out on his raid, or the poet entirely forgot his earlier account (1202 ff.), when he came to tell of the presentation to Hygd (2172 ff.). The second alternative is the more probable one, especially if we suppose that at an earlier stage of his work the author had not yet thought at all of queen Hygd; cf. Intr. cviii f. (JEGPh. vi 194.)

1213^b-14^a. Gēata lēode/hrēawic hēoldon. Their bodies covered the battlefield. Cp. Jud. 322: hīe on swaðe reston, Ex. 590 f.: werig-ēnd lāgon/on dēaðstede; also blimbed healdan, Beow. 3034. (Æneid x 741: 'eadem inox arva tenebis.')

1214^b. Cosijn's brilliant emendation healsbēge (= -bēage) onfēng (or Sedgfield's tentatively mentioned improvement, heals bēge onfēng) is not needed. Why not assume that swēg signifies the applause that accompanies the bestowal of the wonderful gifts?

1219^b-20 and 1226^b-27. The queen, anticipating trouble after Hrōðgār's death, entreats Bēowulf to act as protector of her sons, especially of Hrēðric, the elder one and heir presumptive. Cf. Intr. xxxii.

(Gummere: "I pray for thee rich possessions.") Others have interpreted the clause as an allusion to the gifts just bestowed on Bēowulf or to future rewards (cp. 1220).

1231^a. druncne is used attributively.

1238. unrīm eorla; i. e., Danes. The Geat guests are assigned other quarters, see 1300 f.

1240. Bēorscealca sum. 'Many a one of the beer-drinkers.' See Gloss.: sum. It is true, only one man is actually killed, but the fate was, as it were, hanging over them all; cp. 1235: eorla manegum; 713. (Cf. MPh. iii 457.) The meaning 'a certain one' could be vindicated only if fūs ond fāge be declared the 'psychological predicate,' which is rather unlikely.

1248^b. (gē æt hām gē on herge,) gē gehwæper þāra, 'and each of them,' i.e. 'in either case.' The third gē ('and that') is no more objectionable than the third nē in Institutes of Polity § 9: nē æt hām nē on sīðe nē on ænigre stōwe. (JEGPh. vi 194 f.) See also Beow. 584.

1251-1320. Attack by Grendel's mother.

1257. lange þræge. An exaggeration which is not borne out by the story.

1260. sē þe, instead of sēo þe, applied to Grendel's mother just as in 1497, or bē, instead of bēo, in 1392, 1394. (See also 1344, 1887, 2421, 2685.) That it was the author, not a scribe, who at times lost sight of her sex, is to be inferred from the equally inaccurate appellation sinnigne secg 1379 (mibtig mānscaba 1339, gryrelicne grundhyrde 2136). We are reminded of Par. Lost i 423 f.: 'For spirits when they please Can either sex assume, or both.' (On the use of belrūne, see note on 163. Cp. the Go. transl., Mat. 9.33: usdribans warþ unbulþō.) Certainly, we cannot regard such masc. designations as evidence of an earlier version in which the hero killed Grendel himself in the cave, or of an old variant of the contest with Grendel which was subsequently worked into a story of the encounter with the mother. [Cf. Schneider L 4.135; ten Brink 92 ff., 110; Boer 66 ff.; Berendsohn L 4.141.1. 14 ff.]

1261^b-76^a. Recapitulation; see Intr. cix. On the descent of the Grendel race from Cain, see note on 106 ff.

1282 ff. The inserted remark that Grendel's mother is less dangerous than Grendel in as much as she is a woman, seems at variance with the facts, for the second fight is far more difficult for Bēowulf than the first, although he is well armed. It is evidently to be explained as an endeavor to discredit the un-biblical notion of a woman's superiority.

1290 f. helm ne gemunde etc. An indefinite subject, 'any one,' 'the one in question' is understood. Cf. Lang. § 25.4.

1302^b-3^a. under heolfre . . . folme, 'the hand covered with blood' (blōdge beadufoleme 990). Cf. note on 122 f.

1303^b-4^a. The addition of geworden emphasizes the fact that a change has taken place (cearu wæs geniwod).

1304^b-6^a. frēonda fēorum refers primarily to Grendel and Æsc-here; the two parties involved (cp. on bā healfa) are the Grendel race and the Danes with their guests.

1306^b-9. þā wæs . . . cyning . . . on hrēon mōde, / syðþan etc. On the stylistic features of this passage, see Intr. lviii, lix n. 4. Cp. OS. Gen. 84 f.: thes warō Adamas bugi . . . an sorogun, thuo bē wissa is sunu dōðan.

1312. As to (eorla) sum, see 314.

1314. wille. For the change of tense, see Lang. § 25.6.

1321-1398. Conversation between Hrōðgār and Bēowulf.

1323^b. Dēad is Æschere. Type Dx, see T.C. § 20. (Cp. Mald. 69.) Child, MLN. xxi 199 suggested the possibility of an original Scand. half-line: daupr es Askar[r]. (?) A notable stylistic parallel is Hildebr. 44^a: tōt ist Hiltibrant.

1331. ic ne wāt hwæder (atol æse wlandc efsiðas tēah). It might be urged, in defense of a literal interpretation, that Hrōðgār, as a matter of fact, did not know the abode of Grendel's mother quite accurately. But it is more important to observe that the phrase is suggestive of formula-like expressions and that, in addition, a general statement of this kind is not altogether unsuited, since the allusion is to the 'uncanny' dwelling-place of the mysterious ellorgæstas; cp. 162 f. (MPb. iii 246.) [Möller 136, ten Brink 96, Heinzel, Anz.f.d.A. xv 173, 190: hwæper 'which one of the two'; on the other hand, see, e.g., Bu. 93, Aant. 22: 'whither.']

1336 f. forþan hē tō lange etc. A recapitulation and an explanation which sounds almost apologetic.

1340-43^a. feor, i.e. (going) far (in accomplishing her purpose). The phrase fæhðe stælan (cp. Gen. 1351 f.), in all probability, denotes 'avenge hostility,' 'retaliate' (in the prosecution of a feud), cf. Kock 229 ff. There appears to be no warrant for the meaning 'institute,' 'carry on' attributed to stælan (thus, e.g., Aant. 23). hreþerbealo hearde could be regarded as acc., parallel with fæhbæ, but this would result in a rather unnatural breaking up of the context (1340-44). Also the construction of grēoteþ with hreþerbealo hearde as object would be awkward and questionable. We may venture to take the combination as a loosely connected, semi-exclamatory noun phrase, cp. 936, 2035. — 1342. æfter sincgyfan. Æschere, who occupied an exalted position, receives a title fit for a king.

1351^b. ððer earmsceapen. Type C2: $\times \times \text{—} | \text{—} \times$.

1357 ff. Description of Grendel's abode. Read in the light of the corresponding version of the Grettissaga (Intr. xv, cf. xiv n. 2), the outlines of the scenery are well understood — a pool surrounded by cliffs and overhung with trees, a waterfall descending into it, and a large cave under the fall. The pool is situated in a dreary fen-district, mōras, fen ond fæsten (103 f., etc.) — a feature not improbably introduced in England. (See also note on 103 f. It has been suggested by Lawrence [see infra] 229 f. that the localization in the desolate moors was added in connection with Grendel's descent from the exiled tribe of Cain; cp. 1265.) That Grendel lives in the sea, or in a pool connected with the sea, or in an "almost land-locked arm of the sea" (Cl. Hall, p. 5; cf. Sarrazin, Est. xlii 7 f., who recognized this very feature in the Roskilde bay), cannot be conceded. It certainly seems that the nicras and similar creatures (1425 ff., nicorhūsa fela 1411) have been brought in chiefly for epic elaboration without regard for absolute consistency. (See also note on 1428 f.) — It should be added that manifestly conceptions of the Christian hell have entered into the picture as drawn by the poet. The moors and wastes, mists and darkness, the cliffs, the bottomless deep (cp. 1366 f.), the loathsome wyrmas (1430) can all be traced in early accounts of hell, including Aps. religious literature. (See also notes on 1365 f., 850-52.) Especially close is the relation between this Beowulfian scenery and that described in the last portion of the 17th Blickling Homily which is based on a Visio Pauli. Cp. Blickl. Hom. 209. 29 ff.: Sanctus Paulus wæs gesēonde on norðanweardne pisne middangeard, þær ealle watero niðer gewitað, and hē þær geseab ofer ðæm watere sumne hārne stān; and wæron norð of ðæm stāne āwexene swiðe-brimige bearwas, and ðær wæron þýstro genipu, and under þæm stāne wæs nicera eardung and wearga, on ðæm isgean bearwum It is hardly going too far to attribute the remarkable agreement to the use of the same or a very similar source. (See Lawrence, Publ. MLAss. xxvii 208-45; Sarrazin, Est. xlii 4 ff.; Angl. xxxvi 185-87; Schū. Bd. 60 ff.; Earle's note [parallels]; Brooke L 4.6.1.45 [cave under the sea]; Cook L 5.29.3.) [A fine picture of the waterfall 'Godafoss,' in the Skjalfandafjot river, Iceland, which has been traditionally associated with Grettir's exploit, Grettissaga, ch. 66, may be found in P. Herrmann's translation of the Grettissaga (Thule, No. 5, Jena, 1913), opposite p. 174.]

1359-61. ðær fyrgenstrēam/under nassa genipu niþer gewiteð,/fild under foldan. Lawrence, l.c. 212, thinks that fyrgenstrēam signifies a waterfall, and that nassa genipu may be "the fine spray thrown out by the fall in its descent, and blown about over the windy nesses." But nassa genipu might as well denote the cliffs with the overhanging trees darkening the water, and foldan, which is naturally to be regarded as parallel with it, might also refer to the rocky ground, or cliffs. See Gloss.: under, i 2. (Cf. Lawrence 213.)

1363. hrinde (bearwas). The epithet is eminently suitable symbolically; cp. brimige bearwas, Blickl. Hom. 209.32, on ðæm isgean bearwum, ib. 35. (See Intr. lxi.) It is not to be inferred that Bēowulf found the trees covered with hoar-frost. He would not have sailed for Denmark in winter (see 1130 ff.).

1365-66a. þær mæg nihta gehwæm niðwundor seon, /fyr on flode. Although the mysterious fire may be nothing but the will-o'-the-wisp, it is worth noting that "the burning lake or river . . . is one of the commonest features of all, Oriental as well as Christian, accounts of hell" (E. Becker, The Medieval Visions of Heaven and Hell [Johns Hopkins Diss., 1899], p. 37); cf. Angl. xxxvi 186. — The subject (indef. pronoun man) is left unexpressed, just as 'he' in 1367^b. Cf. Lang. § 25.4.

1366^b. Nō þæs frōd leofað (þæt . . . wite). A formula. Cp. Wonders of Creation (Gr.-Wü. iii 154) 76 f., Ex. 439 f., Cbr. (i) 219 ff., Rid. 2.1 f., Andr. 544 ff., Hel. 4245 ff., etc.

1368 ff. Ðeah þe hæðstapa hundum geswenced etc. The elegant period might put us in mind of Vergil. Cf. Arch. cxxvi 341 f.; also Tupper's Riddles, p. 236 (on stag hunting among the Anglo-Saxons).

1392 ff. nō hē on helm losað etc. Biblical and Vergilian parallels have been pointed out, viz. Pr. lxxvii 23 (68.22), cxxxviii (139) 7 ff., Amos ix 2 f.; Æneid xii 889 ff., x 675 ff. (Earle's and Holthausen's notes; Arch. cxxvi 344 f.) Cp. Otfrid i 5.53 ff. — The figure of polysyndeton suggests Latin influence; cf. Arch. cxxvi 358.

1399-1491. Preparations for the second combat. 1492-1590. The fight with Grendel's mother. 1591-1650. Triumphal return to Heorot.

1404^b. [swā] gegnum fōr. The subject has to be supplied indirectly from Lāstas 1402, gang 1404^a (nouns used with reference to Grendel's mother).

1408. æþelinga bearn is probably to be taken as plur., as in 3170. See Lang. § 25.6. (1412 bē, i.e. Hrōðgār.)

1410. enge ānpaðas, uncūð gelād. Exactly the same line occurs Ex. 58. See Schü. Bd. 38 ff.; MLN. xxxiii 219.

1418. winum Scyldinga. wine, a frequent term for 'lord,' is applied to retainers here and in 2567. Similarly in MHG., goltwine is sometimes used of vassals, and in O. French the retainer is often called the amis of his lord. Cf. ŶEGPh. vi 195; Stowell, Publ. MLAss. xxviii 390 ff.; Kock² 111 f. (See also Saxo ii 59, Par. § 7.)

1423 f. Horn stundum song/fūslic (Earle: 'spirited') f(yrd)lēoð. Apparently a signal for the company to gather or to stop.

1428 f. ðā on undernmæl oft bewitigað . . . ; i.e., water-monsters 'such as' (of the same kind as those which) These nicras do not ply in the sea (seglrād). Cf. Lawrence, Publ. MLAss. xxvii 219; Schü. Bd. 66.

1446 f. him . . hreþre aldre gesceþðan, 'injure . . . his breast, his life'; cp. 2570 ff.; Lang. § 25.4.

1453. besette swīnlicum. This helmet differs from the ordinary 'boar helmets' in that several boar-figures (or figures of helmeted warriors ?) are engraved on the lower part of the helmet proper. See Keller 87; Stjer. 10 f.; Figure 3 inserted in this edition.

1454^a. brond nē beadomēcas. Practically a tautological combination, see 2660^a, note on 398.

1455. Næs þæt þonne mætost . . . Transition by means of negation, see e.g., 2354. þonne, 'further.'

1459^b-60^a. ātertānum fāh. āter is perhaps used figuratively with regard to the acid employed in the process of (false) damascening. Another possibility is that the serpentine ornamentation (cp. wyrmsfāb 1698, also wāgsweord 1489) was supposed to have a miraculous poisoning effect (Stjerna), the figures of serpents suggesting their well-known attribute (cp. attorseaða 2839, also 2523). It is less likely that the edge was really meant to be poisoned. Several ON. passages have been cited as parallels; thus Brot af Sigurþarkv. 20 (interpreted in different ways), Helgakv. Hjǫrv. 9, Helgakv. Hund. i 8. Cf. Bu. Tid. 65 f.; Griemb. 754; Gering's note; Stjer. 20 ff.; Ebert, R.-L. i 386; Falk L 9.44.3 f. (Cook's note on Chr. 768.) — āhyrded heafoswāte. The sword was believed to be hardened by the blood of battle; cp. Njálssaga, ch. 130.13; scūrheard, Beow. 1033 (?). Or is the reference to some kind of a fluid employed for the hardening (cf. Scheinert [Sievers], Beitr. xxx 378)? In that case, 1460^a could be regarded as, practically, a variation of 1459^b. [Swords hardened by poison (eitr): Hjálmar's Death Song 2 (Eddica Minora, p. 52); Völsungasaga, ch. 31; etc.]

1476. hwæt wit geð spræcon. Cp. 1707; note on 946 ff.

1484 ff. Mæg þonne on þæm golde ongitan etc. An interesting parallel: Hildebr. 46 f.

1488. ealde lāfe. Bēowulf's own sword (cp. 1023 ?).

1506. þā hēo tð botme cōm. Grendel's dam, aroused by a stranger's appearance in the water, goes to the bottom of the lake (to which Bēowulf had plunged, like Grettir, "in order to avoid the whirlpool and thus get up underneath the waterfall," Lawrence, l.c. 237) and drags him to her cave.

1508. swā hē ne mihte nō — hē þæm mōdig wæs. Metrically, nō might be included either in the first or in the second half-line. But the sense precludes any of the conjectural readings proposed (see Varr.)

in connection with mōdig 'courageous.' Adhering to the MS. and assigning to mōdig the meaning of 'angry,' we may translate 'he was angry at them,' i.e., at his enemies, þām referring both to the she-demon and, by anticipation, to the wundra fela. The poet had in mind the two causes which prevented Bēowulf from using his arms and wielding his weapons. Precisely this meaning and construction are recorded of Go. mōdags; OS. mōdag, Hel. 1378; for similar meanings, see B.-T.: mōdig, iv; mōdgian, Ex. 459; mōd, Beow. 549; ON. mōðugr.

1511. bræc is used imperfectively, 'was in the act of breaking,' 'tried to pierce.' Cp. 2854.

1512. āglæcan is more plausibly to be construed as nom. plur. than as gen. sing.; see 556. The object (his) is to be mentally supplied.

1516. fýrlēoht geseah. The light in the 'hall' (which enables Bēowulf to see his adversary, 1518) is met with in analogous folk-tales and in the Grettissaga (see Panzer 286, Intr. xv), likewise in hell (see Sat. 128 f.). Cp. Beow. 2767 ff.

1518. Beginning of the real combat. There are three distinct phases of it; the second begins at 1529, the third at 1557.

1519 f. mægenræs forgeaf/hildebille, 'he gave a mighty impetus to his battle-sword.'

1523. þæt se beadolēoma bítan nolde. The she-demon could not be wounded by any weapon (cp. 804) except her own (1557 ff.). See Gering's note (ON. parallels), Panzer 155.

1541. Hēo him eft hraðe etc. We must supply the connecting link, viz., she got up. Only the result of the action is stated. (Intr. lviii.)

1544. fēþecempa necessarily refers to Bēowulf, not to the ogress (cp. 2853). The exceptional intransitive function of oferweorpan need not be called in question. (Cf. Schü. xxxix 98; Brett, MLR. xiv 7.)

1545. hyre seax (MS. seaxe) getēah/brād [ond] brūnecg. The lack of concord resulting from the retention of seaxe would not be a serious offense, see 2703 f.; note on 48. But getēon, unlike gebregdan, cannot take the dat. (instr.) case. The scribal error was perhaps caused by the preceding hyre.

1550 f. Hæfde ðā forsīðod . . . under gynne grund. gynne grund, like eormengrund 859, 'earth'; i.e.: 'he would have died.'

1555 f. rodera Ræðend hit on ryht gescēd/ýðelice, syþðan hē eft āstōð. For a defense of the punctuation used, see Aant. 25; ESL. xxxix 431. Several edd. (Grein, Heyne, Wülker, Schücking, cf. Schü. Sa. 119) have placed a semicolon or comma after gescēd, making ýðelice syþðan hē eft āstōð one independent clause; Ettmüller (E. Sc.), Sievers (ix 140), et al., while punctuating after ýðelice, likewise consider syþðan an adverb, 'afterwards.' This is unsatisfactory because God's help consists in nothing else than showing Bēowulf the marvelous sword (see 1661 ff.), after he had got on his feet again. (The latter fact, though very important, is stated in a subordinate clause, see Intr. lviii, note on 1541. Cp. also 2092.) Sedgefield begins a new sentence with Sypðan (conjunct.), which is stylistically objectionable. As to jōselice, it goes naturally with the preceding line, see note on 478. — It is of interest to note that in our poem it is God who directs the hero to the victorious sword, whereas in numerous folk-tale versions this rôle falls to the persons (generally women) found in the lower region where the fight takes place, cf. Panzer 154, 288. Moreover, in conformity with the pedigree imposed upon the Grendel race, the good sword of tradition is converted into a giganta geweorc 1562, cp. 1558, 1679, which would seem to go back ultimately to Gen. iv 22; cf. Emerson, Publ. MLAss. xxi 915 f., 929; Angl. xxxv 260 f.

1557. Geseah ðā on searwum sigeēadig bil. Several translations of on searwum seem possible; viz. 'among [other] arms' (see 1613), 'in battle' ('during the fight'), '[he] in his armor' (cp. 2568), or (construing the prepositional phrase with bil) 'fully equipped,' 'ready' (cp. jūslic, geatolic). Probability is divided between the first and the last one.

1584. forgeald, pluperf. — 1585. tō ðæs þe, see Gloss.: tō. The interpretation which would make tō ðæs þe ('until') continue the narrative from 1573, after an excessively long parenthesis (Sedgefield, similarly Chambers), is not very tempting.

1588b-90. On the beheading of Grendel, see Intr. xviii; Panzer 288 f. To an unprejudiced reader it may seem natural enough that the head of Grendel, the chief of the enemies, is cut off and carried home in triumph. But, as an additional reason, the desire of preventing the ghost from haunting Heorot has been cited (see Gering's note). 1590b. ond . . . þā, 'and thus (so)'; cp. 2707.

1591 ff. Blackburn proposed an unconvincing conjecture to the effect that, owing to the misplacing of a MS. leaf, the story has become confused, and that originally ll. 1591-1605 followed after l. 1622. See L 5.52, 53.

1596 f. hig þæs æðelinges eft ne wēndon, / þæt hē . . . sēcean cōme . . . So-called proleptic use of a noun, which is preliminary to a clause of an exegetical character; cf. MPb. iii 254. eft is accounted for by the verbal idea vaguely suggested by the phrase of 1596; it partakes of the proleptic function.

1604. wiston ond ne wēndon; cp. Par. Lost ix 422: 'he wish'd, but not with hope.' The formula-like character of the combination is to be gathered from the occurrence of wýscað ond wēnaþ, Guðl. 47, wilnode and wēnde, Par. Ps. 24.19, and similar phrases; cf. MPh. iii 458, Arch. cxxvi 356. wiston is apparently a rare form (or spelling) for wisctan; cf. Cosijn viii 571; Pogatscher, Est. xxvii 218; Siev. § 405 n. 8; Bülb. § 507; Schlemilch, St. EPh. xxxiv 52 (& K. Sisam, Arch. cxxxi 305 ff.); also Braune, Abd. Grammatik § 146 n. 5.

1605 ff. The singular incident of the sword dissolving in the hot blood recalls the melting of the dragon, 897, cp. 3040 f.; see note on 897, Intr. xxii f. While the sword was wasting away, pieces of the blade were hanging down like icicles.

1612 ff. The rich treasures found in the cave belong, of course, to the folk-tale motives; see Panzer 174, Intr. xvi. (That Bēowulf took Unferð's sword back with him, we learn from 1807 ff.)

1616 f. wæs þæt blōd tō þæs hāt, / ættren ellorgæst. Probably ættren ellorgæst is parallel with blōd (logical adjunct and headword forming the terms of variation), though ættren could be (and usually is) construed as predicative adj., parallel with hāt (cp. 49 f., 2209 f.). Cf. MPh. iii 239. The reference is to Grendel, just as in 1614 Grendel's head is meant.

1649. þære idese, dat. sing., i.e. Wealhþeow; not gen. sing. referring to (the head of) Grendel's mother, as sometimes explained (thus by Boer [66], who branded the passage as an interpolation). As to mid, cp., e.g., 1642, 923.

1651-1784. Speech-making by Bēowulf and Hrōðgār.

1656. The meaning 'achieve' has been postulated for genēþan in this passage (Lorz 60), but this is not necessary, cp. 2350. (See also Varr.)

1666. hūses hyrdas. If the plur. here and in 1619: wīgbryre wrāðra (1669: fēondum) is objected to as not entirely consistent with the facts, it could be vindicated as 'generic plural,' see 1074, 565. It has been sometimes regarded as evidence of an earlier, different version of the story; cf. Intr. xviii.

1674-76. him is explained by eorlum, cf. Intr. lxvi. on þā healfe; transl.: 'from that side,' cf. Lang. § 25.5.

1681b. ond þā (cp. 2707, 1590) þās worold ofgeaf (pluperf.). On the possible excision of 1681^b-84^a, see Intr. cx.

1688-98. On the wonderful sword, see note on 1555 f.; on Grendel's pedigree, see note on 106 ff. There are a number of doubtful points relating to the curious sword-hilt. 1688 f. on ðæm wæs or writen/fyrngewinnes. This signifies either a graphic illustration (which seems, on the whole, probable) or a runic inscription; both kinds are found together on the famous Franks Casket. As regards or . . . fyrngewinnes, the allusion may very well be to the ungodly acts of the giants which preceded the deluge (cp. 113 f.), though it would not be impossible to interpret it with reference to Cain's fratricide, the veritable prima causa. Cf. Angl. xxxv 261 f.; Chambers's note. — 1691. frēcne gefērdon. Admitting the perfective function of gefēran, we should translate 'they suffered terribly' (cf. MPh. iii 262); otherwise, 'they behaved daringly' would be a possible variant rendering. — 1696 f. hwām þæt sweord geworht . . . ærest wære. Evidently the name of the (first) owner (the one who ordered the sword to be made) was written out in runic characters — a practice confirmed by ancient Scand. and Ags. runic inscriptions, cf. Noreen, Altnord. Grammatik i, Appendix, passim; Earle, Ags. Literature, pp. 48 ff.; Earle, The Alfred Jewel (1901) (legend: Aelfred mec heht gewyrcean). That the name of the maker of the sword was meant, is less likely. It is true that examples of such inscriptions are to be readily found (cf. Noreen, l.c.), but the construction of hwām as dat. of agency, 'by whom' (cf. Green L 6.8.5.99), would be questionable.

1700-84. The much discussed harangue of Hrōðgār, which shows the moralizing, didactic turn of the poem at its very height, falls into four well-marked divisions, viz. a. 1700-9^a; b. 1709^b-24^a (the second Heremōd digression, see 901-15); c. 1724^b-68 (the 'sermon' proper); d. 1769-84. It is conspicuous for the blending of heroic and theological motives. There can be no doubt that this address of the king's forms an organic element in the structural plan of the epic, corresponding in its function to Hrōðgār's speech after the first combat together with the first Heremōd episode; cf. Intr. lii. Moreover, it is entirely in harmony with the high moral tone, the serious outlook, and spiritual refinement of the poem. Of course, its excessive length and strong homiletic flavor have laid the third division, and even other parts, open to the charge of having been interpolated by a man versed and interested in theology (Müllenhoff's Interpolator B), and it is, indeed, possible that the 'sermon' represents a later addition to the text. In that case, the insertion would have necessitated also some changes in the following (and perhaps, the preceding) division. See especially Müllenhoff 130 f.; Earle, pp. lxxxviii, 166 f.; Angl. xxxv 474 ff., xxxvi 183 f.; Intr. cxiv ff.

1705 f. Eal . . hit is explained by mægen mid mōdes snyttrum, i.e. 'strength and wisdom.' Cp. 2461 f., 287 ff., 1043 ff. As regards the meaning of geþyldum, cp. Craeft. 79 f.; Otfrið, Ad Ludowicum 14: thaz duit er al mit ebinu.

1707^b-9^a. Ðū scealt tō frōfre weorþan etc. seems reminiscent of the Bible, see Luke ii 32, 34. Cf. Brandl 1002; Angl. xxxv 119.

1709^b-10. Ne wearð Heremōd swā (namely, tō frōfre, tō helpe)/easorum Ecgwelan. The Danes are named Ecgwela's (descendants, i.e.) men, just as the Frisians are Finn's men (easorum 1068). For the extension of meaning, cp. the use of patronymics like Scyldingas, Scyldfingas, Hrēðlingas. Nothing is gained by the emendation easora (which has been favored by several scholars). The strange name of Ecgwela occurs nowhere else. (Cf. Notes, p. 160, n. 1.)

1714 f. āna hwearf etc. refers to Heremōd's exile and in particular to his death; see note on 902-4^a.

1720. (bēagas geaf. .) æfter dōme, lit. 'in pursuit of glory,' 'in order to obtain glory.' (Cp., e.g., Runic Poem 2 f.) Similarly, drēah æfter dōme 2179. See Kock in Studier tillegnade Esaias Tegnér, 1918, pp. 300 f.; Kock² 113.

1721 f. þæt hē þæs gewinnes weorc þrōwade, /lēodbealo longsum. He suffered everlasting punishment in hell. (Bu. 38; Angl. xxxv 267.) Cp. Gen. (B) 295 f. The veiled form of expression is characteristic.

1724 ff. The author of the 'sermon' has made use of current theological motives, such as God's dispensing of various gifts, the sins of pride and avarice, the shafts of the devil. See Angl. xxxv 128 ff., 475 ff. for detailed comments and parallels. On the interesting relation of this homiletic passage to certain parts of Daniel and Christ, see Intr. cxiii ff.

1725-27. The meaning is: 'To some men God deals out wisdom, to others wealth and rank.' On ealra, see Lang. § 25.9. (Earle: "he holds the disposition of all things." It is not very likely that ealra refers to manna cynne.)

1728. on lufan . . hworfan, 'wander (i.e., live, cp. 2888) in delight.' The striking concretion of meaning attributed to lufu does not appear inadmissible, cf. ESl. xxxix 464, xli 112. For the scansion, see T.C. §§ 17, 27.

1730 f. tō healdanne belongs both with wynne (cp. 1079 f.) and hlēoburh.

1733 f. hē his selfa ne mæg . . . ende geþencean, 'he himself cannot imagine that the end of it (i.e., of his kingdom, or his happy state in general) will come.' See Arch. cxv 180 f.; Angl. xxxv 469.

1737 f. nē gesacu . . /ecghete ēoweð; virtually 'nor does enmity bring about war'; cp. 84 f.

1740. On the canto division, see Intr. ciii.

1741^b-42^a. þonne se weard swefeð, /sāwele hyrde. By the keeper of the soul either man's 'conscience' or (more likely) 'intellect,' 'reason' is meant. Cf. Intr. cxv; Angl. xxxv 131 f.

1742^b. bið se slæp tō fæst is treated by Sedgfield and Chambers as a parenthetic clause, which, in this context, does not seem quite satisfactory stylistically; gebunden 1743^a can apply to the sleep as well as to the sleeper.

1743 ff. bona; see gāstbona, 177. The devil's mysterious biddings (sinister suggestions, wōm wundorbedodum 1747) are equated with his sharp arrows, 1746; cf. Arch. cviii 368 f.

1759 f. þæt sēlre gecēos, / ēce rēdas. See Angl. xxxv 457 f. (Luke x 42, etc.); cp. Hel. 1201 f.: feng im wōðbera þing, / langsamoron rād; Chr. 757. — (oferhýda) ne gým, ‘shun.’ (Litotes.)

1763 ff. The enumeration of the different kinds of death (see 1846 ff.) recalls classic and ecclesiastic literature, cf. Arch. cxxvi 359 (though some similar Germanic legal formulas might be quoted, see Grimm R. A. 40 ff.). The polysyndetic series suggests the rhetoric of a preacher (such as Wulfstān). The effect is heightened by the repetition of the prefix, forsites ond forsworceð 1767 (so forgytes ond forgýmeð 1751), cp. 903 f.; Dan. 341, 352, El. 208, Chr. 270, Andr. 614, 1364, Gen. (B) 452.

1769. Swā introduces an individual exemplification of the preceding general observation; cp. 3066, Wand. 19.

1770-72. Although wigge could be regarded as parallel with 1771^a, it is a little more natural to take it in an instrumental sense, ‘by war’ (and, by readiness for war). But the chief emphasis is laid on the peaceful character of Hrōðgār’s long reign, just as in the case of Bēowulf, 2732 ff.; cp. also Otfrid i 1.75 ff. The remarkable parallel, Ps. 34.3 (Benedict. Office, etc.): (mē . . .) wige belūc wrāðum fēondum, Gr.-Wü. iii 331, = ‘conclude adversus eos qui persequuntur me,’ was first noticed by Heyne. Cf. ESt. xxxix 464; Angl. xxxv 469; Kock² 114 f.

1785-1887. The parting.

1797. þý dōgore is meant in a generic sense, ‘in those days,’ cp. 197, 790.

1801. The raven in the peculiar rôle as herald of the morning recalls the proper name Dægþrefn, 2501. Cp. Helgakv. Hund. ii 42 (Óþin’s hawks rejoicing at the coming of morning). Earle thinks the black-cock may have been meant (see his note).

1802^b-3^a. See Varr. ofer sceadwa is offered as a slight improvement on Sievers’s æfter sceadwe; cp. Phoen. 209 f.: sunne bātost / ofer sceadu scīneð.

1805 f. wolde feor þanon . . . cēoles nēosan; i.e., he wanted to go to the ship ‘for a voyage far away’ (Earle).

1807-12. Heht þā se hearda Hrunting beran etc. ‘Then the brave son of Ecglāf had Hrunting brought (cp. 1023 f.), bade [him] take his sword, the precious weapon; he [i.e., Bēowulf] thanked him for that gift (see Gloss.: lēan), said he considered the war-friend [cp. hildefrōfor, Wald. ii 12] good, etc.’ It should be noted that the subject of cwæð 1810 must be the same as that of sægde 1809 (cf. Intr. lvi), and that the abrupt change of subject (from Unferð to Bēowulf) in 1809 is not unparalleled (cf. Intr. lxxviii). The fact that Hrunting had been restored to Unferð has been passed over as irrelevant; but the presentation of a parting gift (cp. 1866 ff.) to the hero is appropriately dwelt upon with some emphasis. (MPb. iii 460 f.) [For other views, see Varr.; Schröer, Angl. xiii 337 ff.; Jellinek & Kraus, ZfdA. xxxv 279 ff.; Sedgfield's and Chambers's notes.]

1825. Several edd. omit the comma after gūðgeweorca and construe the gen. with gearo. But ic bēo gearo sōna gives the impression of a complete clause. gūðgeweorca seems to have instrumental force like nīða 845, 1439, 2206. Cf. Aant. 38; note on 2034 f.

1830^b-31^a. Ic on Higelāce wāt, / Gēata dryhten. The lack of concord can be remedied by reading either Higelāc (cp. 2650^b) or dryhtne, see Varr. But such a congruence is not absolutely necessary in the case of an apposition (Lang. § 25.6; MPb. iii 259). Cf. also note on 48; Hel. 49 f., etc. Metrically, Higelāc would be somewhat more regular, but 1830^b is supported by 501^b.

1831^b. þēah ðe hē geong sý. The author is inconsistent in representing Hygelāc here as still young (cp. 1969), whereas several years before he had given his daughter in marriage to Eofor. (See Intr. xxxviii f.) — That a young person is not ordinarily credited with wisdom, is seen from 1927 f., 1842 f.; Wand. 64 f.

1833. wordum ond weorcum, largely a formula, see Gloss.: word; Sievers's Heliand, p. 466. þæt ic þē wēl herige; the verb herigan 'praise' assumes the sense 'show one's esteem by deeds,' cp. weorðian 2096. (Hel. 81: warubtun lof Goda, 83: diuridon ūsan Drobtin, etc.) [Cf. also Aant. 27; MPb. iii 261; Chambers.]

1836 f. Gif him þonne Hrēþric tō hofum Gēata/geþingeð, '. . . determines [to go] to . . .' Exact parallels of this function of (refl.) geþingan occur Bi Domes D. 5, Sat. 598 (cf. Aant. 28). For the omission of the verb of motion, see Gloss.: willan, sculan; Ælfric's Saints xxvi 213: þider hē gemynt hæfde; also Lazamon's Brut 28109: þā þū tō Rōme þotest; etc. The meaning '(arrange to) take service' has been conjectured for geþingan (Ger. 'sich verdingen,' cf. Heyne-Schücking, Lorz 68), but this is not well attested.

1838 f. feorcýþðe bēoð/sēlran gesōhte þæm . . .; 'far countries when visited' — i.e. 'the visit of far countries is good (cf. Lang. § 25.2) for him . . .' The participial construction accords with Latin syntax (Arch. cxxvi 355), yet it makes an idiomatic impression.

1840^b. him on andsware is, metrically, out of the ordinary (cf. Rie.V. 31; Mö. 141; Holt. Zs. 125), but may be a permissible instance of D₂ with the stress on him (as in 543^b, cp. 345^b, etc.).

1844-45^a. Bēowulf is declared perfect in thought, words, and action; see Angl. xxxv 457. (Cp. 1705 f.)

1850. þæt þe Sæ-Gēatas sēlran næbben . . . Several edd. (thus Schücking, Sedgfield, Chambers) write þē; but the construction of the dat. (instr.) with a compar. ('better than you') is found nowhere else in Bēowulf. The corresponding passage, 858 ff. supports þæt þe; cp. 1846. (Arch. cxxvi 356 n.1.)

1852 f. gyf þū healdan wylt/māga rice. Apparently a hint at Bēowulf's future refusal to accept the throne, 2373 ff.

1854^a. licað leng swā wēl. Unless wēl is a mere scribal blunder for sēl, the positive may be due to a contamination of two constructions, viz. licað wēl, and licað leng swā sēl (bet); cp. 2423. See B.-T.: swā, iw 5; Angl. xxvii 426.

1859. wesan; 1861. gegrēttan; scil. sceal (1855).

1862. The risky, if tempting interpretation of beapu, or hēapu (from bēab) as 'sea' (also in beapoliðende, see Gloss.) has been generally abandoned in favor of the emendation heafu, which is sustained by the occurrence of ofer beafo in 2477. Sarrazin's rendering of ofer beapu by 'after the war' (Sarr. St. 27) is by no means impossible, though otherwise beapu 'war' is known only as the first element of compounds. (Cp. the very rare use of the noun heoru by the side of numerous compounds.)

1866. inne, 'within'; cp. 390, 1037, 2152, 2190. Bēowulf was still inside the hall.

1873. Him wæs bēga wēn etc. See 1604 f., 2895 f.

1875. þæt h[i]e seoðða(n) [nō]. The addition of the negation improves the sense. Moreover, to judge from the defective state of the MS., a few letters are probably lost at the end of the line (the first line of the page). (Chambers.) Hence, the differentiation of parenthesis and bracket may be illusory in this case.

1884 f. þā wæs on gange gifu Hrōðgāres etc. Cp. 862 f.

1887^b. (yldo . . .) sē þe. Remembering the use of the masc. designations of Grendel's mother (see note on 1260), we need not be surprised to find the hostile powers of old age and fate (2421) treated in a similar way. [That sē þe should refer to Hrōðgār is a very precarious hypothesis.]

1888-1931^a. Bēowulf's return.

1891^b. swā hē ær dyde. See note on 444^b.

1894 f. cwæð þæt wilcuman Wedera lēodum etc.; i.e., 'your people will give you a hearty welcome.' (Cp. 1915 f., 1868 f.)

1900. Hē; i.e., Bēowulf, who has not been mentioned after l. 1880 (1883); see l. 1920. — Is the bātweard the same as the landweard, 1890?

1918. oncerbendum is illustrated by a quotation from Ælfred's Soliloquies (ed. Hargrove) 22.4 ff.: scipes ancerstreng byð āpenæd on geribte fram þām scype tō þām ancre . . . , se ancer byð gefastnod on ðære eorðan. þēab þæt scyp si ūte on ðære sē on þām yðum, hyt byð gesund [and] untōslegen gyf se streng āþolað, forðām bys byð se ðæder ende fast on þære eorðan and se ðæder on ðām scype. Cp. also Whale 13 ff. (on-cyrrāþ).

1926^a. hēa healle. The unique plur. of beal is certainly strange, and an emendation like bēab bealreced (Holthausen¹, cf. Zs. 118) or *bēab bealsele may well represent the original reading. If 1926^a be considered parallel to 1925^b (rather than to 1925^a), Kock's conjecture bēah on healle offers an acceptable improvement. (Cp., e.g., the sequence of half-line units, Pboen. 9-10^a.)

1927 f. þeah ðe wintra lýt/under burhlocan gebiden hæbbe. 'In spite of her youth,' Hygd shows the virtues of a discreet woman and a gracious, open-handed queen, differing therein from þrýð in her early, pre-marital stage. under burhlocan, 'within the castle (or town).'

1931^b-1962. Digression on þrýð and Offa.¹

There remain some obscure points in the cursory allusion to þrýð,² but in all probability this remarkable woman is meant to represent a haughty, violent maiden, who cruelly has any man put to death that is bold enough just to look at her fair (ænlicu 1941) face, but who, after being wedded to the right husband, becomes an admirable, womanly wife (and kind, generous [1952] queen), — in short, exemplifying the 'Taming of the Shrew' motive. This specific interpretation — which would put the unapproachable, fierce maiden in a line with Saxo's Hermuthruda (iv 101 f.,³ 103) and Alvilda (vii 228 ff.), Brünhild of the Nibelungenlied, queen Olof of the Hrólfs saga (ch. 6) — derives strong support from ll. 1933-35, 1954. What part the father played in the story, and under what circumstances the daughter left her home, we are left to guess; see notes on 1934, 1950.

Offa, who while still young (1948), married the noble (1949), strong-minded maiden, is extolled (1955 ff.) as the most excellent hero,⁴ famed for his valor, wisdom, and liberality. He is the son of Gärmond and the father of Ēomær (Ēomēr), and corresponds to the legendary, pre-historic Angle king Offa (I) of the Mercian genealogies (see Par. § 2).⁵ Being removed twelve generations from the historical Offa II, the old Angle Offa may be assigned to the latter half of the fourth century. His great exploit is the single combat by the river Eider which is alluded to in ll. 35 ff. of Widsið:

⁴ Similar, though more moderate, is the praise of Onela, 2382 ff.

The details of this fight, by which he saved the kingdom, and the dramatic scene leading up to it, in particular the sudden awakening from his long continued dumbness and torpor,⁵ are set forth in one of the most charming stories of Saxo Grammaticus (iv 106, 113-17) and in Sven Aageson's Chronicle (Par. § 8.3). A brief reference is found also in the Annales Ryenses (Par. § 8.5).

Stories of Offa as well as of his queen were incorporated in the Vitae Duorum Offarum, a Latin work written about the year 1200 by a monk of St. Albans.⁶ Here Offa I miraculously gains the power of speech and defeats the Mercian nobles who had rebelled against his old father Warmundus. The story related of his wife, however, is the popular legend of the innocently suffering, patient heroine, who [flees from an unnatural father,] marries a foreign prince, is banished with her child (or children), but in the end happily rejoins her husband.⁷ In the Life of Offa II, i.e. the great historical Mercian king (who reigned from 757 to 796), the prince is similarly cured of his dumbness and, after defeating the rebel Beornred, is elected king. But the account given of the wife of this Offa strangely recalls the þrȳð legend of Beowulf, as the following outline will show.

³ The Myrgingas seem to be regarded as a branch of the Swāfe (i.e. North Swabians).

⁴ The river Eider, which for some distance forms the boundary between Schleswig and Holstein.

⁵ This widely known motive of the hero's sluggish, unpromising youth (cf. Grimm D.M. 322 (388)) is applied to Bēowulf: 2183 ff. The parallel of the early Irish hero Labhraidh Maen was mentioned by Gerould (L 4.102).

Charlemagne, is on account of some disgraceful crime condemned to exposure on the sea in a small boat without rudder and sail. She drifts to the shore of Britain. Led before King Offa, she gives her name as Drida and charges her singular banishment to the intrigues of certain men of ignoble blood whose offers of marriage she had proudly rejected. Offa, deceived by the girl's beauty, marries her. From that time she is called Quendrida, 'id est regina Drida.' Now she shows herself a haughty, avaricious, scheming woman, who plots against the king, his councilors, and his kingdom, and treacherously causes the death of Æðelberht, king of East Anglia, a suitor of Offa's third daughter. A few years later she meets a violent death.

In spite of their obvious differences, this narrative and the Beowulf version of þrȳð evidently go back to the same source. The shifting of the story from the legendary Offa I to the historical Offa II and the transformation it has undergone are perhaps in part due to the (purely) legendary stories of the cruelty of queen Cyneþrȳð, wife of Offa II.² Why a legend of the Constance type should have been attached to the Angle Offa, remains a matter of speculation. There are some slight parallelisms between it and the Drida account, but it is difficult to believe, as some scholars do, in their ultimate identity.

There can be no doubt that the stories both of Offa and of þrȳð arose in the ancient continental home of the Angles. The Offa tradition lived on for centuries among the Danes, and it appears in literary, nationalized form (Wermundus figuring as king of Denmark) in the pages of Saxo and Sven Aageson. On the other hand, the Angles migrating to Britain carried the legends of Offa and his queen with them and in course of time localized them in their new home. Offa I became in the Vita king of the West Angles (Mercians), the founder of the city of Warwick, and considerable confusion between the two Offas set in, leading to further variations.

That the tales of Offa's prowess have a historical basis, is quite believable and antecedently probable. The þrȳð legend has frequently been assigned a mythological origin. Her name and character have called to mind the Valkyria type,³ and she has been compared directly to the Scandinavian Brynhildr, the person of her father being considered to be no other than Óðinn. Also a Norse myth of Þórr and Þrúðr — a variation of a primitive Indo-European 'day and night' myth — has been put into requisition (L 4. 106). But little light on the Beowulf version is gained from such hypotheses.

Various scholars have been looking for specific reasons to account for the insertion of this episode in the Beowulf narrative. Allusions to

Cyneþrȳð, wife of Offa II, or to queen Ūsþrȳð (ob. 697)¹ have been detected in it and charged to the account of an interpolator.² The passage has been imagined to be a sort of allegory revealing a high moral and educational purpose in its praise of Offa (= Offa II), its rebuke to þrȳð (= Cyneþrȳð), its (hidden) admonition to Eomēr (= prince Ecgferð).³ But the only conclusion to be drawn from it with reasonable certainty seems to be that the poet was interested in the old Anglian traditions — the only legends in Beowulf that are concerned with persons belonging to English (i. e., pre-English) stock. That these enjoyed an especial popularity in the Mercian district, is confirmed by the testimony of the proper names.⁴ The author's strong disapproval of þrȳð's behavior (1940 ff.) is quite in keeping with his moralizing, didactic propensities shown in various other passages.⁵

1931 f. Mōð þrȳðe [ne] wæg etc. The serious difficulties of meaning and form (nom. þrȳðo [MS.] instead of þrȳð, cf. Hart, MLN. xviii 117 f.; but also Angl. xxviii 452) are removed by Schücking's emendation. (See Varr.) The abrupt transition to þrȳð resembles the sudden appearance of Heremōð 901, who, like her, serves as a (partial) antithesis.

1934. swæstra gesiða, i. e. the retainers at the court. — sinfrêa. either the 'father' or 'husband.' In the latter case, nefne sinfrea means 'except as husband.' All the unsuccessful suitors were to be executed.

1935. þæt hire an dæges ēagum starede. The construction may be explained from a blending of the absolute (adv.) use of on, as in weras on sārwon 1650, and the dat. of interest, as in him āsetton segen . . . hēah ofer hēafod 47 f.; cp. 2596 f.: him . . . ymbe gestōdon. For some parallel instances, see Arch. cxxiii 417 n. The postpositive on takes the strong stress as in 2523, cp. 671. — dæges 'by day,' i. e. 'openly.'

1936. . . . him . . . weotode tealde, 'considered . . . (appointed, or) in store for him.' A stereotyped expression. See Jul. 357: ic þæt wēnde ond witod tealde, 685 f.; Hel. 1879 f.; Wulfst. 147.26, 241.16.

1938. æfter mundgripe, 'after being seized (arrested).'

1944. Hemminges mæg = Offa; in 1961 = Eomēr. Was Hemming a brother of Garmund? Or Garmund's (or Offa's) father-in-law? (Cp. Nisbādes mæg, Wald. ii 8.) The name occurs in Ags., ON., and OHG. See Suchier, Beitr. iv 511 f.; Sievers, ib. x 501 f.; Binz 172; Björkman L. 4.31.4.167 f. There is a village named Hemmingstedt in the southwestern part of Schleswig.

1945. ealodrincende oðer sædan. This remark, an individualized variation of the gefrægn- formula, used as a phrase of transition, supplies a connecting link between the first part of the story and its continuation: 'beer-drinking men related further.' (MPb. iii 244, Angl.

xxviii 449.) [It has often been considered to point to another, different version of the Þrýð story, by which interpretation the preceding account (1931-43) was supposed to furnish an especially close parallel to the tale of Drida.]

1946. lǣs, (by litotes :) 'nothing.'

1948. geongum cempan. Offa's youth at the time of his heroic exploit is made much of in the Widsið allusion. According to later traditions, curiously both Scandinavian (Sven Aageson, Annales Ryenses) and English ones (Vita Offae I), he had reached his thirtieth year before he revealed his valor. However, one of a set of drawings made at St. Albans (in one of the MSS. of the Vitae) represents him as a youth, see R. W. Chambers, Sixteenth century drawings illustrating the story of Offa and of Thryth (Drida), London [privately printed], 1912.

1950. ofer fealone flið. The epithet fealu applied to the sea — as is often done (somewhat conventionally) in OE. poetry — denotes "perhaps yellowish green, a common color in the English and Irish Channels" (Mead, Publ. MLAss. xiv 199). — be fæder lāre. The precise meaning of this allusion is lost. Did the father send Þrýð away, because her excessive violence and cruelty rendered her continued stay at his court impossible? [An unconvincing suggestion: Stefanović L. 4. 106. 522.]

1953. lifgesceafta lifgende brēac. Similarly, worolde brūceð 1062; 2097. As to the tautological combination, cp., e.g., cwice lifdon, Andr. 129, OS. Gen. 83.

1960. The reading proposed by Rickert (MPh. ii 54 ff.): [geong] ēðel sinne, þonon geōmor wōc, and interpreted as an allusion to Offa's singular 'awakening,' is very interesting, but clearly impossible.

1963-2151. Bēowulf's arrival and narrative.

1967^b-70^a. tō ðæs ðe etc., 'to the place where, as they had heard, the king . . . distributed rings.' The familiar gefrægn- formula (1969: gefrūnon) is of course, strictly speaking, out of place here. bonan Ongenþēoes 1968 is not meant in its literal sense, since Hygelāc had performed the deed only by proxy, see Intr. xxxix; Par. § 10: Tacitus, Germ. c. xiv. The term is suggestive of the ON. surnames Hundingsbani, Fáfnisbani (cp. Ísungs bani, Helgakv. Hund. i 21).

1970 ff. A much abridged form of the ceremonies described in 331 ff.

1981. By the hook under the e in reced the scribe seems to have indicated the open character of the e ($e = \alpha$); thus in 2126 b?l = bāl, 2652 fæðmiç = fæðmiæ. In sæcce 1989 the same sign was added by mistake. (Cf. Intr. xciii.) [Did the scribe of the first part use e in 1398^b? See Varr.]

1983. It has been suggested that the form hæ(ð)num (see Varr.) pertains to the tribal name Hæðnas (ON. Hei(ð)nir), which occurs

Wids. 81. But why a term denoting the inhabitants of Hedemarken in Norway (according to Bugge, also the dwellers on the Jutish 'heath') should have been introduced here, has not been explained satisfactorily. Cf. Bu. 9 ff.; Chambers's note.

1994 ff. It has not been mentioned before that Hygelāc tried to dissuade Bēowulf from his undertaking (see on the other hand, 202 ff., 415 ff.). The same motive, equally unfounded, appears in the last part, 3079 ff. — Several so-called discrepancies between Bēowulf's own condensed version, 2000 ff., and the original account of his adventures in Denmark are easily detected. Some insignificant variations occur in 2011-13, 2147^b. A shifting of emphasis (and omission of detail) is observed in 2138 f. Added details, some of which seem to have been purposely reserved for this occasion, are found in 2020 ff. (appearance of Frēawaru and everything told in connection therewith), 2076 (name Hondsciōh), 2085 ff. (Grendel's pouch), 2107 ff., 2131 f., 2157 ff.

1996 f. lēte Sūð-Dene sylfe geweorðan/gūðe wið Grendel may be translated: 'that you should let the Danes themselves settle the war with Grendel.' (Cp. 424 ff.) For the interesting construction see Gloss.: geweorðan, wið. [Cf. Aant. 30; Bu. 97.]

2002. uncer Grendles, 'of us two, [me and] Grendel.' An instance of the archaic 'elliptic dual' construction. Cf. Sievers, Beitr. ix 271; Angl. xxvii 402. (Also Edgerton, ZfvglSpr. xliii 110 ff., xlv 23 ff.; Neckel, GRM. i 393.)

2004 f. sorge is gen. sing. (or plur.?), yrmdē probably acc. sing. Cp. 2028 f., 2067 ff.

2018. bædde (from bædan 'compel') byre geonge would be rather forced, whether we explain it as 'she urged the young men [to drink]' or 'she kept the young men (servers [?]) going' (Cl. Hall). The emendation bælde is elucidated by 1094.

2021. The most plausible meaning ascribed to on ende is 'consecutively,' 'continuously,' 'from end to end' (lit.: [from beginning] to end), i.e. 'to all in succession' (B.-T. Suppl.: ende, ii 9 d). The rendering 'at the end of the hall (or tables)' is of doubtful propriety.

2024^b-69^a. The Heaðo-Bard Episode. See Intr. xxxiv ff.

The following is a summary of Saxo's narrative (vi 182 ff.).¹ Frotho, who succeeded to the Danish throne when he was in his twelfth year, overcame and subjugated the Saxon kings Swerting and Hanef. He proved an excellent king, strong in war, generous, virtuous, and mindful of honor. Meanwhile Swerting, anxious to free his land from the rule of the Danes, treacherously resolved to put Frotho to death, but the latter forestalled and slew him, though slain by him simultaneously. Frotho was succeeded by his son Ingellus, whose soul was perverted from honor. He forsook the examples of his forefathers, and utterly enthralled himself to the lures of wanton profligacy. He married the daughter of Swerting given him by her brothers, who desired to insure themselves against vengeance on the part of the Danish king. When Starcatherus, the old-time guardian of Frotho's son, heard that Ingellus was perversely minded, and instead of punishing his father's murderers, bestowed upon them kindness and friendship, he was vexed with stinging wrath¹ at so dreadful a crime. He returned from his wanderings in foreign lands, where he had been fighting, and, clad in mean garments, betook himself to the royal hall and awaited the king. In the evening, Ingellus took his meal with the sons of Swerting, and enjoyed a magnificent feast. The tables had been loaded with the profusest dishes. The stern guest, soon recognized by the king, violently spurned the queen's efforts to please him, and when he saw that the slayers of Frotho were in high favor with the king, he could not forbear from attacking Ingellus' character, but poured out the whole bitterness of his reproaches on his head, and thereupon added the following song: 'Thou, Ingellus, buried in sin, why dost thou tarry in the task of avenging thy father? Wilt thou think tranquilly of the slaughter of thy righteous sire? — Why dost thou, sluggard, think only of feasting? Is the avenging of thy slaughtered father a little thing to thee? — I have come from Sweden, traveling over wide lands, thinking that I should be rewarded, if only I had the joy to find the son of my beloved Frotho. — But I sought a brave man, and I have come to a glutton, a king who is the slave of his belly and of vice. — Wherefore, when the honors of kings are sung, and poets relate the victories of captains, I hide my face for shame in my mantle, sick at heart. — I would crave no greater blessing, if I might see those guilty of thy murder, O Frotho, duly punished for such a crime.' Now he prevailed so well by this reproach [clothed by Saxo in seventy Latin stanzas] that Ingellus, roused by the earnest admonition of his guardian, leapt up, drew his sword, and forthwith slew the sons of Swerting.

Compared with the Beowulf, Saxo's version marks an advance in dramatic power in that the climax is brought about by a single act (not by exhortations administered on many occasions, māla gebwylce 2057), and that Ingellus himself executes the vengeance, whereas in the English poem the slaying of one of the queen's attendants by an unnamed warrior ushers in the catastrophe.²

2029-31. Oft seldan hwær/æfter lēodhryre lýtle hwile/bongār būgeð, þēah sēo brýd dūge. The general sense of these lines — which do not stand in need of alteration — is: 'As a rule, the murderous spear will rest only for a short time under such circumstances.' seldan, 'in rare instances,' expresses in a modified form the same idea as lýtle bwile; cf. Est. xlv 125 f. Kock's able interpretation (Angl. xxvii

233 ff.) : 'As a rule, it seldom happens that (seldan bawær, cp. wundur bawær 3062) the spear rests when some time has elapsed . . .' does not take into consideration the natural meaning of lytle bewile (cp. 2097, 2240). sēo brȳd, the bride (in question), cp. 943, 1758, Hel. 310; no direct reference to Frēawaru.

2032 f. As ofpyncan is regularly construed with the dative, the retention of ðēoden appears, after all, quite hazardous, although the joining of different cases (ðēoden, gebwām) in itself would not count as an obstacle (MPh. iii 259). [It has been suggested that ðēoden may stand for ðēodn(e) with final e elided, cf. Rie.Zs. 404; note on 698^a.]

2034 f. þonne hē mid fæmnan on flett gæð, — dryhtbearn Dena duguða biwenede. The pronoun hē might refer to dryhtbearn Dena, cp. 2053 f., also 2059: fæmnan þegn, i.e. a young Dane who has accompanied the princess to her new home. (Cf. MPh. iii 255.) Kluge's interpretation of dryhtbearn as dryhtbeorn 'bridesman' (cp. dryht-ealdorman, -guma = 'paranympus') is not called for, since there is no allusion to the wedding feast here. duguða biwenede could be considered a parenthetical clause with the substantive verb omitted (see 811). Of course, the change to bī werede (without parenthesis) would render the construction smoother.

But there are other interpretational possibilities. Explaining hē 2034 with reference to Ingeld, we may regard dryhtbearn (plur.) Dena duguða biwenede as a loosely joined elliptical clause (cp. 936, 1343) indicating the cause of the king's displeasure: 'the noble sons of the Danes [are] splendidly entertained' — provided duguða can be taken in an instrumental sense (cp. nīða 845, 1439, 2206) or is emended to duguðum (cp. 3174); in this case bim 2036 would be dat. plur. This interpretation appears on the whole the most satisfactory one. — Further renderings are: '[while] a noble scion of the Danes attended upon the knights' (Heyne, Schücking), '[that] his high lords should entertain a noble scion of the Danes' (Wyatt, Cl. Hall) [both presupposing an inexplicable change of tense]; '[with the lady,] the noble child of the Danes (dryhtbearn in apposition with fæmnan), attended by her band' (reading duguðe) (Sedgefield) [with doubtful syntax]. — Cf. also Rie.Zs. 404 f.; Bu. 98; Green L. 6.8.5.100.

2036^a. on him gladiað. Type A₃; cp. 632^a. As to the accent on the preposition, cf. Rie. V. 31 f. See note on 724^b.

2044 f. geong(um) cempan . . . higes cunnian, 'test (tempt) the mind of a young warrior,' cf. Lang. § 25.4. The rather redundant purh brædra gebygd (cf. Angl. xxxv 470) appears to emphasize the intensity of the searching. Gummere: "tests the temper and tries the soul." In Saxo's account it is Ingeld himself that is addressed.

2053. þāra banena byre nāthwylces. A new generation has grown up in the meantime.

2105 ff. The gyd . . . sōð ond sārlic 2108 f. recited by Hrōðgār denotes, most likely, an elegy (see 2247 ff. and note). What relation there is between this gyd, the syllic spell, and the harp playing, we are unable to determine. The practice of the art of minstrelsy by nobles and kings in the heroic age is confirmed by Scandinavian (also Middle High German,) and, indeed, Homeric parallels; a celebrated historic example is that of Gelimer, the last king of the Vandals (Procopius, Histories: Vandal War). Cf. Köhler, Germ. xv 33 ff.; Chadwick H. A. 83 ff., 222; Heusler, R.-L. i 455. — 2111 ff. The lament over the passing of youth and the misery of old age (cp. 1886 f., 1766 f.) is thoroughly Germanic. Thus, e.g., Saxo viii.269 ff., Hel. 150 ff., Gen. (B) 484 f. Cf. Gummere G. O. 305 f. (But also Æneid viii 508 f., 560 f.)

the prepositional phrase, Jul. 446: ic þec bālsige þurb þæs Hybstan meabt, Blickl. Hom. 189.7 ff., etc. (There may have been some confusion between bālsian and bealsian.) See Kress, Ueber den Gebrauch des Instrumentalis in der ags. Poesie, Marburg Diss. (1864), p. 24, n.; Bu. 369 f.; Delbrück, Synkretismus (1907), pp. 43, 41.

2137. þær unc hwile wæs hand gemæne. "There to us for a while was the blending of hands" (W. Morris), or . . . "battle joined" (Sedgefield). Cp. 2473; Wulfst. 162.7 f.: þæt wāþenge-wrixl weorðe gemæne þegene and þræle. The Ger. handgemein (werden) furnishes a semasiological, though not a syntactical parallel.

2152-2199. Bēowulf and Hygelāc.

2157. þæt ic his ærest ðē est gesæge. 'That I should first declare to thee his goodwill' (Schröer, Angl. xiii 342 f., Sedgefield, Cl. Hall) would be an altogether supererogatory declaration. Considering the regular way of introducing indirect discourse (see Intr. lvi), it appears that 2157 must contain a general statement of similar import to that of the following lines introduced by cwæð. The noun est may be 'bequest,' 'bequeathing' (cp. syllan 2160, almost = unnan), and bis . . . est may express 'its transmission,' i.e. its history (in which case the use of the adverb ærest suggests that of æfter in 12, 2731), cf. MPb. iii 264, 462 f. Or est may be interpreted as 'gracious gift,' — "that I should describe to thee his gracious gift" (B.-T. Suppl.). The separation of bis from est might possibly be cited in favor of the former explanation (see 2579). — When Grettir's mother presented him with a sword, she said: 'This sword was owned by Jökull, my father's father, and the earlier Vatnsdal men, in whose hands it was blessed with victory. I give it to you; use it well.' (Grettissaga, ch. 17.)

swift' and 'perfectly alike.' Kock² 117 ingeniously suggested the reading lungre, gelice, 'swift and all alike.' This explanation was called in question (MLN. xxxiv 133) on the ground that the two coordinate members of such asyndetic phrases (nouns or adjectives, see note on 398) are commonly synonymous or, at any rate, of distinctly similar scope, and one of them is normally a regular compound. However, as regards the latter objection, Professor Kock (in a private communication) points out that similar combinations are, in fact, not lacking, e.g. beald, geblētsod, Gr.-Wü. ii 240. 12, forbte, āfærde, Andr. 1340; and, as to the disparity of meaning between the two adjectives, an exception to the rule may be admitted in view of the fairly analogous cases of the type īsig ond ūtfūs 33, cf. Angl. xxix 381. It should be mentioned that an adj. lungor does not seem to be recorded in OE., except in the compound cēaslungor = 'contentious,' Rule of Chrodegang 19.12, but lungar, 'quick,' or 'strong' occurs in the Heliand; also OHG. lungar, 'quick,' 'strenuous.' (Cf. Kock L 5.44.4.43 f.; Cook's note on Chr. 167.) — Only in this passage does lāst (swaðe) weardian carry the meaning of 'follow,' see Gr. Spr.: weardian. On the form weardode, see Lang. §§ 19.3, 25.6. — æppelfealuwe; cf. Lüning L 7.28.208 f. In older German, apfelgrau is a favorite epithet of horses.

2172a. Hyrde ic þæt hē ðone healsbēah. See 2163 and note on 62 f. For the scansion of 2173a, wrætlicne wundur mādōðum, see Intr. lxxi & n. 1, T.C. § 19. — How many of the presents did Bēowulf keep for himself?

2179 ff. See note on Heremōd, p. 158.

Norðmercum, þāra londes is seofon þūsendo (= iii, c. 24: 'familiarum VII milium'). See note on 2994 f.

2198 f. ðōrum, i.e. Hygelāc; þām = þām þe (so 2779); sēlra, 'higher in rank.' Cp. 862 f.

The narrative of the Second Part is much broken up by digressions. The main story is contained in ll. 2200–31^a, 2278–2349^a, 2397–2424; 2510–2910^a; 3007^b–50, (3058–68,) 3076–3182; the previous history of the dragon hoard, in ll. 2231^b–77, 3051 (or 49^b)–57, 3069–75; episodes of Geatish history, in ll. 2354^b(49^b)–96, 2425–2509, (2611–25^a,) 2910^b–3007^a.

2200–2323. The robbing of the hoard and the ravages of the dragon.

2202 ff. On the historical allusions, see Intr. xl, ll. 2378 ff.

2207. syððan is used, in a way, correlatively with syððan 2201.

2209. wæs ðā frōd cyning, 'the king was then old.'

2213^b. stīg under læg. Type D4. (See 1416^b.)

2215 ff. The supplied readings are of course conjectural, but there are sufficient grounds for believing that they fairly represent the context. (forþ nē)h gefe(al)g/hæðnum horde, 'he made his way forwards near to the heathen hoard'; cp. 745, 2289 f. To judge from the facsimile, the MS. reading gefeng (so Holthausen, Schücking, Chambers) is by no means certain. — 2217. nē hē þæt syððan (bemāð), 'nor did he [the dragon] afterwards conceal it,' i.e. he showed it very plainly. For the use of þ(ēab) 2218, see 1102.

2222. sē ðe him sære gesceōd. him refers to the dragon. Cp. 2295.

2223. þ(ēow). A slave, a fugitive from justice, stole a costly vessel from the dragon's hoard, and upon presenting it to his master — one of Bēowulf's men — obtained his pardon, 2281 ff. The vessel was then sent to Bēowulf himself (2404 f.). In the meantime the dragon had commenced his reign of terror. [According to Lawrence, L 4.62a. 551, "A warrior [þegn] (not a slave), having committed a grievous crime, was forced to flee the court of which he was a member, in order to escape the vengeance of the man whom he had injured, or his kinsmen. He therefore plundered the dragon's hoard, so that he might get objects of value by means of which to compose the feud. The rings were apparently used as atonement for the crime, while the cup was given to the ruler [probably Bēowulf] who arranged the settlement." But why should that person be called a 'captive,' as Lawrence translates hæft 2408? (See Gloss.; may he have been a war prisoner?)]

2228–31^a. A hypothetical restoration of the missing words might be attempted as follows.

 wræcnon ætwand — him wæs wrōht) sceapen — (fūs on fēðe, þā hyne) se fār begeat.
 Sincfæt (firde).

With 2229^b cp. 2287, 2913; with 2230^a cp. 970. As to firde, see 156: feorran; also bæfde, or funde (proposed by Chambers) would be acceptable. — For 2227 the reading þæt (him from) ðām gyst(e gryre)-brōga stōd would seem natural (so, except for the omission of him, Grein¹). Cp. 2564 f., 783 f.; as to the meaning of gyst, see gryregiest 2560.

2231 ff. Supplemented by the account of an earlier stage (3049 ff., 3069 ff.), the history of the hoard is briefly this. Long, long ago (3050^a) the hoard had been placed in the earth by illustrious chieftains (3070). A curse had been laid on it. After a time, it was discovered and seized by certain warriors (2248 f.), who made good use of it. The last survivor of this race returned the treasures to the earth, placing them in a barrow or cave. There the dragon found them and kept watch over them for three hundred years (2278), until the theft of a cup aroused his anger and brought on the tragic fight, in which both Bēowulf and the dragon lost their lives. The hoard was finally buried in the ground with the ashes of the hero.

It will be observed that the somewhat complicated history of the hoard previous to its seizure by the dragon shows a rather modern motivation. A more primitive conception would have taken a treasure-guarding dragon as an ultimate fact. (Gnom. Cott. 26: draca sceal on blæwe, /frōd, fræt-wum wlanca.) Regarding the story of the last survivor, it has been suggested that, according to the original notion, the man provided in the cave a burial place for himself as well as his treasures, and was then transformed into a dragon (cp. the story of Fáfnir); see Ettmüller Transl. 177; Simrock L 3.21.201; Bu. 370; Bugge & Olrik L 4.51; also J. Grimm, Kleinere Schriften iv 184. — The cave of the dragon represents one of those ancient, imposing stone graves covered with a mound which by later generations were regarded as enta geweorc 2717 (cp. Saxo, Prefacio, p. 8; also the mod. Dan. jættestue, 'giants' chamber'; Grimm D.M. 442 f. [534 f.]), and which are found in the Scandinavian countries as well as in England. (S. Müller i 55 ff., 77 ff., 95, 122 f.; Wright L 9.3.71 ff.; cf. Schuchhardt, R.-L. iii 206 ff.) See Figure 4 inserted in this edition.

The inconsistencies discovered by Stjerna in regard to the place where the hoard was deposited, the nature of the objects composing it, and the depositors (Stjer. 37 ff., 136 ff.) cannot be admitted to exist. [For a study of the whole subject, see also Lawrence L 4.62a.]

2247-66. This characteristic, impressive elegy (see Intr. liv f., note on 2105 ff.) may be compared with the recital of the bereaved father's sorrow, 2444 ff., which is also virtually a sample of elegiac verse but nearer its prototype, viz. the lament for the dead or funeral dirge (see 1117 f., 3152 ff., 3171 ff.). Cf. L 4.126 (Schücking, Sieper).

2253^a. oððe fe(o)r(mie). Type C2.

2255-56^a. Sceal se hearda helm etc. The inf. wesan is understood. See 3021.

2258-60. gē swylce sēo herepād etc. Note the vocalic end rime, enjambement of alliteration, and the use of the same alliteration in two successive lines.

2259. ofer borda gebræc, 'over the crashing shields'; see 2980.

2261. æfter (wigfruman), lit. 'behind,' 'following,' hence 'along with' (JEGPb. vi 197).

2262. Næs (adv.) hearpan wyn. The verb 'is' is understood, — 'there is not . . .' See 2297; note on 811.

2263 f. nē gōd hafoc/geond sæl swingeð. It has been established that falcons were tamed in Sweden as early as the seventh century, probably for the chase (Stjer. 36). In England trained hawks (or falcons) seem to have been unknown before the second third of the eighth century, see Cook, The Date of the Ruthwell and Bewcastle Crosses (1912), pp. 275 ff. Cf. also Tupper's Riddles, p. 110; Roeder, R.-L. ii 7 f.

2278 f. þrēo hund wintra etc. Cp. 1497 f.

2283 f. Ðā wæs hord rāsod,/onboren bēaga hord. Merely recapitulation.

2286. fira fyrngeweorc; i.e., the fāted wāge 2282, drincfæt dýre 2306.

2287. wrōht wæs genīwad. Probably not 'strife was renewed,' but (lit.) 'strife arose which previously did not exist.' (See, however, also note on 2228 ff.)

2288. stonc ðā æfter stāne. See Gloss.: stincan. The verb form has been thought by various scholars to belong to stincan 'emit a smell' (MnE. stink) and has been credited with the unusual sense of 'sniffed,' 'followed the scent.' In case this interpretation is approved, (MHG.) Ortnit 570: als des wurmes boubet vernam des mannes smac might be cited as a partial parallel.

2292 f. sē ðe ('he whom') Waldendes/hylde gehealdeþ. Cp. 572 f. See Kock² 118 f., Intr. xlix.

than doubtful. getēon, 'decree,' 'allot,' is used absolutely, perhaps: 'deal with.' (Cp. 2222.)

2297. blāw is normally masc. (one instance of the neut.: Sievers, Beitr. ix 237) and appears as such in all the passages of our poem where the gender can be seen (2803, 2804, 3157, 2412?). Hence ealne should not be changed to eal. The metrical difficulty of the MS. reading is removed by the emendation ūtanweard (nom. sing., ref. to the dragon).

2298. wiges gefeh, that is to say, by anticipation.

2324-2537. Preparation for the dragon fight.

2324 ff. Was Bēowulf not at home? Did the author desire to have the tidings announced through a messenger? (Cf. Intr. xxi, cviii.)

2329-31. Bēowulf did not yet know the real cause of the dragon's ravages, see 2403 ff. The phrase ofer ealde riht, 'contrary to old law' (cp. Ags. Laws, Hloðb. & Eadr. 12: an eald riht), is here given a Christian interpretation.

2334. ēalond. Cf. Intr. xxii, xlvi n. 4. Neither Saxo's island (Sievers) nor the islands of Zealand (Boer) or Öland (Stjer. 91 f.), but 'land bordering on water' (Bu. Tid. 68, Bu. 5). An apparently analogous use of igland, ēalond: Andr. 15, Pboen. 9, 287, Sal. 1 was pointed out by Krapp, MPb. ii 403 f. (See also NED.: island.) Also insula is found in medieval Latin in this wider sense (cf. Beitr. xxxv 541). [Aant. 34.]

2354^b. Nō þæt læsest wæs . . .; cp. 1455. There follows here the second of the allusions to Hygelāc's last adventure, see Intr. xxxix f.

2358. hiorodryncum swealt, 'died by sword-drinks,' i.e. by the sword drinking his blood. Cf. Krüger, Beitr. ix 574; Rickert, MPb. ii 66 ff.; Arch. cxxvi 349 & n. 2. The nearest semasiological parallel of the unique compound is gryrum ecga 483.

2361 f. hæfde him on earne (āna) þritig/hildegeatwa . . . Here Bēowulf is seen to combine his proficiency in swimming with his thirty-men's strength. The extraordinary skill of ancient German tribes in swimming (crossing, e.g., the rivers Rhine and Danube in full armor) is testified to by Roman historians; cf. Müllenhoff L 9.14.1.334 f.; Bjarnason, R.-L. iii 150.

2367^a. Unless we assume this to be an isolated hypermetrical half-line (cf. Intr. lxxi & n. 1), the second part of sioleða cannot be connected with þō (Gr.: 'seals' waves,' see Varr.). Dietrich's explanation of the noun (ZfdA. xi 416) on the basis of sol 'mud,' 'wet sand' has been rightly abandoned, especially as the testimony of the form sole, Beow. 302 (MS.) cannot be accepted. Bugge (Zs. 214) suggested connection with the stem found in Go. anasilan 'become quiet (silent),' Swed. dial. sil 'quiet water.' If this etymology is correct, the specific basic meaning must have been greatly widened.

2379-96. On these Swedish wars, see Intr. xl, xlv.

2385-86a. feorhwunde hlēat,/sweordes swengum. This is Kock's punctuation, L 5.44.4.9. The verb hlēotan takes the gen., acc., or instr. (so Chr. 783). — orfeorme (MS.), which Brett tries to vindicate (MLR. xiv 2: 'without support' [?]), is precluded by considerations of meter and sense.

2392 f. Ēadgilse wearð . . . frēond; i.e., he supported Ēadgils. Cp. the pregnant meaning of lufian 1982, batian 2466, etc.

2418. hælo ābēad carries no reference to good luck needed on this particular occasion (as in 653), but means, quite in general, 'saluted.'

2423^b. nō þon lange presents, perhaps, a contamination of nō þon leng (the normal compar. in connection with þon) and nō . . . lange.

2425-2537. Bēowulf speaks.

2428 ff. Ic wæs syfanwintre etc. On the custom (practised with especial frequency in Scandinavia) of placing children in the homes of others for their education, see F. Roeder, Über die Erziehung der vornehmen ags. Jugend in fremden Häusern, 1910; cf. L. M. Larson, JEGPh. xi 141-43. The training of youths was supposed to begin at the age of seven; cf. Grimm R.A. 411. In the case of Bede we have his own testimony: mid þy ic wæs seofanwintre, þā wæs ic mid gimene mīnra māga seald tō fēðanne ond tō lārenne þām ārwyrrþan abbude Benedicte ond Cēolferþe æfter þon, OE. Bede 480.25 ff. (= v, c. 24).

2432 ff. næs ic him . . . lādra etc. Litotes. — The poet does not state directly that Bēowulf was brought up together with his uncles, but such is the natural interpretation. It involves chronological inconsistency, see Intr. xxxviii, xlv.

2435 ff. On the slaying of Herebeald by Hæðcyn, see Intr. xli f. Accidental homicide was punishable. Yet Hrēðel cannot fulfill the duty of avenging his son, because he must not lift his hand against his own kin. The king's morbid surrender to his grief is significant.

2436. (wæs . . .) morþorbed strêd; cf. T.C. §§ 1, 6. The phrase recalls the Lat. 'lectum sternere,' cf. Arch. cxxvi 353. The corresponding (hildbedd) stýred, Andr. 1092 is no doubt an error for strê(i)d (Cosijn, Beitr. xxi 15).

2438. frēawine is not entirely inappropriate, since Herebeald is the elder brother and heir presumptive.

2444. Swā bið geðmorlīc gomelum ceorle. Swā introduces an example or illustration (see note on 1769), in this instance the imaginary case of an old man sorrowing for his son who has been hanged (2444-62^a). It has been suggested (Holthausen, Beibl. iv 35; Gering, note) that the author was thinking of the story of Jormunrekr and his son Randvér (Völsungasaga, ch. 40; cp. Saxo viii 280). In both cases the misery of childlessness is emphasized (see 2451 ff.). But there is nothing in the Beowulfian allusion to indicate that the father himself caused the son to be hanged.

2446. þonne hē gyd wrece could be regarded as the continuation of (þæt) his byre rīde, which would account for the subjunctive (cf. Bu. Tid. 56). But wreceð may well be the correct reading.

2454. (hafað) dæda gefondad, '(has) experienced [evil] deeds'; cf. Arch. cxv 181.

2455-59. Gesyhð sorhcearig on his suna būre/wīnsele wēstne etc. A literal interpretation would be beset with difficulties. How could the deserted wine-hall be considered part of the son's būr? Why should a number of dead warriors be referred to? (If rīdend 2457^b be taken as 'the one hanging on the gallows,' swefað has to be changed to swefes, Angl. xxviii 446.) The explanation is that the old man falls into a reverie, seeing with his mind's eye the scene of desolation, or, in other words, the poet passes from the actual, specific situation to a typical motive of elegiac poetry; cf. Schücking, Est. xxxix 10. 2456^b-57^a. windge reste/rēte berofene, 'the wind-swept resting place deprived of joy.' The hall was also used for sleeping, as the happenings in Heorot show. We are reminded of Wand. 76: winde biwāune weallas stonðap, 86: burgwara breahntma lēase . . . A fem. windgerest (thus, e.g., Schücking, Sedgefield, Chambers) is exceedingly problematical. — (Longfellow was deeply impressed by this passage, as is shown by his alluding to it in Hyperion, Book ii, ch. 10.)

2460. Gewīteð þonne on sealman. The old man goes to his own chamber. sorhlēoð gæleð. We cannot be quite sure that this is not merely a high-flown expression implying 'lamentation'; cf. note on

2469 ff. See Intr. cxiii & n. 2 (parallel passages in Gen.).

2472-89. On this first series of Swedish wars, see Intr. xxxix.

2484 f. þā ic . . . gefrægn mæg ðærne . . . on bonan stælan, 'then, as I have heard, one kinsman [Hygelāc] avenged the other [Hæðcyn] on the slayer [Ongenþeow]'; cf. Aant. 23; Kock 232 f. Hygelāc did not perform the act personally, cf. note on 1968. A detailed narrative of these encounters is given in 2924 ff., 2961 ff.

2494. The Gifðas (Lat. 'Gepidae'), a tribe closely related to the Goths, left their seats near the mouth of the Vistula as early as the third century and settled in the district north of the lower Danube. Their kingdom was destroyed by the Lombards in the latter half of the sixth century. According to this passage, tradition still associated them with their old home.

2497 f. symle ic him on fēðan beforan wolde, / āna on orde. The true heroic note. Cp., e.g., Iliad vi 444 f.; Hildebr. 27 (ber was eo folches at ente . . .); Wald. i 18 ff.

2501 ff. Another allusion to Hygelāc's Frankish expedition. Dæghrefn, very likely the slayer of Hygelāc, was killed by Bēowulf, who took from him his sword (Nægling 2680). (Cf. Rie. Zs. 414; Arch. cxv 181.) It is decidedly interesting to note that Dæghrefn is a Frankish, non-Ags. name; cf. Schröder, Anz.f.d.A. xii 181, & Die deutschen Personennamen (Festrede, Göttingen, 1907), p. 9. — It is not quite certain that for dugeðum means 'in the presence of the hosts'; duguð may have been used in the abstract sense (cf. Gloss.).

2505. in campe (MS. cempan). As cempa has nowhere the function of a collective noun (cf. Gloss.: on), and in (on) is never found in the sense of 'among' with a plural denoting 'men,' cempan is unacceptable both as dat. sing. and dat. plur. Cf. Siev. xxxvi 409 f. The scribe evidently had in mind cempan of 2502.

2520 f. If gylpe is interpreted as 'proudly,' 'gloriously' (cp. 1749, 868; according to Chambers: 'in such a manner as to fulfill my boast'), no change of the MS. reading is needed.

2525. (Nelle ic beorges weard) oferfleôn fôtes trem, ac unc [furður] sceal . . . The critics' treatment of this line has been essentially influenced by the parallel passage, Mald. 247: (þæt ic beonon nelle) fleôn fôtes trym, ac wille furðor gān. For the scansion of 2525^a, see T.C. § 24.

2538-2711. The dragon fight. On the fight and on the dragon, see Intr. xxi ff., xxv, li; Par. § 7: Saxo ii 38 f. There are three distinct phases of this combat (just as of the fight with Grendel's mother); the second begins at 2591^b (or, a long digression intervening, at 2669), the third at 2688. Cf. Angl. xxxvi 193 n.3.

2538. Ārās ðā bī rōnde. The analogy of expressions like under helme (see Gloss.: under) lends some support to the view that bī rōnde means 'with the shield (by his side).' Yet the prepositional phrase may be directly connected with the verb (cp. 749), 'leaning on the shield.'

2558^b. hrūse dynede. In the Völsungasaga, ch. 18, at the approach of the dragon, varþ svá mikill landskjálfti, svá at öll jorþ skalf í nánd; cp. Lied vom Hürnen Seyfrid 21; Beues of Hamtoun (ed. Kölbing, E.E.T.S.) 2737 f.; Gottfried von Strassburg's Tristan 9052 ff. (Also Hel. 5801: thiu erða dunida [= Mat. xxviii 2]. Cf. Cook's notes on Christ 826, 881.)

2564. ecgum unglāw (MS.). In view of the doubtful status of the intensive prefix un- (see note on 357), an- has been substituted for it; anglāw 'very sharp' is certainly more satisfactory than B.-T.'s unglāw 'dull.' The physical sense of 'sharp,' though nowhere else recorded, may not unreasonably be attributed to glēaw, of which glāw is a variant form, see Lang. § 15 n. [Cf. also Gr. Spr.; Angl. xxix 380, Est. xxxix 466.]

2566. gestōd wið stēapne rōnd. Cp. 749. (Walþarius 529: '[quantus] in clipeum surgat.')

2573-75. ðær hē þy fyrste forman dōgore/wealdan mōste, swā him wyrd ne gescrāf/hrēð æt hilde. We may translate 'there he had to spend his time (Chambers), (on the first day, i.e. :) for the first time in his life, in such a way that fate did not assign to him glory in battle'; or — taking wealdan in an absolute sense — 'there and then (cp. bā ðær 331, 1280), for the first time, he had to manage (get along) without victory' (so substantially Müllenhoff xiv 233, Heyne). [MPh. iii 464: interpretation based on the usual meaning of mōt, 'may.']

2577. incge-lāfe (perhaps a compound). incge is as obscure as icge 1107, with which (as well as with isig 33) it has been conjecturally connected. [Note also Ex. 190: ingē men, 444: inca ðēode.] Inges, or Ingwines (see Proper Names, Intr. xxxvii, and note on Scyld, p. 123), is a desperate remedy for a desperate case. ē(a)cnan, icnan, or icnen (cp. 1663^a, 2140^a, 1104^b [MS.]) could also be proposed. Quite possibly the scribe did not understand the word.

2586-88. It is possible that grundwong refers to the dragon's cave (see 2770) or the ground in front of it (cf. Bu. Tid. 298). But it seems on the whole more natural that it should denote the same as eormengrund, ginne grund, i.e., earth in general (as explained by earlier scholars), or that the phrase 'give up that region,' in this context, implies 'leaving the earth' (Aant. 36). These lines and the following ones express nearly the same idea, the former negatively, the latter positively. Considering further the contrast between wolde 2588 and sceolde [ofer] willan 2589, we may venture to translate literally: 'that was not a pleasant (willing) journey (or, course of action) [i.e.] that the illustrious son of Ecgðeow was willing to leave the earth.' (ESt. xxxix 466, MLN. xxiv 94f.)

2595. sē ðe ær folce wēold, "he who used to rule a nation" (Cl. Hall). Cp. Æneid ii 554 ff. [Bu. Zs. 216; Aant. 36.]

2599^b. Hiora in ānum. See note on 100^b.

2600 f. sibb' æfre ne mæg/wiht onwenden. As the intrans. use of onwenden (i.e. 'change') is not authenticated, sibb is now commonly taken as acc., and wiht as nom. Still, the possibility of construing sibb as the subject of the clause is to be conceded; 'kinship can never change anything,' i.e. 'will always prevent a change (of heart).' For þām ðe wēl þenceð, see note on 287 ff.

2618 f. nō ymbe ðā fæhðe spræc, / þeah ðe hē [i.e. Wēohstān] his brōðor bearn ābredwade. his refers to Onela, the subject of spræc. "Onela's passive attitude was due to the fact that his nephew was a lawless exile, and so no longer entitled to protection from his kin." (Seeböhm L 9.17.66 f.) Herein is seen a breaking away from the primitive tribal custom, cf. Chadwick H.A. 347 f.

2623. gūðgewæda quite possibly stands for the acc. pl. -gewædu (Lang. § 18.2). Cp. 3134 f. (also 2028 f., 2067 f.).

2638. Ðē hē ūsic on herge gecēas, 'on this account he chose us (from) among the host.' This function of on is parallel to that found in combination with niman, see Gloss.: on; cp. Vita Gutblaci 1.7: him þā āne gecēas on þære mādēna hēape. Ðē is used correlatively with þē 2641; see Gloss.: sē, þē.

2640^a. onmunde ūsic mārða. onmunan (with or without the adj. wyrþe) in all other places means: 'consider worthy of.' Why not here? There is no basis for the meaning 'remind' very generally ascribed to it.

2640^b. mē implies 'to me as well as to the rest of us.'

2649^b. þenden hyt sý. See Varr. That hyt should be the 'proleptic' pronoun is not likely (though perhaps not impossible). The assumption of a noun hit(t) 'heat' — first definitely proposed by Grein — has been largely approved by modern scholars.

2651. lēofre. See Lang. § 25.2.

2658. duguðe, partit. gen. with hē āna, 2657.

2659 f. ūrum . . . bām, instead of unc bām or ūre bām* (cp. 2532, 596), is due to attraction. Examples of similar genit. combinations are cited by Cosijn (viii 573) and Chambers; cf. *P. Grdr.*² i 775. The general sense is of course: 'I will join you in the fight.' Gummere's rendering "My sword and helmet . . . for us both shall serve" is perhaps a little too precise. byrne and beaduscrūd are synonymous, see 1454^a (2321 f., 3163).

2663 ff. There is a singular lack of propriety in making young Wiglāf administer fatherly advice to Bēowulf. It is the author that speaks.

2683 ff. A sword in Bēowulf's hands was liable to break on account of his excessive strength. A typical feature frequently met with in old Germanic literature. (E.g., Saxo iv 115 (Offa); Volsungasaga, chs. 15, 35.) Cf. MPh. iii 464 f.; also Panzer 35, 41 f., 52 f., 281 n. As to Bēowulf's use of swords, see 435 ff., 679 ff., etc. [Müll. xiv 229; Jellinek & Kraus, ZfdA. xxxv 268 f.]

2697 ff. The statement is not quite clear logically. It involves the anticipation of the result of the action: sīo hand gebarn 2697^b, and a loose use of þæt 2699^a (see Gloss.). The meaning is this: 'he did not care for (i.e. aim at) the head [of the dragon], but his hand was burned in striking the monster a little lower down, etc.' Dragons are vulnerable in their lower parts; see especially Par. § 7: Saxo ii 38 f. (Frotho's dragon fight). Cf. Bu. 105. [Aant. 37: 'he did not care for his (own) head, i.e. life.']

2705. The context leaves it somewhat undecided whether Bēowulf or Wiglāf is the real victor in the combat with the dragon. But the poet manages to let Bēowulf have the honor of the final blow. Cp. 2835, 2876.

2706. ferh ellen wræc, 'strength drove out life.' Cp. Gen. 1385 f.: ýsa wræcon árleasra feorb/of flæschoman. [Heyne took ferh as the subject.]

2711-2820. Bēowulf's death.

2717-19. seah on enta geweorc,/hū dā stānbogan stapulum fæste/ēce eorðreced innan healde. One of the difficulties supposed to be in this passage (see Varr.) is removed by construing eorðreced (not stānbogan) as subject, and stānbogan as object (so Kemble, Arnold, Earle, Cl. Hall, Chambers, cf. Sedgfield). The stone chamber is indeed contained in the ever enduring (or, primeval) earth-house. The change from the preterite to the present is not unprecedented (Lang. § 25.6), and the opt. is naturally accounted for by the idea of examining implied by seah on (cp. nēosian . . . bū 115 f.). stānbogan seems to refer to a primitive form of vaulting such as is met with in English and Irish stone graves (S. Müller i 95). (B.-T.: 'natural stone arches,' Schü. Bd. 77 ff.: 'rock-curvatures,' i.e. 'cave.'). There is certainly no need to take stānbogan or stapulas as architectural terms pointing to the specific Roman art of vault-building (so Stjer. 37 ff.). stapulas may very well denote the upright stones. [Schü. Bd. 78 ff. regards stānbogan and eorðreced as parallel forms (nom.), supplies the object [it], viz. the enta geweorc, by which he understands the dragon hoard; seah on, 'looked in the direction of.' (?)]

2723. hilde sædne (commonly treated as a compound) is paralleled by Brun. 20: (wērig), wiggas sæd, Rid. 6.2: beadoweorca sæd.

2724 ff. On Bēowulf's farewell speeches, see Angl. xxxvi 193. (Arch. cxxvi 345.) On certain points of resemblance (due to imitation in some form) found in the story of Brynhild's death in Sigurparkv. en skamma, see Bugge, Beitr. xxii 129.

2724. hē ofer benne spræc. The original, local sense of ofer: 'over the wound' easily passes into the modal one: 'wounded as he was'; cf. Aant. 37; Arch. civ 287 ff. (A partial parallel: Jul. Caesar iii i. 259.) [Not: 'in spite of,' or 'concerning other things than' (so Corson, MLN. iii 97).]

2773 f. Ðā ic on hlǣwe gefrægn hord rēafian, / eald enta geweorc āne mannan. Following after a passage of description and reflection, a new and important event is introduced by means of the gefrægn-formula (cp. 2694, 2752). The fact that the 'man' is well known is ignored. See note on 100^b (ān). By enta geweorc either the hoard itself or the stone chamber is meant (cp. 2212 f.).

2778^a. ecg wæs iren. "The formula doubtless had come down from days when, as Tacitus says, metals were rare among the Germans and iron had to be imported." Gummere. (See 1459.) — Note the exceptional parenthetical clause in the first half-line; cf. Intr. lxvi, cvii.

2788. mid þām mǣðmum; i.e., 'with the treasures in his hands.'

2792^b. [Biorncyning spræc] is to be regarded as slightly better than Schücking's [þā se beorn gespræc]. gesprecan is regularly used with an object in Beowulf. (maðelode never occurs in the second half-line.) Cp. also 3094^b-5^a. — 2793^a. Some ineffectual speculations concerning a possible basis for the MS. reading giogode are put forward by Brett, MLR. xiv 2 f.

2802 ff. The erection of funeral mounds on elevated places near the sea is well attested for Old Norse and Ags. times. An almost literal parallel of this passage occurs Odyssey xxiv 80 ff.; cp. xi 75 ff.; Iliad vii 85 ff.; Aeneid vi 232 ff. Cf. Gummere G.O. 310 f.; Wright L 9.3. 469; Montelius 85.

2806. hit is used loosely without regard to the gender of hlǣw. See 779.

2821-3030^a. The spread of the sad tidings.

2836. Hūru þæt on lande lýt manna ðāh. We have the choice between (1) taking lýt as dat. with impers. ðēon, 'that has prospered with few men' (the accus. would be exceedingly questionable) and (2) construing lýt as the subject, assigning to the verb the sense of 'attain,' 'achieve' (cf. MPh, iii 465). In the latter case, it is true, geðēon would be expected.

2854. wehte, with 'durative' function, perhaps: 'tried to rouse (him)'; cp. 1511.

2858 f. wolde ðōm Godes dædum rædan/gumena gehwylcum . . . Cp. 1057 f. dædum carries instrum. sense.

2860. grim andswaru. Of course, not 'answer' in the strictly literal sense.

2880 f. symle wæs þȳ sēmra, þonne ic sweorde drep/ferhðgeniðlan. symle ('ever,' 'regularly') goes naturally with þonne. At the same time, the use of þȳ sēmra suggests a variant construction, viz. symle wæs þȳ sēmra, þȳ ic swiðor drep . . ., cp. Gen. 1325 f., Oros. 18.29 f. Did Wiglāf really mean to imply that he dealt the dragon several blows? (Cf. Schü. Sa. 89 n.) [Cosijn, Aant. 38 placed 2880^a in parenthesis with Bēowulf as subject.]

2884 ff. On the announcement of punishment to the faithless retainers, see Antiq. § 6; Par. § 10: Tacitus, Germ., cc. 6, 14; cf. Grimm R. A. 40 ff., 731 ff.; Kemble's note; Liebermann L 9.10.2.500, 507. Scherer L 5.5.490 saw in 2890 f. a hint to the cowards to end their own lives.

2888. idel hweorfan. It is doubtful whether the idea of 'going,' 'wandering' was still present in the phrase. Cp. MnE. go without, Ger. verlustig geben. Also Blickl. Hom. 97.24: þæt bē sceole þæs ealles idel hweorfan; Jul. 381.

2899. (sægde) ofer ealle. Earle: "in the hearing of all." See Gloss.: ofer; Finnsb. 22.

2910. lēofes ond lāðes, i.e. Bēowulf and the dragon.

2911 ff. Prediction of an outbreak of hostilities upon the death of the mighty king; cp. 2474; Ælfric, Saints xxvi 11 f.: Ceadwalla slōb and tō sceame tūcode þā Norðhymbran lēode æfter beora blāfordes fylle. The same prediction is made at Roland's death, Chanson de Roland 2921 ff.

2922-98. The (first) Swedish war; battle at Ravenswood; cp. 2472-89. Intr. xxxix, xlii f.; Par. § 6: Ynglingasaga, ch. 27. The only detailed account of a real battle in Beowulf.

An interesting parallel of the fight between Ongenþeow and the two brothers occurs in Saxo's account (iv 111 f.)¹ of the slaying of Athislus by the two Danish brothers Keto and Wigo. (Weyhe, ESt. xxxix 21 ff.) But apart from the detailed fighting scene, no similarities of importance (such as would indicate a genetic relation) can be recognized. Quite possibly this Athislus is, in fact, not a Swede, but the same as the Myrging Eadgils who is mentioned in Widsið (see Cha. Wid. 92-94, cf. Sarr. Kād. 56). — The fall of Agnerus² in a duel with Biarco (Saxo ii 56), which Bugge (17 ff.) adduced as an analogue, is rather far removed from the plot and setting of the Beowulf scene. — On some traces of the influence of Gen. 1960-2163, see ESt. xlii 329 f.

2928. him, probably dat. sing. (i. e., Hæðcen).

2940 f. Probably the text has suffered the loss of at least one line. Attempts at reconstruction by Bugge (107, 372), Holthausen (note). — Indulging in a mere conjecture, we might mention the possibility that the original reading was: sumon (dat. plur.) galgræowu/gifan tō gamene (cp. Gen. 2069 f., Mald. 46), gēoc eft gelamp, and that a scribe disturbed the alliteration by substituting frōfor for gēoc.

2943^b-44^a. horn ond bȳman, /gealdor. See 94^b-95^a.

2950. frōd felageðmor. Cp. Gen. 2224: gēomorfrōd.

2957^a. eorðweall. On earth-walls used as fortifications, see S. Müller ii 225 ff.

2957^b-59. Taking æht (= zht, Lang. § 9.3) as an analogical formation in place of the normal ðht, and construing segn as the subject of oferēodon, we obtain very satisfactory sense by the slight alteration Higelāce[s]. For other interpretations, see Varr.; also Schröer, Angl. xiii 346 ff.; Aant. 38; Schücking's and Sedgfield's notes; Green L 6.8.5.101, & L 5.55 ('then was (the) treasure offered (yielded) by the folk of the Swedes, their banner to H.').

2963 f. ðafian sceolde/Eafores āne dōm, 'he had to submit to Eofor's decision alone,' i.e., he was completely at the mercy of Eofor.

2973. hē, i.e. Ongenþeow; him, i.e. Wulf.

2994-95^a. sealde hiora gehwæðrum hund þūsenda/landes ond locenra bēaga. See note on 2195. In this instance the unit of value represented by the land and rings together is presumably the sceat(t). Cf. Rie. Zs. 415; Stevenson's ed. of Asser's Life of King Alfred (1904), p. 154, n. 6. (Of a valuable ring (bēag) given him by Eormanric, the Gothic king, Widsið says: on þām siex hund wæs smātes godes/geſcyred ſceatta ſcillingrime, Wids. 91 f., see Chambers's notes.)

2995^b. ne ðorfte him ðā lēan oðwitan. him, dat. sing. (Higelāc). Cp. 1048, 1884 f.

3005. æfter hāleða hryre, hwate Scildingas. See Varr. The line as it stands in the MS. has the air of an intruder. Müllenhoff (xiv 239) denounced it as a thoughtless repetition of 2052. It has been defended as a stray allusion to an ancient story of the Danish king Bēowulf, the hero of a dragon fight (cf. Intr. xxii), or to a possible tradition assigning to Bēowulf the overlordship over the Danes after the fall of Hrōðgār's race (Thorpe's note; cf. Sarrazin, ESt. xxiii 245; Chambers, with reference to Saxo iii 75; Brett, MLR. xiv 1 f.). But these suppositions are far from being substantiated. Besides, an unprejudiced reader would expect hwate Scildingas to be merely a variation of bord ond rice. Again, the emendation Scilſingas offers no appreciable improvement in sense, unless, by a violent transposition, we insert the line between 3001 and 3002. (A reference to a temporary authority possibly exercised over the Swedes, as a result of the alliance with Ēadgils, would be strange.) In the text the knot has been cut by introducing the alteration Sā-Gēatas. Cf. JEGPb. viii 259. [If still another conjecture may be offered, a reading: hwate (adv.) Scildingas/folcrēd fremede could be considered to contain a passing hint at the Grendel exploit. Similarly, Moore (JEGPb. xviii 212) suggests hwate[s] Scildingas, i.e. Hrōðgār's.]

3010. ānes hwæt. See Gloss.: ān.

3014. þā sceall brond fretan. In reality the treasures are buried in the mound (3163 ff.). At least, we cannot be quite sure that the arms with which the pyre is hung (3139 f.) have also been taken from the dragon's hoard. There is no necessity to assume (with Stjerna, chs. 6, 8) an imperfect combination of duplicate lays describing different modes of funeral rites. Even granting that the poet was guilty of a slight inaccuracy, the main idea he wished to convey at this point seems to have been that the dearly bought treasures are to be sacrificed with the dead hero. See note on 3137 ff.

3018 f. ac sceal geðmormōd golde berēafod . . . elland tredan. Cp. Iliad xxiv 730 ff. (lamentation of Andromache); Gen. 1969 ff.: sceolde forht monig/blāchlēor ides bifende gān/on fremdes fæðm. — oft nalles æne. So El. 1252, Chr. (iii) 1194; ib. 1170: monge nales fēa (see Cook's note on Greek parallels); cp. Jul. 356.

3022. (gār) morgenceald. Battle begins in the morning. Cf. ESt. xlii 335.

3024-27. Of the numerous occasions on which the animals of prey are introduced (in Gen., Ex., Brun., Mald., El., Jud., Finnsb.), this is the only one where raven and eagle hold a conversation. The bold and brilliant picture reminds us not only of 'The Twa Corbies' ('The Three Ravens'), but of ON. literature (e.g. Brot af Sigurþarkv. 13, Helgakv. Hund. i 5a); cf. Sarrazin, ESt. xxiii 255; MLN. xvi 18.

3030^b-3136. Preliminaries of the closing scene.

3034. hlimbed healdan. See 2901 f.; note on 964.

3038. Ær hī þær gesēgan. The transmitted text should not be tampered with (see Varr.). Even before they came upon Bēowulf, the warriors noticed from a distance the enormously long dragon.

3049 f. swā hie wið eorðan fæðm/þūsend wintra þær eardodon. This does not necessarily mean that the treasures had remained all that time in the same burial cave, but rather that they had lain 'a thousand years' in the bosom of the earth — unless we assume forgetfulness on the part of the author. See note on 2231 ff.

3051 ff. The curse laid on the gold is first mentioned in a substantially heathen fashion, though with a saving clause of Christian tenor (3054^b-57), and, later, is clothed in a Christian formula (3071-73). (Note the term hæðen gold 2276, cp. 2216.) Cf. Angl. xxxv 269, xxxvi 171. — The curse resting on the Niblung gold in ON. and MHG. literary tradition is a well-known parallel of the general motive. That the circumstantial history of the Niblung hoard could be traced in Beowulf was an erroneous view of Heinzel's (Anz.f.d.A. xv 169 f.).

3051. þonne, 'further,' 'moreover.' ēacencræftig is probably to be construed predicatively (parallel with galdre bewunden), 'of great power,' i.e. powerfully protected. [According to Bugge (374), þonne denotes the time when the treasures were placed in the ground; Aant. 40: 'ante tot annos.']

3058-62^a. A recapitulating remark on the end of Bēowulf and of the dragon. The moralizing author denies the dragon the right to the guarding of the hoard: unrihte, 3059. Weard ær ofslōh/fēara sumne, i.e., the dragon had slain Bēowulf; fēara sumne, 'one and few others' (cp. 1412), by bold litotes, means 'one' only (Aant. 40). (That the dragon was supposed to have killed others on previous occasions, is very unlikely.) Revenge was inflicted on him by Bēowulf (and Wiglāf). [Different interpretations: Bu. 109, 375; Heinzel, Anz.fidA. xv 169 f., see note on 3051 ff.]

3067^b-68. He did not know the ultimate cause of his death (þurh hwæt . . .), i.e., he was ignorant of the ancient spell. — It might be questioned why the curse which was visited on Bēowulf and the dragon, did not affect those who had seized the hoard in former times, 2248 f. (Or did it manifest itself in the extinction of that race?) Perhaps the poet failed to take this motive into account until he came to relate the hero's death.

3069^a. Swā is to be connected with þæt 3071. [Holthausen construes swā as correlative with swā 3066, placing 3067^b-68 in parenthesis.]

3072. hergum and hellbendum are used synonymously. As heathen deities were made into devils (gāstbona 177), their places of worship were identified with hell. Cp. þærgtrafum 175 with helltrafum, Andr. 1691. [Brett, MLR. xiv 5 f.: geheaðerod = 'fenced out from . . .'(?)]

3074-75. Næs hē goldhwæte gearwor hæfde/āgendes ēst ær gescēawod. This passage remains, in Bugge's words, a 'locus desperatus.' Cosijn's rendering 'by no means had Bēowulf with gold-greedy eyes before [his death] surveyed the owner's [i.e. the dragon's] inheritance more accurately' (Aant. 41) makes at least passable sense. (Cp. 2748.) Does the compar. gearwor stand for the positive? — Or is the meaning this that 'he had not seen the treasure before more completely than now [at his death],' implying that he had never seen it in its entirety? In its general intent the statement is evidently a declaration of Bēowulf's virtual innocence. — Decidedly tempting is the emendation goldzēhte. The interpretation of āgend as a term for God seems without foundation. [Cf. further: Bu. Tid. 62 f.; Müll. xiv 241; Rie. Zs. 416; Siev. ix 143; ten Brink 145; Bu. 373 f.; Schü. xxxix 111; Schücking's and Chambers's notes; Brett, MLR. xiv 6; Moore, JEGPh.

3079 ff. Ne meahthon wē gelæran etc. See 1994 ff.

3104. þæt gē . . . scēawiað, 'so that (= 'and then') you will see.' Contrast with 2747 f.

3112. bælwudu. See Par. § 10: Tacitus, Germ., c. 27.

3115^a. (weaxan wonna lēg). To get rid of the troublesome parenthesis, critics (Grein Spr., Cosijn viii 574; Holthausen, Arch. cxxi 293f.) have conjectured the existence of a verb weaxan 'consume,' on the basis of the (somewhat inconclusive) gloss waxgeorn = 'edax,' Wr.-Wü. i 102.13, the Go. verbs wizōn, frawisan, etc. (The identification of the verb with wascan 'wash,' 'bathe,' 'envelop' suggested by Earle and Sedgefield is certainly far-fetched.) However, if an ordinary variation of 3114^b were intended, we might expect either an adj. and noun (e.g. wonna æled), or a noun and verb (e.g. wælfyr þeccan, cp. 3014 f., 3132 f.). Perhaps the co-ordinate clause may be considered functionally equivalent to a subordinated, appositional phrase, i. e. weaxende lēg. (Note OE. Bede 118.4: þæt . . . ond þæt lēg swiðe wēox ond miçlade.) 3121 f. ācigde of corðre cyniges þegnas/syfone (tð)somne. If the idea of motion is considered negligible in this context, (æt)somne may be admitted (cp. 2847).

3126. Næs ðā on hlytme, 'it was not decided by lot,' i. e., they were all very eager. Cf. ESl. xxxix 432.

3127. orwearde, asn., refers to hord; ænigne dæl is co-ordinate with the understood object hit, see note on 694^b. The construction could easily be simplified by emending to orweardne, and lænne 3129. (Cf. also note on 48, and 2841.)

3137-3182. Bēowulf's funeral obsequies.¹

We know from Tacitus that the Germans of his time burned their dead. (See Germ., c. 27, Par. § 10, and Müllenhoff's commentary, L 9. 14. 1.)

In the Scandinavian countries¹ the custom of burning was common from the latter half of the bronze age, and though it was temporarily interrupted, more or less, by a period of inhumation, it was for centuries previous to the Viking era the recognized practice in most districts. Splendid examples of this method of disposing of the departed ones — being the more poetical and intrinsically spiritual one — are found in the ON. literature, such as the burning of Brynhildr and Sigurðr (Sigurðarkv. en skamma 64 ff.) and that of Harald Hildetán (Saxo viii 264, Par. § 7); see also note on Scyld (p. 122).

The heathen Anglo-Saxons practised both cremation and interment, the latter mode apparently prevailing in the southern districts (Chadwick Or. 73 ff.), but after their conversion to Christianity² cremation was of course entirely given up. Yet in their great epos of post-heathen times we find the heathen and heroic practice described in all its impressive splendor.³

The obsequies of Bēowulf remind us in several respects of the famous funeral ceremonies of the classical epics (Iliad xxiii 138 ff., xxiv 785 ff.; Odyssey xxiv 43 ff.; Æneid vi 176 ff., xi 59 ff.). More interesting still, certain important features are paralleled by the funeral of Attila (Jordanes, c. 49, Par. § 12), which was carried out after the Gothic fashion — the main points of difference being that Attila's body is not burned but buried, and that the mourning horsemen's songs of praise do not accompany the final ceremony but represent an initial, separate act of the funeral rites.

It is the peculiarity of the Beowulf account that two distinct and, as it were, parallel funeral ceremonies are related in detail, the burning and the consigning of the ashes to the monumental mound, and that the greater emphasis is placed on the closing stage, which is made the occasion of rehearsing solemn and inspiring songs sounding an almost Christian note. (Only the former ceremony takes place in the case of the less pompous obsequies of Hnæf and the other fallen warriors of the Finn tale, 1108 ff.)

According to Stjerna (ch. 8) the royal barrow at Gamla Upsala, called Odinshög, which was constructed about 500 A.D., is an exact counterpart of Bēowulf's mound.

² Among the continental Saxons the Church labored to suppress the 'heathen' rite as late as the end of the 8th century. (Grimm L 9.2.259.)

be uttered by a woman is what we expect, see also 3016 ff. If that aged woman was really thought of as Bēowulf's widow (see, e.g., Bu. 111; cp. ll. 2369 ff.?), she was introduced, awkwardly enough, merely in the interest of a conventional motive.

3167 f. Cp. Grettisaga, ch. 18.16: 'all treasure which is hidden in the earth or buried in a howe is in a wrong place.'

3173-76^a. The lines setting forth the praise of Bēowulf by his faithful thanes sound like an echo of divine service, and closely resemble Gen. 1 ff., 15 ff.; cf. ESt. xlii 327, Angl. xxxv 126 f. See 'The Order of the Holy Communion' in the Book of Common Prayer ('It is very meet, right, and our bounden duty, etc.').

3180 f. wyruldcyning[a]/manna mildust. manna, which seems to strengthen the superl. idea ('the mildest of all'), is fundamentally an amplifying (partit.) element. Cp. (OHG.) Wessobrunner Gebet 7 f.: almahrico Cot./manno miltisto, Beow. 3098 f., 2645, also 155, 1108 f., 2250 f., 2887, etc. manna mildost occurs also Ex. 550. As to wyruldcyning[a], cp. 1684 f.

3182. lofgeornost. The reference is either to deeds of valor (cp. 1387 ff., OE. Bede 92.4: se gylpgeornesta [cyning] = 'gloriae cupidissimus' i, c. 34) or to the king's liberality toward his men (see 1719 f., cp. lofgeorn, Ben. R. (ed. Schröer) 54.9, 55.3 = 'prodigus,' also lofdædum, Beow. 24).

THE FIGHT AT FINNSBURG

INTRODUCTION

I. The Finn Legend¹

1. The Story

By a comparison of the Finn Episode of Beowulf and the Fragment of The Fight at Finnsburg the perplexing obscurities of both may be cleared up, at least to a considerable extent.

Of the two fights alluded to in the Episode (B. 1069 f.; 1151 f.) it is clearly the former which the fragmentary poem describes, so that the events of the Episode must be considered to follow those of the Fragment.² A brief outline of the story is subjoined.

[The antecedents of the conflict are lost to us. But evidently Hildeburh is in some way connected with the hostility between her brother and her husband. Maybe, there existed an old feud between the two tribes, and the Danish princess had been given in marriage to the Frisian chief in the hope of securing permanent peace, but with the same grievous result as in the case of Frēawaru (see Beow. Intr. xxxiv f.). Or the ill feeling may have dated from the wedding feast (as in the Völsungasaga, ch. 3). It is possible also — though far from probable — that Hildeburh had been abducted like Hildir, Hogni's daughter, in Snorri's Edda (Skáldsk., ch. 47) and Hilde, Hagene's daughter (and, under different circumstances, Kūdrūn) in the MHG. epic of Kudrun. At any rate, at least fifteen or twenty years must have elapsed after the marriage, since Hildeburh's son falls in the battle (B. ll. 1074, 1115).]

(The Fragment:) A band of sixty Danes under their chief Hnæf find themselves attacked before daybreak in the hall of the Frisian king Finn, whom they have come to visit. [That the assault was premeditated by

² Möller (who has been followed by some others) tried to prove that the Fragment is concerned with still another battle, one, that is, in which Hengest fell and which — if related in the Beowulf Episode — would have found its place between ll. 1145 and 1146. That the heapogeong cyning of the Fragment, l. 2 is Hengest, is also the view of Brandl (cf. Clarke L 4.76.180), who assumes, however, that after Hnæf's fall Hengest, his successor, continued the fight until the treaty was arranged. (Grundtvig in his edition inserted the Fragment between ll. 1106 and 1107 of the Beowulf.)

Finn is possibly to be inferred from the opening lines of the Fragment and from B. 1125 ff., see Notes, p. 168.¹) Five days they fight without loss against the Frisians, but (here the Episode sets in:) at the end Hnæf and many of his men as well as of the Frisians are counted among the dead. In this state of exhaustion Finn concludes a treaty with Hengest, who has assumed command over the Danes. The fallen warriors of both tribes are burned together amid appropriate ceremonies. Hengest with his men stays in Friesland during the winter. But deep in his heart burns the thought of revenge. The day of reckoning comes when the Danes Gūðlāf and Ōslāf returning from a visit to their native land² bring with them a fresh company of fighters and, unable to keep any longer the silence imposed upon them by the terms of the treaty, openly rebuke their old foes. Finn is set upon (B. 1068) and slain, and Hildeburh together with the royal treasure of the Frisians carried home to the land of the Danes. [The part played by Hengest in the last act of the tragedy is rather obscure, see Notes, pp. 169 f.]

2. The Contending Parties

On one side we find the 'Half Danes' (B. 1069), or 'Danes' (1090, 1158), also loosely called Scyldingas (1069, 1108, 1154),³ with their king Hnæf, Hōc's son,⁴ and his chief thane Hengest. Other Danish warriors mentioned by name are Gūðlāf (1148, F. 16), Ōslāf (1148; in the Fragment, l. 16: Orðlāf), Sigferð of the tribe of the Secgan (F. 15, 24), Ēaha (F. 15), and (probably) Hūnlāfing (B. 1143). Their enemies are the Frisians (1093, 1104) or Ēotan, 'Jutes' (1072, 1088, 1141, 1145) under King Finn, Folcwalda's son, among whose retainers two only receive individual mention, namely Gārulf, son of Gūðlāf (F. 18, 31, 33), and Gūðere (F. 18). Between the two parties stands Hildeburh, the wife of Finn (B. 1153) and — as we gather from l. 1074 (and 1114, 1117) — sister of Hnæf.

The scene is in Friesland, at the residence of Finn.

It thus appears that the war is waged between a minor branch of the great Danish nation, the one which is referred to in Widsið by the term Hōcingas,⁵ and which seems to have been associated with the tribe of the Secgan,⁶ and the Frisians, i.e., according to the current view, the 'East' Frisians between the Zuider Zee and the river Ems (and on the neighboring islands). The interchangeable use of the names 'Frisians' and 'Jutes'

⁴ Cp. B. 1076 (1074, 1114, 1117).

⁵ Wids. 29: Hnæf [wōold] Hōcingum.

⁶ Or Sycgan; Wids. 31: Sæferð [wōold] Sycgum, cp. Finnsb. 24.

shows that the Jutes, that is the West Germanic tribe which settled in Kent and adjacent parts (Baeda, H.E. i, c. 15), were conceived of as quite closely related to the Frisians.¹

The name of the Danish warrior Ēaha (by emendation: *Ēawa*²) has been connected with the 'Ingvaeonic' Aviones (Tacitus, Germ., c. 40; see Par. § 10).

However, neither 'Frisians' nor 'Danes' are mentioned in the Fragment. It has even been argued that the Danish nationality of Hnæf and Hengest is a Beowulfian innovation,³ and that the enemies of the Frisians (in history and legend) were really the Chauci, their eastern neighbors, or some other Ingvaeonic people. But the names Gūplāf, Ordlāf (Hūnlāfing) make us think of Danish tradition.⁴

The point of view is distinctly — almost patriotically — Danish. The valor and loyalty of Hnæf's retainers (in the Fragment), Hildeburh's sorrow and Hengest's longing for vengeance (in the Episode) are uppermost in the minds of the poets. It is not without significance, perhaps, that all the direct speech (in the Fragment) has been assigned to the Danes, whereas the utterances of the Frisians are reported as indirect discourse only. On the other hand, no concealment is made of the fact that the 'Jutes' have shown bad faith (B. 1071 f.). The final attack on Finn and his men, culminating in the complete victory of the Danes, is regarded as the main point of the story in Beowulf (see Notes, p. 165). Finn himself, the husband of Hildeburh, plays such an insignificant part⁵ that the term 'Finn legend' is virtually a misnomer, though 'The Fight at Finns-burg' is an appropriate enough title for the fragmentary poem such as we know it.

¹ This seems to be due to the fact that the Jutes, for some time previous to their migration to Britain, had lived in the vicinity of the Frisians. Cf. Hoops, Waldbäume und Kulturpflanzen im germ. Altertum, p. 585; Jordan, Verhandlungen der 49. Versammlung (1907) deutscher Philologen und Schulmänner, 1908, pp. 138-40. See also Siebs, *P. Grdr.*² i 1158, in² 524; Einkenel, Angl. xxxv 419. The Jutes are called by Baeda (H.E. i, c. 15; iv, c. 14 (16)): luti, luta — in certain sixth century Latin texts: Euti*, Euthiones* —; in OE.: Angl. Ēote, Īote (Īotan), LWS. Țte, Țtan. (Björkman L 4.74.2; Cha. Wid. 237 ff.; cf. Intr. xlvi.) Of the forms used in Beowulf, the gen. pl. Ēotena is entirely regular; the dat. pl. Ēotenum (instead of Ēotum) 1145 (also 902) is to be explained by the analogical influence of the gen. ending (cf. Siev. § 277 n. 1), unless it is due merely to scribal confusion with the noun eotenas. That really in all the instances the eotenas 'giants,' hence 'enemies' (?) were meant (Rieger Zs. 398 ff.), cannot be admitted. [Various interpretations of 'Eotenas' are enumerated by Möller, pp. 96 ff.] — A state of friction between the 'Jutes' and the Danes is possibly hinted at in the first Heremöd episode, l. 902, see Notes, p. 160.

3. Possible Parallels and Genesis of the Legend

The popularity of the legend is attested not only by the preservation of two (in a measure) parallel versions, but also by the mention of certain of its names in Widsið (27: Finn Folcwalding [wēold] Frēsna cynne, 29: Hnæf Hōcingum, 31: Sāferð Sycgum)¹ and by the allusion to Hnæf, Hōc's son, which is implied in the use of the names Huochingus [father] and Nebi (Hnabi) [son] occurring in the Alemannic ducal line of the eighth century.² The memory of the Frisian king Finn crops up in a genealogy of Nennius' Historia Britonum where Finn the son of Folcwald has been introduced in place of Finn the son of God(w)ulf as known from WS. and Northumbr. (also ON.) genealogies (cf. Par. §§ 1, 3, 5, 8.1).

But no clear traces of any version of the story itself besides the Anglo-Saxon specimens have been recovered. The noteworthy points of agreement between the 'Fight at Finnsburg' and the second part of the Nibelungenlied — as regards the general situation, the relation between the principal persons, the night watch of the two warriors,³ the mighty hall fight⁴ — are no proof that the Finnsburg Fight is an old variant of a continuation of the Sigfrid legend⁵ as it was before it became connected with the legend of the Burgundians (Boer, LF. 4.18). Nor can the analogies of the great battle in which Hrólfr Kraki fell (Hrólfs saga, chs. 31–34; Saxo ii 58 ff.),⁶ viz. the Danish nationality of the party suffering the treacherous attack, the family connection between the two kings (brothers-in-law), the attack at night, the rousing of the sleepers, their glorious defense (although outside the hall), the stirring words of exhortation with an appeal to gratitude and loyalty, be construed as evidence of a genetic relation. It is more reasonable to hold that chance similarity in the basic elements of the material (reflecting, in the last analysis, actual conditions of life) naturally resulted in a parallelism of exposition and treatment.

² Thegan's Life of Louis the Pious, § 2: 'Godefridus dux genuit Huochingum, Huochingus genuit Nebi, Nebi genuit Immam, Imma vero genuit Hiltigardam, beatissimam reginam.' (Müllenhoff, ZfdA. xi 282, xii 285.) On the testimony relating to the names Gūplāf, Ordlāf, Hūnlāfing, see above, p. 221, n. 4. That the 'Finn legend' remained popular in Essex, Hampshire, and adjoining districts, may be inferred from the frequent use encountered there of proper names pertaining to it (Binz 179 ff.). For the latest allusion to Hūnlāf, see Intr. xxxiv n. 4.

It is commonly supposed that the Finn tale originated among the Ingvaëonic (North Sea) peoples and was carried from Friesland both to Upper Germany (as far as the Lake of Constance¹) and to the new home of the Anglo-Saxons. If so, the surprisingly thorough Danification of the story in England must have occasioned alterations of considerable importance.

That there was a historical foundation for this recital of warlike encounters among Germanic coast tribes, we may readily believe.² But no definite event is known to us that could have served as the immediate model. Taking the Beowulfian version at its full value, an actual parallel of a war between Danes (Geats) and Frisians (and Franks) is supplied by the expedition of Chochilaicus (Hygelāc), see Intr. xxxix f., xlvi. The identification of Hengest with his better known namesake, who together with his brother Horsa led the Jutes to Britain, has been repeatedly proposed;³ but we should certainly expect a Jutish Hengest to have sided with the Frisians of our Finn tale.⁴

Mythological interpretations⁵ may be safely disregarded.

4. Germanic Character

None of the Anglo-Saxon poems equals the 'Finn tale' in its thorough Germanic and heroic character. The motives and situations are genuinely typical, — mutual loyalty of lord and retainer; bloody feud between relatives by marriage; tragic conflict of duties (the sacred duty of revenge and the obligation of sworn pledges); the rejoicing in the tumult and pageantry of battle with its birds of prey hovering over the scene, its speeches of exhortation and challenge, the desperate, stubborn defense of the hall until the bitter end, the hardihood of eager youths unwilling to listen to the entreaties of solicitous elders; the burning of the dead amidst lamentations and funeral songs; the faint echoes of merriment and feasting in the hall of the generous chief; and withal a deep undertone of general sadness born of the conviction that joy is bound to turn into sorrow (B. 1078 ff.).

By virtue of its heroic spirit of unwavering valor and its central motive of loyalty the late historical poem of Maldon alone can be said to approach

² "During the Middle Ages, up to the end of the eleventh century, the Danes were the worst enemies of the Frisians." Siebs, *P. Grdr.*² ii^a 524.

⁴ Is it possible that the Ags. version embodies two distinct strata of early legend reflecting different phases of the history of the Jutes? The settlement of the tribe in Jutland might have tended to link them to the Danes (hence Hengest's position); on the other hand, the sojourn of the Jutes in proximity to the Frisians was apt to suggest an especially close relation between these two tribes (hence Ēotan = Frȳsan).

⁵ Grimm D.M. 181 (219); Kemble ii, pp. xlvii f.; Möller 70 ff.; ten Brink, *P. Grdr.*¹ ii^a 535; Much, Arch. cviii 406 ff.

the Finn poems, and a worthy companion in prose, albeit plain in structure and uncouth in expression, is easily recognized in the story of Cynewulf and Cyneheard as told in the OE. Chronicle (A.D. 755).

II. Relation between the two Anglo-Saxon Versions

It is possible that the poem of which the fragmentary Fight at Finnsburg remains, covered as much narrative ground as the Episode and numbered say about three hundred lines. In what particular form the tale was known to the author of Beowulf, cannot be determined. But, at all events, we find no discrepancies in subject-matter between the two versions.¹ At the same time there is no doubt that the author of the Episode has considerably remodeled his material. The Fragment shows the manner of an independent poem, being in fact, apart from the OHG. Hildebrandslied, the only specimen in West Germanic literature of the short heroic epic lay.² The Episode has been adjusted to its subordinate position in the Beowulf epos. It presents in part brief, allusive summaries, passing over the matter of fighting, both at the beginning and at the end, in the most cursory fashion. It has discarded direct discourse. It all but limits its range of actors to the two outstanding figures of Hildeburh and Hengest.³ But it depicts with evident sympathy their state of mind, brings out the tragic element of the situation, intersperses general reflections, and finds room for picturesque description. In a word, the direct, energetic, dramatic manner (such as we find in the Fragment) has yielded to a somewhat more abstract, sentimental, and 'literary' treatment of the story.⁴

Entirely in the manner of the Beowulf is the litotes in ll. 1071 f., 1076 f., and so are summarizing, retrospective, or semi-explanatory clauses like sume on wale crungon 1113, was hira blād scacen 1124, ne meahthe wāfre mōd/sorhabban in hrepre 1150, bat was geōmuru ides 1075 (cp. 814 f., 2564 f., 2981, 1727, 11, 1812, 1250, 1372; Angl. xxviii 444 f., Intr. lxi f.). On the literary formula gāsta gifrost 1123, see Intr. cxv n. 3; on the figurative use of (foldan) bearm, see Arch. cxxvi 353.

Remarkable nonce words of the Episode — some of them still obscure — are: unslitme 1097, unhlitme 1129, icge 1107, bengeat 1121, lāōbite 1122, walfjag 1128, torngemōt 1140, woroldrāden 1142, ferhōfrec 1146, sweord-bealo 1147, ingesteald 1155, unsynnum 1072; see also 1106 and note. The relatively numerous words recorded in the Fragment only are listed in

² A poem, that is, which was not meant to be read but to be recited.

the Glossary of Finnsburg. An interesting lexical agreement between the two versions is seen in the use of eorðcýning 1155, eorðbüend, F. 32; hilde-lōma 1143 (cp. 2583, 1523), swurdlōma, F. 35.

III. The Fight at Finnsburg

The Fight at Finnsburg, although a fragment, is in a way the most perfect of the three Old English battle poems. Less polished and rhetorical than the Battle of Brunanburh, at the same time truer to the old form of verse and style than the Battle of Maldon, it shows complete harmony between subject-matter and form.

It is emphatically a poem of action and moves on directly and swiftly, the consecutive stages being commonly marked by the simple connective ðā. Only once does it pause for an exclamation voicing the scop's jubilant admiration of the heroes (37 ff.). Nearly one half of the fragment consists of speech, by which the action is carried on in a wonderfully vivid fashion. The apparent repetition of the question¹ in the answer (1, 4) and the (originally) unassigned speech (24 ff., see note) recall the well-known ballad practice. Quite characteristic are the asyndetic, parallel half-lines (5, 6, 11, 12) following upon each other like short, sharp battle shouts, and the rhetorical repetition and parallelism (37-40) eloquently symbolizing deep emotion. The poet is not sparing in the use of expressive epithets, kennings, and other compounds, nor does he neglect the essential device of variation. Indeed, the general impression is not that of crude workmanship.

The comparative frequency of end-stopped verses is largely accounted for by the use of direct discourse and by the number of distinct divisions of the narrative (introduced by ðā). Several groups of 4 lines could be easily arranged as stanzas: 14-17, 18-21, 24-27, 37-40; similarly 3-line stanzas could be made out: 10-12, 43-45, 46-48.²

Of the rhythmical types the jerky C and the rousing B varieties hold prominent places. We may note especially the striking recurrence of B or C in seven consecutive a-lines (16-22), and in six b-lines: 40-45. Use of the same type in both half-lines is found six times: 4, 11, 30, 37, 40, 43. A rather heavy thesis marks the opening of C in 8^b and 37^a (cp. Beow. 1027^a, 38^a), and an isolated hypermetrical type is introduced on a highly appropriate occasion: 39^a. (Perhaps also 13^a must be admitted to be hypermetrical.) Irregularities of alliteration: 22^a, 46^a (see T.C. § 18), 28^b, 41^b (T.C. § 27), 39^a (cf. Siev. A.M. § 93) could be set right by transposition or other alterations (see Varr.), but are perhaps naturally explained by the less literary character of this poem which presupposes a far less strictly regulated oral practice. (For the alliteration of l. 11, see note on Beow. 489 f.)

² Möller's violent reconstruction is found in his Altengl. Volksepos ii, pp. vii-ix.

bad condition, shows various late forms, such as Finnsburuh 36 (for Finnes-, cf. Weyhe, Beitr. xxx 86 n. 1; quite exceptional), hlynnæð 6 (for hlyneð, cf. Siev. § 410 n. 3), mænig 13 (cf. Lang. § 7 n. 1), sceft 7 (Lang. § 8.4), scýneð 7 (Lang. § 3.1), also non-WS. forms: cweþ 24 (Lang. § 8.1, Siev. § 391 n. 10), wæg 43 (Lang. § 7.1), *ſæla*¹ 25, 33, næfre 39 (Kent., cf. Siev. § 151; but 37: næfre), heordra 26 (So. Northumbr., cf. Bülb. § 144), hwearflicra 34 (perh. ea = eo, No. Northumbr., cf. Bülb. § 140), swurd 15 (Lang. § 8.6; 13: swurd). (The analogical duru 42, instead of dura, is in a line with similar forms in Beowulf, 344, 1278; cf. Lang. § 18.2.) But definite localization and dating (both of the Lambeth MS. and of its prototype) are impossible.² General considerations favor, of course, an early date for the original lay, as early at least as that of Beowulf.

Some half-lines of a conventional character are common to Beowulf and Finnsburg: F. 19^b = B. 740^b, 2286^b, F. 38^b = B. 1012^b, F. 46^b = B. 610^a, 1832^a, 2981^a. The more striking agreement in the sentences, F. 37 f. and B. 1011 f. (cf. 1027 ff., 38), is also likely to rest on the common basis of a stereotyped expression. Identity or similarity of phrases is further noted in F. 9^b = B. 1832^b, F. 15^b = B. 2610^b, F. 17^b = B. 2945^b, F. 21^a = B. 2170^a, F. 22^a = B. 2899^b, F. 24^a = B. 343^b, F. 24^b = B. 348^b, F. 25^a = B. 2135^b, 2923^b, F. 27^b = B. 200^b, 645^b, F. 33^b = B. 399^b, F. 35^b = B. 2313^b, F. 37^b = B. 2947^a, 3000^a.

The recurrence of F. 11 — in slightly different form — in Ex. 218: habban heora hlencan, hycgan on ellen (used in a somewhat similar context) need not be construed as direct imitation one way or the other. (Cp. Mald. 4, 128.)

² ten Brink (L. 4.7.549 f.) advanced the theory that the poem was popular among the East Saxons and was written down in Essex in the latter half of the 10th century. Cf. also Binz 185. — Instructive syntactical features are lacking. The repeated use of the pronoun 'this' (and of the adverb 'here') is fully warranted by the occasion. (See also Arch. cxv 182.) Some instances of the personal (and possessive) pronouns are possibly due to the scribe(s) (13, 25, 42); kyra in 15^b is metrically necessary. — The metrical laxity and the occurrence of indirect discourse do not afford sufficient evidence of a late date. Nor can the use of sworn 39 be considered decisive in this connection, since it is merely a guess that its meaning has been influenced by ON. svœinn (cf. Mackie LF. 2.12.267).

NOTES

1-12. Hnæf announces the approach of enemies and arouses his men.

We may picture to ourselves the situation as follows. One of the Danes, who are distrustful of the Frisians, has been watching outside and reports to the king a suspicious gleam of light. Hnæf replies: 'These are signs of nothing else but armed men marching against us.' Then, by bold anticipation, the realities of battle are sketched by the speaker. It is natural to suppose that Hengest is the watcher addressed by the king.

1. næfre at the end of the speech (so first placed by Thorpe) is a little strange; possibly the text is corrupt.

2. On the scansion of Hlēoprode ðā 2^a, see T.C. § 21. — heapogeong. Evidently Hnæf was thought to be much younger than his sister. — Hnæf hlēoprode, heapogeong cyning (cf. Varr.) would be a tempting reading of this line.

3. ðis ne dagað, 'this is not the dawn.' — nē hēr draca ne flēogeð; i.e., a fire-spitting dragon. See Beow. 2312, 2522, 2582; OE. Chron. A.D. 793 (D, E, F); Lied vom Hürnen Seyfrid 18: Die Burg die ward erleuchtet, Als ob sie wer entprant (as a result of the flying of a dragon).

5 f. forþ berað of the MS. can be justified on the assumption that the war equipments specified afterwards are the object of berað (see, e.g., Beow. 291, Ex. 219, Mald. 12) which the poet had in mind but did not take the time to express. [A frankly intrans. use of forþ beran, 'press forward' (Schilling, MLN. i 116 f., Dickins) can hardly be recognized. The supposedly parallel cases of beran üt, El. 45, Andr. 1221 were misunderstood by Gr. Spr. Cf. also Angl. xxvii 407 f.] — The fugelas seem to be the birds of prey (see 34), who gather in expectation of slaughter, as in Gen. 1983 ff., Ex. 162 ff., El. 27 ff., Jud. 206 ff. For other interpretations proposed such as 'arrows,' 'morning birds,' see Bu. Tid. 304 f., Bu. 22 f., Möller 47; Angl. xxviii 447; Boer, ZfdA. xlvi 140 ff.; Rieger, ZfdA. xlvi 9. — græghama, 'the grey-coated one,' i.e. either 'wolf' — the familiar animal of prey, beside raven and eagle, in the regular epic trio, cp., e.g., Brun. 64 — or 'coat of mail' (cp. Beow. 334). gyllan fits both meanings (Rid. 25.3; Andr. 127).

7-9. Now the moon lights up the scene: the tragic fate is inevitable, nū ārisað wēadæda. Thus Hildebrand exclaims: welaga nū . . . wēwurt skihit, Hildebr. 49. þes (mōna) is thoroughly idiomatic, cp. Rid. 58.1: ðeos lyft, Gen. 811: þeos beorhte sunne, etc. (Arch. cxv 182). — under wolcnum; the moon is passing 'under,' i.e., 'behind' the clouds, though not really hidden by them. A stereotyped expression is here put to a fine, picturesque use.

9. ðisne folces nīð fremman, 'carry out this enmity of the people.'

11. For the scansion, see note on Beow. 489 f.

12. Types A₃ and C₁.

13-27. The warriors on both sides make ready for the fight.

13. goldhladen may be meant with reference to helmets, swords, corslets, or (Bu. 24:) bracelets such as Hrólfr's warriors are to use in the last fight for their king: 'load your arms with gold; let your right hands receive the bracelets, that they may swing their blows more heavily' (Saxo ii 64, Par. § 7). [Cf. Olrik-Hollander, The Heroic Legends of Denmark (1919), pp. 121 f.] Note Ruin 33 ff.: beorn monig/glædmōd and gold-beorht wighyrstum scān.

16. æt ðprum durum, scil. 'stood' or 'drew their swords.' The plural durum has singular meaning; cp. 20.

17. and Hengest sylf. Hengest now takes his place inside the hall with the others. (The use of sylf is no indication that he is the king.)

18 ff. Ðā gýt marks the progress of the narrative (which now introduces another fighter): 'further,' 'then.' [Or does gýt denote 'as yet' in conjunction with (and partly anticipating) the negative meaning of the sentence (styrde, ne)?] The Frisian Gūðere tries to restrain the impetuous youth, Gārulf — perhaps his nephew, cp. Nibel. 2208 ff., Waltharius 846 ff. — from risking his life 'at the first onset' (19^a, cp. Beow. 740; or: 'in his first battle?'); but Gārulf, heedless of danger, rushes to one of the doors, encounters the veteran Sigerferþ, and meets a hero's death. There is nothing startling about the fact that Gārulf's father has the same name, Gūðlāf (33), as one of the Danish warriors. (In Maldon occur two persons named Godric, 187: 321, and two named Wulfmær, 113: 155.) Certainly we need not assume that father and son are fighting on opposite sides. See ES. xxxix 308.

20. As to hyrsta (parallel with feorh) beran, see Beow. 291, and note on F. 5 f. (Angl. xxviii 456.)

21. nīþa heard, scil. Sigeferþ.

22. hē, scil. Gārulf. — ofer eal. The neuter eal (in contrast with ealle, Beow. 2899, cp. Gen. 2462, Dan. 527, Sat. 616, etc. [see Arch. civ 291]) includes both the fighters and the scene (and tumult) of fighting. Cp. Mald. 256: ofer eall clypode; also Ælfric, Saints iv 280, xxiii 803.

24. cweþ hē is a parenthetic addition (which during the merely oral existence of such lays was dispensed with). It is to be disregarded metrically. Cf. Rie. V. 58 n.; Heusler, ZfdA. xlvii 245 ff.

27. swæper, 'which one of two things,' i.e. victory or death. Cp. Hildebr. 60 ff.

28-40. The battle rages.

28. on (healle), 'in (the hall)' (cp. 30^b), or 'at,' 'around' (cp. Beow. 2529, 926(?)). — wealle would be metrically more regular.

29. No explanation or really satisfactory emendation of celæs has been found. The conjecture cellod rests on Mald. 283: cellod bord, but the meaning of this nonce word is unknown. (Rieger LF. 2.6: 'concave,' 'curved';

Kluge LF. 2.9: from Lat. celatus; Trautmann LF. 2.10.46: cyllod 'covered with leather'; Grein Spr.: cēlod 'keel-shaped,' 'oval'; B.-T. Suppl.: celod 'having a boss or beak.' See also Varr.

34. hwearflīc (cf. above, p. 226), perhaps = 'agile,' 'active,' or 'obedient,' 'trusty'; cp. Gifts of Men 68: þegn gehworf; Go. gahwairbs 'pliant, obedient.' [According to Mackie, 'mortal,' 'dead,' on the basis of hwearflīc 'fleeting,' Boeth. 25.10 (B). — Cp. ON. hwerfr 'shifting'; OE. Lind. Gosp.: huoerflīce = vicissim.] — hræw, 'body,' not necessarily 'corpse'; cp. Andr. 1031: ær þan hrā crunge (though also walu fēollon, Beow. 1042). — Numerous corrections of this passage have been proposed, see Varr. [Also Hwearfode (or Hwearf(t)lade) arn (= earn, cf. Siev. § 158. 1) would make sense.] — Hræfen wandrode. Cp. Mald. 106: hremmas wundon.

36. swylce eal Finnsburuh fyrenu wære. (Cp. 1 ff.) See the parallels: Uhland, Germ. ii 356, Lünig L 7.28.73 f., 31; also Iliad ii 455 ff.

39 f. See Beow. 2633 ff. and note. For a defense of the 'white mead' see Mackie (ref. to an 18th cent. quotation in the NED.).

41 ff. The Frisians, weakened and unable to make headway, [seem on the point of preparing for a new move. . . .] — As to fif dagas, see Beow. 545 and note on 147.

43 ff. It appears probable that the wounded man who 'goes away' is a Frisian, and folces hyrde, Finn. See Rieger, ZfdA. xlviii 12; for arguments to the contrary, see Bugge 28, Trautmann 62, Boer, ZfdA. xlvii 147. We may imagine a disabled Frisian leaving the front of the battle line and being questioned by his chief as to how the [Danish?] warriors were bearing (or could bear) their wounds.

45^a. Type E. As to the shifting of the stress to the second syllable of unhrōr, cp. Beow. 1756, 2000. — heresceorþum hrōr (see Hickes's text) could refer only to the wund hæleð himself, 43.

48. Bugge (28), taking hwæþer as 'whether,' would supply [hild sweðrode]. If hwæþer is = 'which one,' the missing words might be [hilde gedigde]; the names of the two young fighters were then contained in the following line.

The rest is silence. But the outcome is revealed in the Beowulf Episode.

It has been surmised by Rieger (l.c.) that Finn, anxious to break down the resistance of the besieged at last, orders the hall to be set on fire (as is done, Völsungasaga, ch. 8 and Nibel. 2048 ff.), whereupon the Danes, forced into the open, have to meet the Frisians on equal ground.

§ 6. YNGLINGASAGA.²

Ch. 5. SKJÖLD, the son of Óðinn, wedded her [Gefjon], and they dwelt at Hleiðra. — Ch. 23 (27). (The sea-burial of King Haki.) Now King Haki had gotten such sore hurts, that he saw that the days of his life would not be long; so he let take a swift ship that he had, and lade it with dead men and weapons, and let bring it out to sea, and ship the rudder, and hoist up the sail, and then let lay fire in tarwood, and make a bale aboard. The wind blew offshore, and Haki was come nigh to death, or was verily dead, when he was laid on the bale, and the ship went blazing out into the main sea; and of great fame was that deed for long and long after. — Ch. 27 (31). (The Fall of King Óttarr vendilkráka.) [ÓTTARR (the son of EGILL), king of Sweden, in retaliation for a Danish invasion made in the preceding year (because Óttarr refused to pay the scat promised by Egill), went with his warships to the land of the Danes, while their king Fróði was warring in the East-Countries, and he harried there, and found nought to withstand him.] Now he heard that men were gathered thick in Selund [i.e., Zealand], and he turned west through Eyre-Sound, and then sailed south to Jutland, and lays his keels for Limbfrith, and harries about Vendil, and burns there, and lays the land waste far and wide whereso he came. Vatt [Vottr] and Fasti were Fróði's earls [jarlar] whom he had set to the warding of the land whiles he was away thence; so when these earls heard that the Swede king was harrying in Denmark, they gathered force, and leapt a-shipboard, and sailed south to Limbfrith, and came all unawares upon King Óttarr, and fell to fighting; but the Swedes met them well, and folk fell on either side; but as the folk of the Danes fell, came more in their stead from the country-sides around, and all ships withal were laid to that were at hand. So such end the battle had, that there fell King Óttarr, and the more part of his host. The Danes took his dead body and brought it a-land, and laid it on a certain mound, and there let wild things and common fowl tear the carrion. Withal they made a crow of tree and sent it to Sweden, with this word to the Swedes, that that King Öttarr of theirs was worth but just so much as that; so afterwards men called him Ottarr Vendil-crow [Öttarr vendilkráka]. So says Thiodolf:¹

Fell the great Öttarr,
The doughty of deed,
Before the Dane's weapons:
The glede of war
With bloody foot
At Vendil spurned
The one from afar.

I hear these works
Of Vatt and Fasti
Were set in tale
By Swedish folk:
That Fróði's island's
Earls between them
Fight-upholder.

— Ch. 29 (33). King HELGI, the son of Halfdan, ruled in Hleiðra in those days, and he came to Sweden with so great a host that King Aðils saw nought for it but to flee away. King Helgi fell in battle whenas RÓLF KRAKI was eight winters old, who was straightway holden as king at Hleiðra. King Aðils had mighty strife with a king called ÁLI² the Uplander [Áli inn upplenzki] from out of Norway. King Aðils and King Áli had a battle on the ice of the Vener Lake, and Áli fell there, but Aðils gained the day. Concerning this battle is much told in the Story of the Skjöldungs [í Skjöldunga sögu], and also how Rólf Kraki came to Upsala to Aðils; and that was when Rólf Kraki sowed gold on the Fyris-meads.

II, pp. 38 f.: Dragon Fight of Frotho (I), father of Haldanus. A man of the country met him [FROTHO] and roused his hopes [of obtaining money] by the following strain:⁴ 'Not far off is an island rising in delicate slopes, hiding treasure in its hills and 'ware of its rich booty. Here a noble pile is kept by the occupant of the mount, who is a snake wreathed in coils, doubled in many a fold, and with a tail drawn out in winding whorls, shaking his manifold spirals and shedding venom. If thou wouldst conquer him, thou must use thy shield and stretch thereon bulls' hides, and cover thy body with the skins of kine, nor let thy limbs lie bare to the sharp poison; his slaver burns up what it bespatters. Though the three-forked tongue flicker and leap out of the gaping mouth, and with awful yawn menace ghastly wounds, remember to keep the dauntless temper of thy mind; nor let the point of the jagged tooth trouble thee, nor the starkness of the beast, nor the venom spat from the swift throat. Though the force of his scales spurn thy spears, yet know there is a place under his lowest belly whither thou mayst plunge the blade; aim at this with thy sword, and thou shalt probe the snake to his centre. Thence go fearless up to the hill, drive the mattock, dig and ransack the holes; soon fill thy pouch with treasure, and bring back to the shore thy craft laden.'

Frotho believed, and crossed alone to the island, loth to attack the beast with any stronger escort than that wherewith it was the custom for champions to attack. When it had drunk water and was repairing to its cave, its rough and sharp hide spurned the blow of Frotho's steel. Also the darts that he flung against it rebounded idly, foiling the effort of the thrower. But when the hard back yielded not a whit, he noted the belly heedfully, and its softness gave entrance to the steel. The beast tried to retaliate by biting, but only struck the sharp point of its mouth upon the shield. Then it shot out its flickering tongue again and again, and gasped away life and venom together.¹

The money which the king found made him rich.

[When HARALD HILDETAŃ, king of Denmark, had been slain in the battle of Bravalla,] RING, king of Sweden, harnessed the horse on which he rode to the chariot of the king [Harald], decked it honorably with a golden saddle, and hallowed it in his honor. Then he proclaimed his vows, and added his prayer that Harald would ride on this and outstrip those who shared his death in their journey to Tartarus; and that he would pray Pluto, the lord of Orcus, to grant a calm abode there for friend and foe. Then he raised a pyre, and bade the Danes fling on the gilded chariot¹ of their king as fuel to the fire. And while the flames were burning the body cast upon them, he went round the mourning nobles and earnestly charged them that they should freely give arms, gold, and every precious thing to feed the pyre in honor of so great a king, who had deserved so nobly of them all. He also ordered that the ashes of his body, when it was quite burnt, should be transferred to an urn, taken to Leire [Lethram], and there, together with the horse and armor, receive a royal funeral.

Chs. 17 ff. Boðvar-Bjarkabátr. Summary: Boðvarr is the son of *Björn*²¹ (the son of Hringr, king of Uppdalir in Norway) and Bera,²² a peasant's daughter. Having passed eighteen winters, he leaves Norway, (ch. 23:) visits his eldest brother Elgfróði and his second brother Þórir, who is king of Gauland, and continues on his way to Denmark. He arrives at Hleiðargarðr, goes into King Hrólfr's hall, seats the simple and cowardly Höttr, who is regularly made sport of by the feasters, next to himself, and when one of the men throws a large bone at both of them, returns it with such force as to kill the offender. Whereupon a great outcry is made; but the king settles the matter and even asks Boðvarr to become one of his retainers. Boðvarr accepts the proposal, insisting at the same time that Höttr be allowed to join him.

(68.10 ff.) As the Yule-tide approached, the men seemed greatly depressed. Boðvarr, upon asking the reason, was told by Höttr that about this time in the two preceding winters a great beast had appeared and caused great damage. It was a terrible monster (troll), he said, with wings on its back, and no weapon could injure it. Nor would the king's champions come home at this dreadful time. (68.17:) 'The hall is not as well guarded,' said Boðvarr, 'as I thought, if a beast can deal destruction to the king's domain and property.' On Yule-eve the king commanded his men to leave the cattle to their fate and on no account to expose themselves to danger. But Boðvarr went secretly out at night, taking with him by force the trembling Höttr, and attacked the monster as it approached. At first his sword stuck fast in the sheath, but when he pulled very hard, the sword came out, and he struck it with such strength under the shoulder of the beast, that it 'stood' in its heart. The beast fell down dead. Boðvarr forced his comrade to drink of the blood and eat of the heart of the beast, whereby Hǫttr became strong and fearless. Both then set up the monster as if it were alive and returned to the hall.

In the morning King HRÓLFR found on inquiry that the cattle had been unmolested, and he sent out men to investigate. They quickly returned with the report that at that very moment the monster was charging down upon the hall. When the king called on volunteers to meet the beast, Hǫttr asked him for the loan of his sword Gullinhjalti, and with it he struck at the monster, causing it to fall over. Then the king turned to Bǫðvarr and said: 'A great change has come over Hǫttr; but it was you who slew the beast. I knew when you came here, that few were your equals, but this seems to me your bravest deed that you have made a champion of Hǫttr. From this day he shall be called Hjalti, — you shall be called after the sword Gullinhjalti.'

Ch. 24. (74.2 ff.) Cap. XI. . . . nec dierum numerum, ut nos, sed noctium computant.

Cap. XIII. Insignis nobilitas aut magna patrum merita principis dignationem etiam adulescentulis assignant; ceteris robustioribus ac iam pridem probatis aggregantur. Nec rubor inter comites aspici. Gradus quin etiam ipse comitatus habet iudicio eius quem sectantur; magnaue et comitum aemulatio, quibus primus apud principem suum locus, et principum, cui plurimi et acerrimi comites. Haec dignitas, hae vires, magno semper et electorum iuvenum globo circumdari, in pace decus, in bello praesidium. Nec solum in sua gente cuique, sed apud finitimas quoque civitates id nomen, ea gloria est, si numero ac virtute comitatus emineat; expetuntur enim legationibus et muneribus ornantur et ipsa plerumque fama bella profligant.

Cap. XIV. Cum ventum in aciem, turpe principi virtute vinci, turpe comitatu virtutem principis non adaequare. Iam vero infame in omnem vitam ac probrosum superstitem principi suo ex acie recessisse; illum defendere, tueri, sua quoque fortia facta gloriae eius assignare praecipuum sacramentum est; principes pro victoria pugnant, comites pro principe; exigunt enim principis sui liberalitate illum bellatorem equum, illam cruentam victricemque frameam; nam epulae et quamquam incompti, largi tamen apparatus pro stipendio cedunt.

Cap. XX. Sororum filiis idem apud avunculum qui ad patrem honor.

Cap. XXI. Suscipere tam inimicitias seu patris seu propinqui quam amicitias necesse est; nec implacabiles durant; luitur enim etiam homicidium certo armentorum ac pecorum numero, recipitque satisfactionem universa domus, utiliter in publicum, quia periculosiores sunt inimicitiae iuxta libertatem.

Cap. XXVII. Funerum nulla ambitio: id solum observatur, ut corpora clarorum virorum certis lignis crementur. Struem rogi nec vestibus nec odoribus cumulant; sua cuique arma, quorundam igni et equus adicitur. Sepulcrum caespes erigit; monumentorum arduum et operosum honorem, ut gravem defunctis, aspernantur. Lamenta ac lacrimas cito, dolorem et tristitiam tarde ponunt. Feminis lugere honestum est, viris meminisse.

Cap. XL.² To the Langobardi, on the contrary, their scanty numbers are a distinction. Though surrounded by a host of most powerful tribes, they are safe, not by submitting, but by daring the perils of war. — Next come the Reudigni, the Aviones, the Anglii, the Varini, the Eudoses, the Suardones and Nuithones who are fenced in by rivers or forests. None of these tribes have any noteworthy feature, except their common worship of Nerthus, or mother-Earth, and their belief that she interposes in human affairs, and visits the nations in her car. In an island of the ocean there is a sacred grove, and within it a consecrated chariot, covered over with a garment. Only one priest is permitted to touch it. He can perceive the presence of the goddess in this sacred recess, and walks by her side with the utmost reverence as she is drawn along by heifers. It is a season of rejoicing, and festivity reigns wherever she deigns to go and be received. They do not go to battle or wear arms; every weapon is under lock; peace and quiet are known and welcomed only at these times, till the goddess, weary of human intercourse, is at length restored by the same priest to her temple. Afterwards the car, the vestments, and, if you like to believe it, the divinity herself, are purified in a secret lake. Slaves perform the rite, who are instantly swallowed up by its waters. Hence arises a mysterious terror and a pious ignorance concerning the nature of that which is seen only by men doomed to die.

Cap. XLV. (Aestiorum¹ gentes . . .) matrem deum venerantur; insigne superstitionis formas aprorum gestant; id pro armis omniumque tutela securum deae cultorem etiam inter hostis praestat.

APPENDIX III. TEXTUAL CRITICISM

Note on Certain Grammatical and Metrical Features Bearing on Textual Criticism

No attempt has been made to restore the ancient forms of the poem in accordance with the state of the language of the early eighth century and with the specific dialectal character that may be attributed to the original, nor has it been deemed proper to introduce a uniform, normalized orthography.¹ But certain groups of cases in which the rules of versification appear to require a modification of the transmitted text, have been recognized and will be found specified in the following outline.

A. GRAMMATICAL OBSERVATIONS

1. Contraction.

(§ 1.) a. Dissyllabic forms called for in place of contractions (Siev. R. 475-80, 268 f., A.M. § 76.4; Bülb. §§ 214-16, 529; Morsbach L 4.143.262 ff.; Sarrazin, ESi. xxxviii 172 f.; Richter L 6.6.1.13 ff.; Seiffert L 6.6.2) are marked by a circumflex:² geþêôn 25; têôn 1036; flêôn 820, 1264, 2525 (see T.C. § 24), (tō) bestêônne 1003^a (cp. 1851^a, 257^a, 174^b), perhaps 755 (Richter 11, 14); sêôn 1180, 1275; slêa 681; lÿhð 1048; hêa(n) 116, 1926, 3097; nêan 528, 839; êam 881 (êahâm*, Tr.¹ 174, cf. Holt., Angl. xxxv 165; êhâm*); Hondsciô 2076 (n.; Lang. § 17.3 n.); rêôn 512, 539; ðêôn 2736; Wealhþêôn 629 (otherwise regularly Wealhþêo(w), Ongenþio(w) [cf. also § 2]); orcneás 112; gân 386, 1644, gêð 2034, 2054; dôn 1116, 1172, 1534, 2166, dð 1058, 1134, 2859;³ strêð 2436; frêa(n) 16, 271, 359, 1680, 1883, 1934; likewise sê 682 (Siev. § 427 n. 1; Bülb. § 225), sÿ (= sê) 1831, 2649 (plainly monosyllabic sie 435, sÿ 1941). The diacritics in this, as in the following set of cases, are intended to serve as helps for scansion. They are non-committal as to whether the archetypal forms were something like geþihan, slæ, rêowun, gæð, døð, strêid, frêga, -þeowan; læið (lêið) or læhið (lehîð); sehon (Holthausen, ed.¹) or sehan (Kaluza) or seohan (Rieger) or sêoan (Sieviers); etc.

(§ 2.) b. Redundant inflexional vowels in contracted forms are marked by a dot underneath. Thus fêaum 1081, hrêoum 2581, hêa(um) 2212, Ongenþêoþs 1968 (in 2475^a (oððe him) Ongenðeowes the change to -ðos is unnecessary). Cf. Siev. §§ 110 ff., R. 234, 489 ff., A.M. §§ 76.5, 77.1b; Wright §§ 265 f. (Trautm., ESt. xlv 329 ff.) No diacritic is needed in the exceptional but unambiguous spelling -rēouw 58 (uw indicating the vocalization of w, i.e. -rēou [triphthongal], cf. Zupitza, ZfdA. xxi 10 n. 2).

² This device was used in the edition of The Later Genesis, 1913; cf. MLN. xv 95. Also Chambers in his Beowulf employs this diacritic.

(§ 3.) c. Loss of h after r and before a vowel results in forms of fluctuating vowel quantity (Siev. R. 487 ff., A.M. § 77.1a; Bülb. § 529; Morsbach l.c. 272 f.; Richter, l.c. 9). Forms of feorh: (-)fēore, fēorum 537, 1152, 1293, 1306, 2664, 3013; all the other instances of oblique cases are doubtful, though the probability is in favor of the short vowel in 73, 933, 1843. Forms of meorh: mēaras, mēarum: 855, 865, 917, 1035, 2163; doubtful quantity in mēarum ond mādnum 1048^a, 1898^a, 2166^a.

2. Syncope of medial vowels.

(§ 4.) a. Short medial vowels in open syllables following long stem syllables are frequently to be ignored in the scansion (Siev. R. 459, A.M. § 76.1; cf. Bülb. § 433, Wright § 221). This is indicated by a dot below the vowels: Ælmihtiga 92,¹ geōmōre 151,¹ elþēodige 336, ānigum 793, 2416, ānegum 842, mōðega 813, mōðigan 3011 (cp. mōðges 502), gewealdene 1732; dōgores 219, 605, 2896; dōgore (or dōgor, see Siev. R. 233, 245; Lang. § 20.4) 1797, 2573.

Syncope appears probable in dōgora 88, ānige 972, hāþenes 986, ūrēadigum 2189, nīðhēdige 3165. There are numerous cases in which merely the possibility of syncope is to be admitted.

Doubtful are forms of fæger, since fæger and fāger (so 773) seem to have been used side by side; thus 522: fægere or fāgere (or fægere); see Siev. § 148, R. 498 f. (Cf. below, 3; § 6-8.)

(§ 5.) b. Syncope after short stem syllables (Siev. R. 462 f., Bülb. §§ 438 f.) may have occurred in a number of instances, e.g. in forms of fyren, egesa (glēdegesa grim 2650^a, 2780^b; etc.), Sigemund (875, 884), and the like, but positive metrical proof is not obtainable, with the probable exception of nū is ofost betost 3007^b.² The spelling Hylāces 1530 presupposes a form Hyglāces. See Lang. § 18.10.

3. Forms with vocalic r, l, m, n to be counted as monosyllabic (Siev. §§ 138 ff., R. passim, A.M. § 79.4; Bülb. §§ 440 ff.; Wright § 219; Tr. Kyn. 31 f.; Kal. passim; Holt., ed. passim; Sarrazin, ESt. xxxviii 174 f.; Luick, Vietor-Festschrift (Die Neueren Sprachen, 1910), pp. 260-62; Richter l.c. 9 ff.; Seiffert l.c.) are distinguished by a dot below the secondary vowel. (The same diacritic is used in those few cases in which the suppressed vowel is an original one.)

wundor- 995, 1681, 2173 (wundur-, cf. §§ 7, 19), 3037, sundor- 667, hleator 611^a (type B, cp. 1063^a, 2105^a, 2472^a, 1008^b), morþor- 1079, 2436, 2742, winter 1128, 1132, wuldor- 1136, umbor- 1187^a (and probably 46^b: umborwesende, cp. cnihtwesende 372^b, 535^b, sāwberendra 1004^b, and see Kal. 37, 79), āter- 1459, aldor- 1676, oncer- 1918, baldor 2428, frōfor (probably) 2941.

īren- 998, morgen- 2894. (Cp. the spelling bēcn 3160.)

(§ 7.) Numerous cases remain doubtful. E.g., nāfre hē on aldordagum 718^a, 757^a, iō aldorceare 906^b, ðas morporhetes 1105^a, nalles fācenstafas 1018^b, þæt hē wið attorsceaðan 2839^a, ymb aldor Dena 668^a, þā wæs wundor micel 771^a, þæt wæs tācen sweotol 833^b, ðā wæs winter scacen 1136^b, þeah þæt wāpen duge 1660^b (either type B or C). Again, wolde on heolster flēon 755^b, searowundor sēon 920^a, nīðwundor sēon 1365^b (flēon? sēon?). Further, wāpen hafenade 1573^b (wāpen clearly dissyllabic in 685^a), wundor scāwian 840^b, 3032^b (cf. § 20), ceasterbūendum 768^a (perhaps ceaster-, cp. foldbūende 1355^a, grundbūendra 1006^a; Kal. 36); cf. Fuhr L 8.6.48 f. The monosyllabic function is rather probable in beorht bēacen Godes 570^a (cp. swutol sang scopes 90^a); wīn of wunderfatum 1162^a; wōm wundorbebodum 1747^a; wundorlic wāgborā 1440^a (cp. lōflic lindwiga 2603^a, egeslic eorðdraca 2825^a); it is by no means impossible in Ongendōies bearn (type E) 2387^b (see also § 2). On wrātilicne wundurmāððum 2173^a, see § 19.

(§ 8.) b. Short stems.

The only decisive cases are snotor 190^b¹ (Siev., Fuhr l.c. 86, Trautm.: snottor) and mēðel- 1082^b¹ (Trautm., Est. xliv 339: older mēðla-). The spellings efn 2903, seil 2013 may be noted. (wæter is clearly dissyllabic: 509, 1904, 1989, 2473.)²

Note. As a rule, the textual improvements cited in the foregoing sections, being of a generic character, are not included in the variant readings. It should be understood that practically all of them are due to Sievers and his example.

4. Variant Forms.

The two forms are found side by side; nōsan (nōsan): 125, 1786, 1791, 1806, 2074, 2366, 2388; nōsian (nōsian): 2486 (nōsað), 1125, 2671, 3045, 115. In no case is a change to nōsan (Siev. R. 233, 271) really obligatory. See below, § 20. L. 115^a, gewāt ðā nōsian may be scanned like 2569^a, gewāt ðā byrnende (type C).

(§ 10.) b. (ge)trēowan and (ge)trūwian.

Cf. Siev. § 416 n. 17, R. 233 f., 298, 486; Cosijn, Altwests. Gra. ii § 120; Wright §§ 131, 538 n. The MS. has trēowde in 1166^b only. The form trūwode is metrically unexceptional (type C2) in 1095^a: ðā hie getrūwedon, but objectionable in 1533^b: strengre getrūwode, 1993^b, 2322^b, 2370^b, 2540^b, 2953^b. In the six latter cases (ge)trēowde or (ge)trū(w)de (or, with Tr.¹ 162, ESt. xlv 336, (ge)truwode) would satisfy the metrical requirements; the spelling (ge)trūwode has been used in the text. L. 669^b georne trūwode, though perhaps permissible (see § 20), has been treated in the same way.

Cf. Siev. § 341 n. 4, R. 485; Tr. Kyn. 84. gehwām: 1365^a þær mæg nihta gehwām; — gehwære: 25^a in mægþa gehwære (metrically above criticism). See also Gloss.: gehwā.

The inflected is to be changed to the uninflected form (see 316^a, 2556^a; Siev. R. 255, 312, 482) in 1724^b; probably also in 473^a; possibly in 1941^a, 2093^a, 2562^a, though the latter lines may be scanned as 'D expanded' (see § 19).

(§ 13.) e. ymb (originally preposition and prefix) and ymbe (originally adverb). (Cf. Intr. xciii.)

ymb need not be restored in place of ymbe (preposition: 2070, 2618, 2883, 3169, prefix: 2734^a ymbesittendra, cp. ymbesittend 1827^a, 9^b) except possibly (so Siev. R. 258, 260) in ll. 2296^b: hlæw oft ymbehwearf, 2691^b: heals ealne ymbefēng (cf., however, e.g. 603^b, 2420^b). In ymbe gestōdon 2597^b the adverbial form is properly used.

The normal forms are hilde + $\frac{1}{-}$ or $\frac{1}{-}$ × (e.g., hilderinc, hildestrengo), and hild + $\frac{1}{\times}$ (e.g., hildfruma), see Weyhe, Beitr. xxx 79 ff. The emendation of the only exception hearde hildfrecan 2205^a to hildfrecan results in metrical improvement (Siev. R. 305, Weyhe, l.c.).

hraþe is established by alliteration in 356, 543, 963, 991, 1576, 1914, 1937; so is raþe in 724 (MS. raþe) and in 1390, 1975 (MS. hraþe; in this edition hraþe). See Gloss. Cf. Siev. § 217 n. 1.

(§ 16.) NOTE. It will be seen that the compromise scheme adopted in this edition precludes grammatical consistency. But obvious mistakes have been corrected, of course. It seemed advisable, e.g., to emend forms like sole 302 to sāle, heaþorames 519 to Heaþo-Rāmas, frecnen 1104 to frēcnan, reafeden 1212 to rēafedon, æniġre 949 to nānigra, gehedde 505 to gehēde, etc., since the exceptional spellings are isolated in the MS. (e.g., the ending -es for -as is found nowhere else) or are easily accounted for by erroneous association (c.g., gehedde taken for the preterite of gehēdan) or by the influence of neighboring syllables (frecnen; seomode onsole).

B. METRICAL OBSERVATIONS ¹

1. Rare Rhythmical Types.

Certain varieties of types, though not of frequent occurrence, have been considered sufficiently warranted to be left unaltered in the text.

(§ 17.) a. Type A admits in the second foot a short stressed syllable: ² $\acute{\text{—}} \times | \acute{\text{—}} \times$, a variety not restricted to cases like wyrd oft nered, gūdrinc monig. See Siev. R. 453 f., 458, A.M. § 85.1; Fuhr 83 f.; Tupper's Riddles, p. lx, n.; also Holt., Angl. xxxv 167 f.

Thus in b-lines: Hrunting nama 1457^b, æþeling manig 1112^b, hwilum dydon 1828^b (cf. Lang. § 23.6); 1807^b, 2430^b, 2457^b, 3135^b. (Siev. R. 231.)

In a-lines: hlæw on [h]liðe 3157^a (Siev. R. 275); nīða ofercumen 845^a, dædum gefremed 954^a (cf. Siev. R. 312, Kal. 72). — Type A₃ (Siev. A.M. § 85 n. 5; Fuhr 25 f.): hwilum hē on lufan 1728^a; wæs min fæder 262^a, þone þin fæder 2048^a; geslōh þin fæder (with anacrusis) 459^a;³ perhaps þær him nænig water 1514^a (cp. 157^a), 779^a(?), see § 18.

(§ 18.) b. Type B with alliteration on the second stress only is occasionally met with (in a-lines). See Siev. A.M. § 85.3.

Possible cases are 459^a, 1514^a (see § 17); a probable case: þæt hit ā mid gemete 779^a (with transverse alliteration); a clear case: hē is manna gehyld 3056^a. There are two undoubted examples in Finnsb., 22^a, 46^a.

(§ 19.) c. Type Dx (D expanded) (in a-lines) admits in the first foot two syllables ($\times \times$ or $\acute{\text{—}} \times$) after the stressed syllable. Cf. Deutschbein L 8.22.33.

Thus, deorc ofer dryhtgumum 1790^a, eahodan eorlscipe 3173^a, word wæron wynsume 612^a (cp. 1919^a); sellice sǣdracan 1426^a; fyrðsearu fūslicu 232^a (no call for fūslic (as in 2618^a)); wrætlicne wundurmǣddum 2173^a (though possibly hypermetrical [Sievers, Richter]). And see § 12.

Double alliteration in Dx is the rule, but there are exceptions, viz. 768^a, 913^a, 1675^a, 1871^a, 2440^a, 2734^a, 3045^a, which, it is true, could easily be brought into harmony with the majority (ceaster-, ēþel, þeodæn, brōðor, ymb-, niosan).

(§ 20.) d. Type Dx is found several times also in the second half of the line (cf. Siev. R. 255, A.M. § 84.7; Fuhr 49; Kal. 56): dohtor Hrōðgāres 2020^b (see Wids. 98; no need of dohtor), Bēowulf Scyldinga 53^b (no need of Bēow or Scylding), oftost wisode 1663^b (no need of oft), dēad is Æschere

² There occur several very doubtful instances of a short stressed syllable in the first foot, i.e., $\acute{\text{—}} \times | \acute{\text{—}} \times$: kyning mǣnan 3171^b, bea(du)weorces 2299^a, and, according to Griemb. 750, meoduscencum 1980^b, hagustealdra 1889^a(?).

Thus it would hardly be necessary on metrical grounds alone to change egsode eorl 6^a to egsode eorlas (although corresponding forms of weak verbs 2. are elsewhere followed by $\acute{\text{—}} \text{×}$, $\acute{\text{—}} \text{—}$, or (2085^a;) $\acute{\text{—}} \text{×} \text{—}$ [i.e., type A]: 560^a, 922^a, 1118^a, 1161^a, 2096^a, 2119^a, 2132^a, 2702^a, 105^b, 1137^b, 1699^b, 1105^b; on 3173^a, see § 19). Cf. Kock 219 f., Angl. xxviii 140 f.; Siev. xxix 560 ff.; Huguenin L 8.20.28 n.; Kal. 70, 97; Graz, Die Metrik der sog. Caddmonschen Dichtungen (1894), passim. Close parallels from other poems are hlēoþrode 3ā, Finnsb. 2^a, lylligan est, Gen. 1413^a, ib. 2357^a, blēisige þec, Az. 73^a, cp. Gen. 180^a, El. 394^a, 1259^a, Jul. 688^a, Chr. 469^a.¹ On lādlicu lāc, Beow. 1584^a, see Siev. R. 504, A.M. § 84 n. 5, xxix 568; Tr. Kyn. 78, ESi. xlv 341; on irena cyst 673^a, 1697^a, see note to l. 673^a.

(§ 22.) f. It is very doubtful whether catalectic measures should be allowed. See Siev. A.M. § 180; Vetter, Zum Muspilli etc. (1872), p. 33; Cosijn (& Sievers), Beitr. xix 441 f.; Trautm., Bonn. B. xxiii 140. Interesting cases in question are gegnum för 1404^b, lissa gelong 2150^a, rāhte ongēan 747^b (was ēa, by analogy, treated as ēā, cf. slēā, sēōn, etc.?). Similarly incomplete first feet: hægstealdra 1889^a; secg betsta 947^a, 1759^a, ðegn betstan 1871^b. See § 17 & first footnote.

2. Anacrusis (cf. Siev. A.M. § 83 and the references given there) has been considered permissible within the following limits.

(§ 23.) Type A. a. In the a-line: monosyllabic and dissyllabic. Instances of the latter are: 109^a, 1011^a, 1248^a, 1563^a, 1711^a, and 368^a: hý on wíggētāwum. In 2636^a þæt wē him 3ā gūðgetāwa the emendation -geatwa has been adopted. The scansion of 2475^a is doubtful (type A or B).

b. In the b-line: monosyllabic. There are eight incontestable cases: 93^b, 666^b, 1223^b, 1504^b, 1773^b, 1877^b, 2247^b, 2592^b; see also 2481^b.

b. In the b-line anacrusis was studiously avoided. Hence, þā secg wīsode 402^b, and especially þāra ymbsittendra 9^b are emended by dropping þā, and þāra (the latter being also syntactically faulty).

3. Elision.

(§ 25.) Elision is not marked in the text, since it admits of no positive proof. Cf. Schubert L 8.1.47 f.; Siev. R. passim, A.M. § 79.5; Fuhr 47 f.; Kaluza passim.

Highly probable cases are, e.g., 469^b, 517^b, 609^b, 433^a, 471^a, 525^a, etc. — In several places it appears that an elision-vowel is dropped in the MS.; this is indicated in the text by an apostrophe. Thus wēn' ic 338^a, 442^a (wēne ic occurs in 525^a, 1184^a); cotonweard' ābēad 668^b; firen' ondrysne 1932^b; sibb' āfre 2600^b. — egl unhōoru 987^a is more likely a haplographic oversight (originally: eglu).

4. Irregularities of Alliteration.

(§ 26.) a. A finite verb (in the a-line) followed by a noun or adjective alliterates alone: gemunde þā se gōða 758^a; gefēng þā be eaxle 1537^a. (Cf. Rie. V. 24, 43; Siev. A.M. § 24.3.) On the alliterating imperative in 489^b, see note on 489 f.

(§ 27.) b. A finite verb takes precedence (in alliteration) over an infinitive in 1728^b: (hwīlum hē on lufan) lāteð hworfan. (Cf. Rie. V. 25.) — The second of the stressed syllables in the b-line alliterates in 2615: (brūnfāgne helm,) hringde byrnan. (Cp. Finnsb. 28^b, 41^b.)

Both cases may be justified by the employment of transverse alliteration.

(§ 28.) c. Double alliteration in the b-line. Cf. Bu. Tid. 63 f.; Rie. V. 8-10; Siev. A.M. § 21 c.

a) Only apparently in 1251^b, 1351^b.

b) Cases to be remedied by fairly certain emendation: ðā was heal hroden 1151^b (roden); hilde gehnægdon 2916^b (genægdon);¹ in cōwrum gūðgeatawum 395^b (-searwum; the scribe may have had in mind (wig)getāwum of 368^a; cf. Schröder, ZfdA. xliii 365).²

c) þæt ic mid sweorde ofslōh 574^b looks like a real exception. A scribal substitution of a synonym (ofslōh for ābrēat, Holt.) is not so easily accounted for in this case as in 395^b or in 965^a (hand for mund), 1073^b (hild for lind), cp. 2298^b.

For the convenience of students a list of Sievers's rhythmical types (with some slight modification of the numbering) is appended.

² Incidentally, Schröder (L 8.18) observes that either the first or both elements of compounds alliterate, never the second alone. This rule is applied to textual criticism in 445, 707, 1224, 2220. — For the two instances of unstressed prefix an-, see note on 1756^a.

GLOSSARY

The order of words is strictly alphabetical, æ coming between ad and af; but ð (as well as þ) follows t, and the prefix ge- of verbs has been disregarded in the arrangement (e.g., ge-bæran follows bær). Roman numerals indicate the class of ablaut verbs; w 1., etc., that of the weak verbs; rd., the reduplicating, prp., the preterite-present, anv., the so-called anomalous verbs; mī., mja., mc., etc. denote masc. i-, ja-, consonant-stems, etc.; nouns in -o, -u designated as wk.f. are old fem. abstract nouns in -in, see Wright § 382, Siev. § 279.

When no form of a word is given before a reference, the head-word is to be supplied (the nom. sing. of nouns and the nom. sing. masc. of adjectives being understood unless indicated otherwise); ~ signifies the same word(s) as cited before; e.g., s.v. ā-bregdan: āp ~ = āp ā-bregdan. Each designation of mood and tense applies to all citations that follow until another designation is used. The indicative mood of verb forms is understood unless indicated otherwise. In the case of variant forms of a word the one most frequently used in the text is generally chosen as the head-word.

Textual changes by emendation are marked by italicizing (the form or line-number); editorial additions to the text are marked by square brackets wherever conveniently possible. References to words of The Fight at Finnsburg (marked 'F.') are added within square brackets.

The dagger, †, designates words (or meanings) found in poetry only; the double dagger, ††, words not elsewhere found in poetry (or prose); (†) is used when the word is incidentally found in prose (in Glosses or elsewhere) or when closely related words are recorded in prose; (†) is used when closely related words occur in other poetical texts or in prose, (†) + when the word, not elsewhere found in poetry, occurs in prose also, and (†) (+) when such a use in prose appears to be quite exceptional. In the absence of a complete lexicographical record of OE. prose, it is true, certainty cannot always be attained in these distinctions.

Spaced small capital letters indicate direct modern representatives, slight dialectal differences and similar variations being disregarded. Ordinary small capitals designate related words (or parts of words), also those adopted (directly or indirectly) from a cognate language.

Cpd(s). signifies compounds (including 'derivatives'); ref., referring, or reference (to); s.b., somebody; si., similar(ly); s.t., sometimes; s.th., something; — (n.) calls attention to a note on the line.
